On seeing their youthful bodies they are immersed in their love (drowned in the well, of love) while the lovable fairies are fully enamoured in their love and are struck with the arrows of their sexual attraction. (367)

The fairies (nymphs) are fully enamoured in the love of young warriors on seeing their youthfull bodies, while the music is going on. (368)

The beautiful women, being possessed by their sexual behaviour, are dancing around. Being enamoured by the brave warriors, the fairies are getting married to them. (369)

The king of Sambhal, being enraged, has transformed himself into a dreadful pose of death (destinction) with great rage he has launched an attack and has advanced forward. (370)

The warriors are advancing being enraged, and the horses are bouncing around in the battle field. The warriors are engaged in fighting, and the (devilish) evil spirits are getting elated. (371)

The brave soldiers are being killed, as the weaklings are running away from the field. The King has launched the attack, while the deadly music is being played. (indicating death). (372)

By the dancing fairies the musical instruments are breaking up. Sparks are seen from the firing guns. The warriors, struck by the arrows, are seen running away from the battle field. (373)

The swords are broken down, and many warriors are lying down (being wounded) while many arms are broken down and littered around. All the warriors, engrossed in fighting, have been killed, except the Raja, who is left alive. (375)

Pankaj Batika Chhand

With the killing of his whole army, the king was feeling restless. Becoming madly affected with this situation, the Raja launched an attack and came forward. Being fully armed, the Raja was greatly enraged and with great rage he stood fast in his forward position. (376)

Then he attacked by making use of many weapons. He got enraged in the fighting by making use of the remnant forces. Many millions of drums started beating. Those warriors, were engaged in fighting, were seen falling down in the battle field. (377)

Chachri Chhand

By collecting all the brave warriors, and being armed with various arms and protective measures, with great rage they launched an attack in great earnest. They stretch their bows upto their ears and then shoot the arrows. The warriors are falling down while fighting against the enemy but do not show any attempt at with-drawing from the battle field. (378)

Taking the arrows in their hands, the warriors, getting enraged, are advancing in the battle field. The Raja then picked up some of the brave warriors and they continued the fight without any hesitation, and are striking at the enemy without any reservation. Their limbs are getting broken and falling down on the ground, but they do not run away from the field. (379)

They are stretching their bows and taking an aim at the enemy target, they are shooting their arrows. With the striking of the arrows at the aimed target. The warriors at the other end lies down calmly (being wounded), while the striker puts (fixes) another arrow in his bow with great hope with the arrow striking and wounding the enemy, the warrior gets further excited. Many of the brave soldiers, on being wounded are running away from the battle field. (380)

Many warriors forgetting about the knowledge, (of the fighting) and searching for the enemy, while some brave soldiers, being enraged, are shooting their arrows with vengiance. The warrior, on losing his limbs, falls down on the ground. Without any hesitation, the warriors are engrossed in the fighting in the battle field, and are drenched in blood fully. (381)

The warriors come running with great rage, and then unsheath their swords. By making noise, and fixing the arrows in the bows, they completely destroy the enemy. They are prepared to lose their lives, but do not run away from the battle field, as they shine only in the battle ground. The fairies are getting enamoured on perceving their beauty and the splendour of their faces. (382)

The brave warriors are roaring aloud while holding their unsheathed Swords, and do not run away (from the battle field). The warriors strike their Swords by getting enraged and, forgetting their intelligent thinking. They proceed to heavens on being wounded, having fought in the battle field. Then they sing the songs of victory as per their family traditions. (383)

Naraj Chhand

All the warriors, getting armed with weapons, are heading towards the battle ground with great zeal and pride. They face death while fighting in the battle, and then proceed to the heavens. The obstinate warriors face with courage taking wounds in their stride and do not step back wards at all, rather the obstinate warriors always march towards forward side only, making progress. (384)

All the warriors getting further enraged greatly, are moving forward with great speed and fully engrossed in anger/pride. They attack by collecting their arms and protective measures. The obstinate brave soldiers do not rush back, rather they roar loudly and strike at the enemy without any reservation. (385)

Various musical instruments like mirdung, drums, flute, duff and jhanjh etc. are being played. The brave ones, by putting their feet down, roar loudly being enraged. The brave obstinate soldiers, with great thought (preparations) getting involved fully, are engrossed in fighting. With the use of the arms, and the hooves of the horses make such a dusty atmosphere, that it causes darkness all around, so that one cannot make out various directions easily. (386)

The lion of the goddess, (the invincible lion) is causing deaths of enemy forces by striking at them, with gusto (by running against them). The ocean of August Rishi (mendicant August) is devouring the enemy forces, being thirsty. After killing the army commander, they are roaring near the king. A Great fierce battle is going on, and many arms are being struck in the fighting. (387)

The Kalki (avtar) on arrival there, had killed many of the chariots, horses and elephants of the king. At places, the baggage of the Rajas are strewn around, while at other places, the beautiful horses are let loose, braying freely around in the battle field. The crowns of Rajas are also fallen on the ground, or at places grand elephants are lying dead, while at places the warriors are holding to the hair of the enemy soldiers. The arrows of Kalki Incarnation are shot like the wind (speed of wind), which has disturbed and staggered the enemy forces like the clouds spread out. (388)

The bigger warriors getting enraged, made an attack, and they carry their arrows, bows, Swords and other arms with the them. They are striking with their patis, axes, spears with iron handles, on all the four sides being enraged, and with great care. The bodies and heads of the elephants are lying on the ground in the battle field, while large sized elephants are finding a prominent place in the battle field. It seemed as if during the battle between Ram and Ravan. Hanuman had dislodged a huge mountain. (389)

The multi-coloured army had appeared on the battle field with great zeal, and they have launched an attack on Kalki with a band of elephants, while obstinate warriors have responded with great rage, and are cutting apart everything with their hands only, without taking any backward steps. Kalki has armed himself with arrows, bow and sword etc. on his body. The god, Kalki drenched in blood, was looking grand in his appearance as if he were playing holi at the end of the month of phagun (December). (390)

Kalki Incarnation, in great rage, having held the attack of the enemy, has taken up his arms in the hands. Within no time (in one moment) having thrust himself in the midst of the enemy forces, Kalki has killed all of them. The Kalki Incarnation in the form of a beautiful sword, and capable of appearing splendid in his personality, had attacked the enemy with great force, while the brave soldiers have accepted him as a beautiful warrior. The poet has thought of his grandeur in his mind (heart) as if the woman-like battle field was embellished with (gold) ornaments. (making it a beautiful sight). (391)

Kalki had launched this attack with great zeal, while arming himself with many arms on his body. Many musical instruments like mirdung, taal, upang amd nucchang etc. were being played and the music had filled the whole worldly atmosphere and it had disturbed the meditation posture of Shiva even. Both the gods and demons have run away from their positions, when the Kalki Incarnation roared with a high noted war-cry, having been enraged, in the battle ground. (392)

The horses have been killed, and great elephants have also been put to death, even the kings have been thrown in the battle field, having been killed. The Sumer mountain, having heard this noises, has been thrust into the ground (Earth), being disturbed. All the gods and demons have been shaken up (with this noise). All the rivers, along with the seven seas, have dried up. Even the Earth and heavens have been trembling with this situationm. All the (guards) protectors have gone to sleep, while Kalki avtar, being greatly enraged, may attack anyone of them, (who knows ?) (393)

The obstinate warriors, having taking care to safeguard their arrows and bows, have killed many of the enemy ranks (soldiers) with great effort. Somewhere the arms, heads or legs are lying in the battle ground. The sword has rendered everyone like a straw. Somewhere horses, large elephants, or camels, flags and chariots are lying upside down, as Kalki has (broken) pierced through them. It appears as if the battle field is like a garden, where Shiva had come to see its (wonderful) sight. (394)

The enemy kings with their mighty vanity and pride were running away in all four directions, and could not be encircled. Some young warriors, carrying arrows, Swords, heavy maces, lances etc, are moving around with lot of zeal. The enemy kings have attacked clever Kalki Incarnation, God's representative, having long arms extending upto the knees, with great pride and hopes, and have never turned back from the field. Some of the kings, facing death in the battle field. Having died fighting in the field and having won the honour of a martyr and having fought a battle with the Kalki avtar, some of the warriors have crossed the ocean of life successfully. (395)

The elephants are drenched in the colour of the rainbow, and a continuous flow of blood is flowing from their headgear. Somewhere the horses are fallen down, and somewhere the kings warriors have become fully elastic in behaviour. Kalki has played (magic) havoc with his sword, and with vengeance due to his rage. The warriors are fighting in the battle as if thay are giving a performance of gidha on the Earth. They may fall down while fighting but would not step backwards. It appears as if at the end of the month of Phagun (December) after playing holi, the monsters are sleeping having consumed bhang (drug). (396)

All the warriors, who remained alive, made another great effort with great zeal, and launched an attack on Kalki (Incarnation) from all the four directions with the help of arrows, bows, maces, spears and swords etc. and other arms they came brandishing such weapons. By striking the horses with whips, they had penetrated the battle-field and spread all over the field like the clouds of Savan (rainy season). The Kalki Incarnation, holding a sword in hand, killed many of these warriors, while many others managed to run away. (397)

With the onslaught of Kalki, which could make the enemy unconscious (completely mauled) the enemy soldiers ran away from the battle field leaving behind their weapons even. By removing their uniforms (clothes) and protective coats of arms. the warriors ran away from the battle ground and not even a single soldier was left in the battle ground. The Kalki avtar, having armed himself with various weapons, appeared in the field so fiercely that the three regions, viz Earth skies and nether lands all were wonder struck. By seeing this beautiful scene, both the gods and demons felt ashamed. (398)

Perceiving the enemy forces running away from the battle ground, the Kalki Incarnation took up his arms in the hands, and with the help of arrows, bow, sword and mace, completely destroyed the enemy forces. Infact the warriors were made to run away from the battle field just as the leaves are seen falling from the trees with the gust of winds. The Sword of Kalki avtar was struck with such a force that no one had the courage to face it, and finally all of them ran away from the battle ground leaving behind their arrows. (399)

Supiriya Chhand

At places the warriors are shouting 'Kill them, Kill them' while at other places, they were running away being fully in pain and shouting for help. Many of the warriors are subduing the enemy ranks, while many others have faced death while fighting, whom the fairies are (marrying) taking to heavens. (400)

At places, the warriors are shooting arrows, while at other places some warriors, in pain, are running away from the field. Some warriors, being free from the fear of enemy, are facing and killing the enemy, are facing and killing the enemy in the battle field. Many warriors, getting enraged, are shouting, kill them with their (mouth) voice. (401)

Many of the Kashatriyas, being cut into pieces with the striking of Swords, are falling down on the ground, while some of them, out of fear, are running away from the field. Some warriors are engrossed in the fighting without any hesitation (fear), and proceed to heavens. (facing death). (402)

Some warriors have faced death by fighting in the battle ; while many others have withdrawn themselves from the worldly affairs. Many others are striking with the spears and the limbs of the warriors are falling down, being cut away in fighting. (403)

Bisunkh Chhand

All the warriors, forgetting about their prestige (honour) and having their weapons, were running away from the battle-front. The King of evil spirits, demons and pisaches was dancing there. The god and demons were both watching the great battle. Who could describe the full version of this battle ? This battle was raging like the earlier battle fought between Arjuna and king karan. (404)

The great warriors are obstinate, and are making use of various war tactics with great rage.
They are filled with anger as if they are like the kilu fire. Fully engaged (warriors) Kashatriyas are using their weapons. They do not try to run away (from the field), and are shooting to kill the enemy with their feet fully settled there. (405)

This is how the grand army is engaged in fighting, while the fighter type youths, getting enraged, are launching an attack. The brave warriors roar loudly and are shooting their arrows. A terrible sound is produced thus, on hearing which the weaklings are trying to run away. (420)

The youth, with healthy and robust-bodies are launching an attack in great rage. They are unsheating their swords and are brandishing their bayonets (rapers) while the brave soldiers are continuing fighting with vengeance. It appears as if the mountains are in sight for bringing grand stones for constructing the bridge. (to enter Lanka). (421)

The limbs are being cut away, while the blood is oozing (drpping) out of the wounds. The warriors are engaged in a decisive war, and are fighting with great zeal. The sidhas (mendicants) are watching the battle, and all the people around are praising the warriors engrossed in fighting. (422)

Shiva himself is engaged in a horrible dance, and a terrible type of ankle-drum is being played. The deadly queen (Kali) is making a necklace of the skulls, whose eyes are very smart and fire is bursting out of her mouth. (423)

Rasaval Chhand

The musical instruments, making strong tunes, were being played on hearing which even the clouds were feeling belittled. The Kashatriya youth were engrossed in fighting against some enemy ranks, and were shooting arrows with wings (flying arrows) with strength. (424)

The limbs of the warriors, being cut away, are falling on the ground in bits and pieces. The brave soldiers were dancing in the battle field, being involved therein with enjoyment. The swords, ready to draw blood from human bodies, were unsheathed, seeing which the warriors were more keenly engrossed (doubly) in fighting. (425)

A terrible battle was being fought which nobody had imagined. All the warriors (Rajas) who had earlier even subdued deadly warriors, were seen running away from the battle field. (426)

Shiva is also dancing around, as he is collecting skulls from the battle. There is anger reigning in all the ten directions, as a fierce battle is raging all around. (435)

Then the warriors have deserted the battle ground and have stepped backwards by two steps, and then suddenly return with vengeance like the snake, which recoils backwards suddenly with rage. (436)

They have started fighting once again, and great many arrows have been shot. The brave soldiers shoot arrows as if sudden death had dawned with force. (437)

All the Sidhas are watching the fun (battle) and are writing praises for the Kalki Incarnation. They are raising voices (songs) in praise of Kalki seeing which the weaklings are trembling. (438)

Naraj Chhand

The brave soldiers, taking aim of their arrows, are advancing forward, and face death being engrossed in fighting. They attain the company of the fairies. The godly women, being interested in the young soldiers, marry them, and select the warriors of their own choice, who are still conscious, and clasp their hands. (439)

The armed youth, with great excitement and effort launch an attack by coming face to face against the enemy. By making critical remarks and taking an aim at the enemy the warriors kill the enemy ranks. They continue fighting in the battle field and finally fall down on the ground, while obstinate soldiers continue fighting without any reservations. By amassing their soldiers, they launch an attack on a unattended side (corner) unawares. (440)

The Raja of Sambhal had got enraged, a drum beat of high note has been sounded, and the elephants have been let loose for an attack, while the warriors have got involved in fighting. (441)

The kettle-drums have been sounded, and the warriors are shouting to kill the enemy. (kill them, kill them). The warriors drenched in blood, are falling down, and there is double the zeal among the brave soldiers. (442)

The (mendicants) Sidhas, on watching the battle, are laughing. Even great warriors are running away, and the arrows are being shot around, while the (Young) brave soldiers are engaged in fighting. (443)

The arrows are being shot with a hissing sound and the flags are fluttering around. The musical instruments are being played. The army has been ordered to return. (444)

The weaklings are trembling ; and the beleagured ones are shouting sounds of repentance. (Not again, Not again), and are running away quickly, though they are feeling ashamed at heart. (445)

Kalika Incarnation has let the Sambhal Raja go away (forgiven him), while his army is running away. The arrows are being shot, which have blocked the various passages. (to escape). (446)

The flowers are being showered, and the residents of Sambhal have heaved a sigh of relief (their hardships are over). The Raja has been killed, and the Kalki Incarnation appears to be fully enraged. (in great anger). (448)

They are all shouting praises of the Kalki avtar. (pouring praises). The Sidhas have made poems of praises for Kalki avtar. (449)

People are singing songs of praise. (Kabits). Many of the servants (menials) are running ; as for them a view of Kalki avtar is like a pilgrimage, while the young fairies are dancing around. (450)

Padhri Chhand

Finally the Sambhal Raja was killed, and the drums or kettle–drums are being sounded (beaten) in a prescribed manner. Some of the warriors, out of fear, are running away from the battle-ground. Being completely dejected, they have given up their arms. (451)

The gods are showering flowers (over Kalki) and wherever possible, as per their gods, people are engaged in performing Yagnas. They are involved in the worship of the horrible looking goddess. All the functions have been completed (carried out) successfully. (452)

Innumerable beggars are receiving their charities, and everywhere people are singing praises of Kalki Incarnation. In the Country everywhere Charities, Yagnas, religions fervours are performed and how Yagnas are being performed as per Vedic rites.(453)

People are worshipping the all powerful goddess. The mahants have stopped all their formal and wasteful activities. Large flags are fluttering over all temples. Religion is being preached by killing foolish warriors. (454)

Here the victory of Kalki avtar in Bachittar Natak is Completed, alongwith the version of the death of 'Sambhal Raja' from the first Chapter (is completed). All is well so far. (1)

Rasaval Chhand

The Raja of Sambhal had been killed, and a wave of religious fervour has spread throughout the fourteen regions. (whole area). The worship of the (Sri Kaal) Lord has started again. (455)

Thus the whole country had been won over. The Kalki Incarnation, getting enraged, has launched an attack, having called in the whole army, with anger in his eyes. (with eyes red with blood). (456)

The Victory-drum had been sounded, and a pillar had been installed in the battle-ground. The army is marching with great zeal, while the whole area is trembling (with fear). (457)

The whole area is shaken up just as a boat gets shaken up in the river, while the warriors are in high spirits. The sky is over cast with the dust raised with the thumping of feet. (458)

The kings with canopies are getting restless with anger, and they have gathered a huge army. They are going to launch an attack on Kalki Avtar just as Vitasur had invaded king Inder earlier. (459)

The whole army is looking grand. Who could describe its grandeur. The army is marching with all the armour being displayed, while the victory music is being played. (460)

Bhujang prayat Chhand

All the gakhars and Pakhars, who were wearing (wielding) Swords, had been won over. The warriors of Pakhar, Bhakhar, and Kandhar have been killed. The gazis of Gurjitstan Raj, the Roomi warriors of great valour, had been killed, while the powerful young soldiers have fallen down on the ground feeling dazed. (461)

The warriors of Kabul, the grand brave soldiers of Babur's country had also been killed. The unflinching youth of Kandhar, Hirat and Iraq, including grand soldiers of Balkh area, and the obstinate warriors of Rome are trying to run away, being terrified (of Kalki) while their armour has given way (loosened) under threat of death. (462)

They have given up their arms and protective coats of mail, and have dressed up like women. Thus the (weak) patient soldiers, feeling ashamed, are leaving their country. The gazis, riders of elephants, and horse riders and owners of chariots or kings have been divested of their kingdoms. The warriors have given up their courage, with their bodies completely disabled. (463)

The soldiers of Habash area, and Halab areas, or Kok bunder (Maharashtra) are running away. The soldiers of Barbar (forest area), residents of armenia area are leaving their country are running away. There brave one soldier had taken out a bloody spear (Khanda) and his horse is dancing in between the two forces. (464)

The warriors have accepted Kalki as a great fighter in the battle ground and they find that the warrior capable of defeating all the kings with canopies is greatly enraged. Even the riders of elephants and winners of grand armies in the battle front have gone into hiding. Now the killer of the Kashatriyas with Canopies and the cause of victory in the battle, Kalki Incarnation, was greatly upset. (465)

Being greatly enraged he (Kalki) had shot many arrows, which have cut off the helmets from the head, and the army of the Rajas has scattered around. There are heaps of corpses fallen in the fighting in the battle field, while many warriors bodies are claibhed together. Many limbs of the soldiers, being cut off, are lying on the ground, while there are heaps of skulls in the battle field. (466)

The crows, who are keen to pinch meat from the dead bodies, are very happy, while the death queen is making merry. She is spitting fire from the mouth like a grand spit fire (Jawala mukhi) with great personality. The demons and evil-spirits are laughing away, and the musical cards are breaking up. The woman Gori is roaming here and there in making a necklace of the skulls. (467)

Rasaval Chhand

The warriors getting enraged, are engrossed in fighting, and are shooting arrows with proper (aim) measure, while shouting 'kill them' kill them", with the tongue, and continue shooting arrows in a shower. (468)

The limbs of the warriors, being cut off, are falling down, while they are dancing in the field, being enamoured by the fighting spree. The gods are watching from the sky and are all praise for them. (469)

Asta Chhand

The Kalia Incarnation, full of anger, holding his sword in the hand, is moving around in the battle field in grand style. With an arrow and Sword in hand, he is not afraid of anyone. Instead he has fought with great style in the battle field, being enraged fully. (470)

With a roar, he has armed himself with many weapons while many obstinate warriors, with great rage, who are keenly involved in fighting, have launched an attack and are fighting a last-ditch battle. They have died fighting as they never turned back even being diswaded. (471)

The army has attacked like a terrible storm, where the swords are shining like lightning. But the enemy ranks have also not retreated or stepped back, and are stay-put in the battle-ground. (472)

The obstinate warriors are roaming around in the battle ground, with great rage, just as in a kiln, they had become red hot. The army commanders have collected their troops again, and are engrossed in fighting again, being fully enraged, by making a last stand in the battle-field. (473)

Thousands of Swords are being brandished and are striking the enemy bodies like a snake. They are laughing like the terrible streak of lightning, being drawn (in the sky). (474)

Bidhup Naraj Chhand

The swords are striking just as fire is produced, or a woman engages in laughter, or the lightning flasks. (475)

The sword, being wielded with skill, causes wounds. When it is wielded, it gives an idea of a scene or picture. The limbs are falling down, being cut away (from the body) just as a network of firing splashes is spread out. (476)

Now the death goddess with a bowl laughs around in the battle-field. The awe-inspiring evil-spirits are moving around with great noise. (are belching loudly). The laughter of the death-goddess is shining like the lightning ; perceiving which the fairies are dancing around. (477)

The hidden power of the goddess is roaring loudly. The godly power, giving (bestowing) the strength to the Sidhas (mendicants) is laughing around with strongly worded remarks. The blood stains are flying around. while the Sword is striking with speeds. (478)

The death-goddess (holi) is pondering with great seranity ; and is gracious looking like a sea shell with the appearance of some portraits, they are moving around, while some others involved in the path of fighting alone are interested in the battle. (479)

The goddess is busy making a necklace of the skulls. The snake of an ornament of Shiva's garland, is laughing. The evil-spirits are making noise. The battle intensity is beyond description, as the fighting was horrible. (480)

Bhujang prayat Chhand

When the renowned warriors got engrossed in a great fight, many of the young beautiful warriors had been killed. It appears as if darkness had disappeared on the advent of the morning. At that time, the Kalki Incarnation, getting enraged made a roar. Having armed himself with all the weapons, he had thrust himself in the battle field, and had started using the iron materials (weapons) like the rain shower. (in a big way). (481)

The shouts of praises (for Kalki) had risen in a big way, filling the air among all peoples. The dust from the hooves of the horses had risen high, touching the sun even. the golden edged arrows (with golden wings) had been shot which had caused darkness all around. The killing has been brought about without any hesitation (like a blind storm). With the striking of the weapons, flashes of lightning were being produced. (482)

The warriors named Jore jung was killed, and the whole army had fled away. They were speaking in a humble manner by mincing grass under their teeth. The defeated rajas are offering gifts (to Kalki) and taking with a (request) low tone. The haughtiness, and they have given up their royal appearance. (483)

The Kashmiri warriors have been cut into pieces and the obstinate Kashvaris have fallen back. the residents of Kasgar called Kaskari, who were in the Canopies overhead were greatly enraged. The Bangali warriors, and residents of Gurbandi and burdes, alongwith the fools of majindar ran and either proplace were all put to death.(484)

The beautiful youth of Russia, and Tus were killed. The obstinate ones from Persia, the warriors with great powers, all engaged Baghdadi and soldiers of Kandhar, Kalmachli (of Tatar area) with canopies were all greatly enraged. (485)

The arrows are being shot, while the guns are firing shots (balls). It appears as if black dark clouds are thundering and fire is bursting from fire arms. Shiva is dancing around, making a necklace of (human) skulls. The patient warriors are fighting out, while fairies are marrying them by selection. (486)

Somewhere, the limbs being cut off, the warriors are falling down and some where Rund and Mund are roaming around. Some warriors are shouting for help, on hearing which the hearts were throbling. The cut out bodies are getting up, while the battle-ground is filled with weapons. (487)

Rasaval Chhand

Those, who continued to face the enemy, were being killed. The warriors, who are defeated and have accepted their defeat, have joined the rest of forces. Taking everyone with himself, the Kalki avtar is enjoying the fun of the battle-field. (488)

Some people have given away alms (to poor) but the poet cannot describe the extent of these alms. All the rajas are happily settled, and drums and bands are playing music. (489)

The territory of Khurasan had been overtaken, and all the enemies have joined hands with him (with Kalki). Kalki himself has given an order (mantar) and has given many versions of war material. (490)

Now Kalki had started off, sounding a war-drum. He has collected a huge army alongwith himself. There were many carrying swords, and some others carrying quivers, who were fighting being greatlyenraged. (491)

Totak Chhand

The Earth was trembling with the grand army of Kalki. Sheshnag (the python with thousand fangs) was reciting Lord's Name. The anlke drums were making great noise in the battle field. The warriors were (firing) shooting arrows in the battle and were roaring with rage; while the fighting warriors were shouting to kill the enemy (saying, kill them) with great rage). (492)

Some warriors are managing to bear the wounds inflicted on them, while causing wounds to another in fighting. There is a strong contengent of warriors with coats of arms and other protective devices. Many ruge kites are making noise in the sky. The evil-spirits are making noisy scenes in high tones. (493)

The whole sky was covered up with the huge collection of roaming fairies ;

as they manage to come under the care of the warriors. The godly women were singing songs of their own choice with their tongues. The collection of fairies, in great style, fully beautified, were moving around. (494)

The warriors are watching all this while Shiva is making a necklace of the skulls. The fairies are making others laugh (along with them). The warriors are surveying the battle field, and inflicting swords to the enemy. By winning the western areas of territory, Kalki was fulfilled his promise. (495)

Dohra

Having won over the western areas of territory, Kalki has now moved his forces towards the South. Just as the battle goes on in the south. I am going to describe it accordingly. (496)

Totak Chhand

In the battle field, the collection of fairies are making highly praise worthy comments. Due to the fear of Kalki avtar, the weaklings and warriors, both are trembling while Durga is laughing merrily. Sheshnag is doubtful, and the Earth is in doldrums.(497)

The gods, on viewing this scene are all praise for it. Many evil-spirits sporting horrible looking appearance are making lot of fun. In the battle field, the warriors are inflicting wounds to the enemy soldiers like the rain shower, and the results in an introspection of the warriors. The warriors are causing wounds to the horses, while trying to safeguard themselve against the attacks (of the enemy) with arms and coats of mail in the battle field. (498)

The giddess, Kapalini, roated on the lions back is making fun and noisy scenes. She is carrying a sword in hand, which is embedded with great shine. There are many collections of the fairies, filled with dust in the battle ground. The whole lot of gods and demons are watching them in the field. (499)

Many horrible looking bodies (headless limbs) were moving around in the battle-field, on perceiving them the congregation of gods was feeling pleased. The whole lot of fairies were completing their marriage ceremonies with the warriors in the battle field. Even the sun has stopped its movemrnt (the chariot of Sun has stopped) to see the beauty (scene) of warriors. (500)

Kalki has won over the Kings (rajas) of western areas also, and now, fully enraged the army is moving sounth wards. The enemy, leaving their posts in their territory are fleeing away. Many of the Rajas are roaring in the battle ground. (502)

The devils and brave betal are dancing around. The elephants are trumpeting, and the biggest drum raises its beats. The horses are braying, while the elephants are trumpeting with a serene sound. The swords are shining and the bayonets are producing lighting scenes. (503)

Bhujang prayat Chhand

In the western areas, huge foolish demons have been killed. Now the drums have been sounded in the southern territories. The young soldiers of Bijapur and Golkunda have been killed. Many warriors, in the limbs cut off, are falling down, while their Rund and Mund (skulls and bodies) are dancing around. (504)

The residents of Rameshwar (Satbandhi) and those living in the ports of fish markets, having lot of sense and common knowledge, like obstinate youth from the source of army recruits in the area. The dran dians and residents of telangana alongwith people residing in Surat, bhangi and farangi (the foreigners of France and England) have been killed. (505)

The Raja of Chandpur has managed to offer resistance, while Chandelas have joined the Kalki side. The brave soldiers of Virbhadra have accepted defeat alongwith the raja of Ross (Russia). All the other residents of the South region have joined Kalki's forces. Now they have readied themselves to move eastward so as to win this area also. (506)

By winning the western areas and by destroying the southern territories the Kalki Incarnation became indignant. He then invaded the Eastern areas and the victory-drums were sounded. (507)

The Raja of Magadh territory waged a great fight (war), which was a treasure of eighteen languages Ah lesoptine (studies). This included the fearless invicible of Bung, buling, ang, morang, ago and nepal. (508)

Kalki had killed the rajas of Ckhaad, karan and jkadpar, with great effort. Many warriors, supposed to be unconquerable, were destroyed, and Kalki had over run the whole eastern territory (with great force). (509)

The useless demons of the area were turned out of the region. Then the Kalki avtar, with great ragi, arranged to invade the northern sector (area). The rebellion rajas, were attacked fieressly, and the blood thirsty invincible rajas were cut into pieces. (510)

Padhri Chhand

Thus by destroying the territories of Eastern Areas and winning over all the inconquerable regions with huge invincible armies, he completely smashed the rulers. He managed to thrash all the brave rulers, supposed to be invincible, This resulted in a terrible war, finally sounding the victory drums. (511)

All the warriors, supposed to be great fighters, were collected together, who shoot the arrows, and challenge while fighting the enemy. The weaklings, out of fear and restlessness, are running away. Many warriors are getting wounded, whose blood is oozing out drip by from wounds and they are falling down. (512)

Many are arranging their arms properly, while the bullets are firing from the guns. The horrible demons, drenched fully in blood with red colour are dancing around. The betal is making noise while the goddess of death Kali is laughing away with lot of noisy scenes. The Shiva's drum is beating loudly, while his eyes are bursting with fire. (showing his anger). (513)

The cowards are fleeing from the battle field, where the demons, evil-spirits and betals are dancing around. Shiva is dancing around in the battle-field and is making a necklace of the human skulls. Seeing the brave warriors, the fairies are marrying them with great joy. (514)

The youthfull soldiers are running around, while blood is dripping from their wounds. The demons are singing and dancing with great pleasure, while Shiva is beating the ankle-drum and dancing around. Parbati is enjoying the fun and is making a necklace of skulls. (515)

The gandharb, Sidhas and the mendicants (Sidhas) are getting praised. The pung fairies are singing songs and playing music on vina. (clarionets), seeing which the gods are enjoying, while the hearts of munis (mendicants) are in doldrums. (516)

The huge elephants are trumpeting while millions of horses are brayin, and the Kashatriyas with robust bodies are throwing challenge by roaring around, with the music of Maru tunes. So much music is being played that all the areas in various directions are filled up. Many big and famous rajas are feeling jerky and shaky. (Un Secure). (517)

The arrows, ready to suck blood (from body) were bering used in the battle-ground. The arrows are being shot, while the warriors are engrossed fully in the fighting without any hesitation. The delicate limbs of the great soldiers are being pierced through while they continue fighting. The fairies, with great hopes and inspiration are moving around in the sky. (518)

The warriors are pushing their spears in the forward directions, ans are shooting arrows like a shower (of rain). The fairies are enjoying happily while selecting their (beloved) heroes ; while horrible drums are being played (beaten). The demons, evil-spirits and the goddess (Kapali) are dancing around. (519)

The hands are shaking, while the helmets are striking with noise. The head-marks on the elephants and horses are breaking up and the strong ateel-like coverings are being torn apart. Many of the brave and grand demons are being crusked, while the mahants (priests) are merrily laughing around. (520)

Padhri Chhand

The invincible rajes have been conquered (by Kalki) and those, who were unlikely to be suppresed, have been controlled. The unbreakable have been (won over) broken into pieces, and those, who could not been controlled, have been overthrown. All those, who were not liable to be destroyed, have been completely overtaken. Those, who were not fleeing, were made yo run away. The rebels have left their houses, and fled away. (528)

The warriors have left scared while the cowards have been terrified with fear. The farries are getting amused on seeing the youthful soldiers. They are throwing open the utensil filled with saffron, kasturi (Small Indian incluse) rose water and canphor on the heads of the warriors. (529)

Having won-over (occupying) all the three directions, Kalki, being enraged, has advanced towards the north with drum-beats. He has attached the territorie of China and wrclive, where the Yogi-clad lamas were ruling the area. (530)

The bands are playing and the brave soldiers are roaring loudly. On seeing the brave savants the faries are getting excited. All the gods and demons are equally interested in them. The enemy casting away their egoism have started singing songs of Kalki's praise. (531)

The king of China, on hearing about the arrival of Kalki, has organised his forces and the whole force has started playing the war-music. The warriors, for taking action, have started the movement of forces, and the brave warriors have now started movements for the fighting in the battle-field. Being enraged and blood-thirsty the warriors have started shooting arrows like a shower. (532)

For putting an end to the Kashatriyas, bloody arrows have been shot. Many brave warriors have been killed in the battle field during the fighting. The great drums are beatingand playing serrious notes. The wounded soldiers are moving around. The evil-spirits are crying merrily for getting interested in the meat (being made available) during the fighting. (533)

The terrible goddess (Kali) is laughing in grand style. The demons and evil-spirits are roaring loudly. The arrows are being shot around, which are being tasting the blood of the warriors and the cowards, feeling helpless, are running away from the fields. (534)

The Raja (king) of China also launched an attack. He has armed himself with all types of weapons. The blood-thitsty warriors are roaming around in the battle-field freely and are doubly kan to fight in the battle. (535)

The warriors are engaged in fighting in the battle-ground and are shooting the arrows with great rage. The limbs, being cut off from the bodies, are falling down on the ground but they are (still) roaming around inspite of all this. (536)

Shiva is engaged in a horrible dance, while making a necklace of the skulls. The masters of the army are showing great skills (dramatics), and are shooting the arrows in a shower (of rain). (537)

The warriors are fully involved in the fighting spree and are shooting arrows, being fully enraged. The stream of blood is flowing to the brim, and the fairies are moving around in the sky. (538)

The god Shiva of 'Necklace of skulls' fame, was laughing around, and is throwing the Yoga-fire from his mouth. The warriors are shooting arrows, which are taking the life out of the enemy ranks. (539)

Some of the soldiers are falling down, feeling uneasy. The ground is covered by the dust, and the sand of the battle field was become coloured with blood. The demons and evil-spirits are demeng around. (540)

The Raja of Chuna, having given up fighting it out, came to meet Kalki. He has got all his jobs completed succesfully. So now Kalki, alongwith the Raja of China, is moving ahead of everyone. (541)

Kalki, taking all the other kings alongwith himself, sounded the trumpet of victory (victory drum) in the battle-ground. The fairies, seeing the warriors in a state of satisfaction and stablilised, are enjoying with laughter. The gods are feeling pleased while the demons, grandhrab and great devils are feeling unhappy and uneasy. While the demons, evil-spirits, educatiobnists and grand human beings were feeling unhappy and shocked. The bold Kalki, unhesitant and honoured all around, was being praised by all. The Inconquerable ones, who are hunder the spell of goddess Kali, are praising the Kalki alike. (542)

The armies got engulfed in fighting with one another, and the Sumer mountain was made to shake being unstable, while leaves have started falling in the jungle. Even Inder has been taken up and feeling mad(unbalanced). All tye good qualities and actions have been squeezed (withdrawn) Gujinder is equally surprised, and the moon is pulsating (with uneasiners) while the sun is running away (from the scene). The Sumer mountain is shaken up, while Kuber has lost its surroundings (being unstable) and all the oceans have dried up. The Shiva's meditation posture has been hit hard and disturbed, and the Earth is unable to bear the burden (of the battle). The waters of the ocean are (thrown upwards) being tossed upon, while the wind is blowing in the wrong direction, and the whole Earth, is trembling, (feeling unstable) and is losing its equilibrium. (543)

With the shooting of arrows, all the directions have been blocked (lost), and the mountains are being crushed, while Vindyachal is about to fall. The ocean is being tossed up, while the pole-star (Dhru-Muni) is losing its balance and is trembling Brahma has fled away, leaving behind the Vedas, and Inder has given up his kingdom even, on the day when Kalki Incarnation started roaring in the battle ground getting enraged. The dust, rising with the (ovement of) hooves of horses, has covered up the whole sky. It appears, as if God, being anofully enraged, had created eight skies and six Earths. (544)

The mutineers have fled away from the battle-field, while Shiva's musicians are feeling overjoyed. The crows and kites are flying high up in the sky above the battle-field. The hands of Shiva, are unable to give up the dead body (in his hands), and he is busting with fire. The_____are breaking up, the coats of mail, the iron glooves, and the coverings on horses backs are being torn apart. The cowards are running away, and the fairies, seeing the brave warriors are seen enjoying the fun. (545)

Madho Chhand

When Kalki Incarnation felt enraged, then the bands started playing and the weapons started making noise. O Madho ! The warriors supporting their arrows, bows, Swords and keeping their weapons in hands, thrust themselves in the battle ground. (546)

They caught hold of Raja of China territory, and Marn Raga tunes started playing O Madho ! The canopies of various kings of different territories were removed from over their heads, and Kalki Incarnation has made his horse (to show supermacy) move around all the areas and countries. (547)

After China area was taken away, then he (Kalki) launched on attack on the North areas. O Madho ! How far could I describe the fate of kings of the North, as the victory bugle was sounded on all their areas. (over the heads, by suppressing them). (548)

Thus by winning and defeating all the areas, the victory (trumpet) drum was sounded everywhere. O Madho ! All these kings fled away, baving their countries, and everywhere great demons have been crushed. (549)

After winning over the various kings, many Yagnas were performed, O Madho ! People (Rajas) came from various lands, including foreign lands, with many gifts. O Madho ! Kalki Incarnation had given support to various saints (religious men) and punished the rogues all over. (550)

The ankle-drum is being beaten, and the music on instruments is being played with gusto. The Kings are happy. The warriors are satisfied with their life-Style. Music is being played and songs are being sung. Kalki Incarnation has won all the battles. (558)

Mohan Chhand

Kalki Incarnation, having killed the enemies and subjugating the foes, has got the support of all the Kings everywhere, having won over the various territories, he has given them due honour and gifts (or alms). Having killed the bravest of warriors, stubborn like mountains, the kings have become powerful like Inder god. Kalki Incarnation, having won peace with increased pleasure and with due glamour all around, has gone back to his own place. (territory). (559)

Having deafeated al the enemies, and being free from all fear, Kalki has performed many Yagnas, including home Yagna. All the poor people, and beggars of the whole land have been offered freedom from disease and suffering. Having done away with the tortuons regime of Yudishtra and Daronacharya, and having won over the whole land, with greater glamour Kalki has started moving back to his home-land of Sambhal. (560)

After winning away the whole world, and spreading the message of Vedas, with a good type of religious life planned for the land, he has sent for various learned men from different areas (lands). By engaging in a ferrocious war like the Varah avtar with loot, he had won all the three worlds. After giving grand alms to learned pandits in Vedas, he had sent them everywhere with their attendants with due respect. (561)

After tearing apart into pieces, he had punished the enemies with great losses. Having given to poor people millions of rupees he has endeared them to himself by winning them over. The invincible warriors have been defeated in battles, and divested of their weapons etc and canopies. Now the Kalki Incarnation has been declared as the head of twenty-four Incarnations and his dominance over all is recognised. (562)

Mathan Chhand

The Light of Kalki Incarnation is now shining in all directions. It appears as if the Sun has risten (shown) from there. The whole world, ridding themselves of all doubts, with one voice, have worshipped Kalki Incarnation. (563)

His (Kalki's) grand personality is shining all over the world, perceiving which all the other kings are feeling ashamed (belittled). The whole world had recognised him as god, that is, they have accepted him as Supreme King and have brought many gifts, accepting his supremacy. (have joined with him) (564)

Kalki the king, is looking glorious in his seat, on seeing whom, the fairies are feeling (ashamed) belitt[redacted]d. He is full of pleasure with a sweet tongue, and his eyes are filled with the godly love. (565)

He is looking gracious in his seat. It appears, as if he has been specially given a beauty treatment. The godly women are all endeared to him on perceiving his form. He is appearing dressed up like Rawals. (566)

Whosoever has viewed Kalki for a moment, his eyes get ghued to him. The godly women are pleased to see him, and are viewing him with love and devotion. (567)

He is dyed in the charm of love, and on viewing him even the god of love Kamdev is feeling ashamed (belittled). The enemies are feeling jealous of him, at his sight. It appears, as if an arrow has pierced his body. (568)

He (Kalki) is looking beautiful with a grand form, and the fairies are getting excited at seeing him. He is feeling perturbed with shameful eyes, as if he had no sleep during the night, being awake. (569)

He was full of love and charm, and was looking gorgeous with a glamour. He was looking beautiful like Natraj, and was feeling playful and clever like the dancing horse (it appears). (570)

It seems, as if he were an imitation (a minicry) or a Raja (King) with powerful sway over the land or a maker of destiny or dyed with the charm of love. (572)

Or he was having a canopy over-head or a Kashatriya with weapons/coats of arms or armed with arrows or is beautified in many ways. (573)

Or is looking sexually charming like Kamdev's arrows or main flowers of a necklace of flowers or full of the charm of love or a god of beauty. (574)

Or the Kali Snake or the male deer of the main type she-deer or the rajas with canopies over heàd or they are the menials (servants) of Kali. (575)

Thus Kalki Incarnation had conquered all the kings by fighting a battle against all. (one by one). Then he ruled over the country for about ten or twenty thousand years. (576)

Ravan bad Chhand

He had wielded a sword in his hand, and had subdued all the rajas by fighting against them. Then he arranged to imbibe all of them with religious teachings, which does not amount to (allow) any delay. (577)

He has delivered his ruling message, and has managed to cast away and has cast away all their (magic) mystical learnings and conveyed his message. By sitting alone in the (Shady trees) silence, he has written all his bye-laws. (578)

He (Kalki) is looking gorgeous in his beautiful form. many people are getting endeared to him as his glamour is exceptional. Even Vedas are pondering over him. He has many forms and various appearances (with different dresses) with lot of glamour and vedas are pondering over him. (579)

He has many for-mations with grand appearances. He looks venerable in his beautiful personality, on seeing whoms even the Sins (sinful actions) are cast away. (get lost). (580)

Kalki had earned great honour and praise in the world killing (many) innumerable enemies of great strength, who were enjoying powerful status and positions with beautiful environments. (581)

Kalki was a great warrior with invincible power, and was enjoying having a position of pious nature. He is performing many Yagnas and how Yog by over coming great sins. (582)

When Kalki had conquered the whole world (all territoris), then he became very haughty, and had farsaken the Lord (akal purkh) and started behaving (haughtily) with pride. (583)

He felt as if there was no other power except (beyond) him, and was being acknowledged like that everywhere. He had conquered the world and made everyone secondary to himself and started his own name being worshipped. (584)

He started a new wave of worship and got a canopy over his head. He felt everyone subservient to him and would not care for anyone, (considering all his devotees). (585)

Now no one was worshipping the Lord and no one was praying to God, or meditating on God's name. Then God felt enraged, and created another individual (greater than him). (586)

He created Meer Mehdi, who was a great and obstinate warrior and full of rage. So he murdered Kalki, and made then made Kal Purkh (the Lord) as his helper. (587)

He conquered the world, and made everyone his subject, who finally got killed (subject to death). Thus the episode of Choubis avtar, by controlling everyone, is completed. (588)

Here the episode of Bachittar Natak granth's
Twenty fourth Incarnation, Kalki is completed.

Thus the end of Kalki avtar came, and the age of Sat-Yug started, with the end of the age of Kal-Yug. The soul of Kalki got mingled with the Prime-Soul. (1)

Then Meer Mehdi got puffed up with pride, when he conquered the whole world. He also made everyone secondary to himself and got an canopy over his head. (with a fly whisk). (2)

He did not recognize any other person or place equal to himself, and even did not care for the position of Lord, so he (mehdi) also got merged with death. (got killed). (3)

In fact, apart from the Lord in all forms hues and places there is only one power, and there is no second one. Whosoever had forsaken the existence of Lord, wastes his whole life, without any fruit-ful purpose. (4)

There is no other power except the One Lord in the oceans or lands or anywhere else. Whosoever has not recognized the supremacy of the Lord, gets lost in various forms of life, from one form to another form of life.

I feel, the person, who does not realize the importance of Lord, and considers some second authority apart from the Lord, does not have any sense. He is always enveloped in problems of sorrowful life, hunger and thirst, and he remains remorseful through out day and night. (6)

He does not have peace of mind at home, and will be suffering with afflictions and will die with hunger or affliction, and his life will not be blissful. (7)

He will have leprosy of feet, and the body will suffer from this disease, resulting in rotting of body. His body will never be healthy, and will have sufferings of sons and grand sons. (8)

His family will always be subject to deaths (losses), and will not have peace till the end of life, being engrossed in sufferings and afflictions always and will face death like a dog. (9)

When The Lord realized that Meer Mehdi had become proud, then the Lord gave him a death with great pain. The Lord created a worm, which was ordered to pierce into the Mehdi's ears. (10)

The worm thus played havoc into Mehdi's ears, and finally won him over, killing him after inflicting lot of pain and sufferings. (11)

Tomer Chhand

Now again Sat-Yug (age) was established on the Earth (world). All the musical instruments had been renewed. All the Rajas (Kings) of various lands, have started following the path of religious teachings. (1)

It was the horrible age of Kal-Yug full of rage, which had burnt the whole world in its heat (fire) of sinful life. There is none else apart from the Prime-Soul. So all should recite the Lord's Name only. (2)

All those, who recite Lord's True Name, get their hopes and desires fulfilled. They do not suffer from the pangs of inflicting (sorrow) hunger or thirst. They are always enjoying pleasure, without any sorrowfull moments. (3)

There is none else, other than the Lord, and He pervades everywhere in various forms and personalities. Whosoever recites His True Name, gets the support of the Lord Himself. (4)

Those, who recite His True Name, do not run away to jungles, and they need not be afraid of the enemy. They can win over various areas by wielding weapons. (5)

Their homes are full of wealth, and their hopes and desires are fulfilled. Whosoever recites Lord's Name, does not fall into the trap of death. (6)

There is only one God, who creates and destroys this world, and there is no second person equal to Him. He alone pervades in various forms and shapes. (8)

On his beck and call there are many Indras who bring drinking water at His order. (door) and there are many Brahmins, who could recite Vedas verbatim. There are many gods (like Mahesh) at His call. There are innumerable Sheshnags (with thousand fangs) reciting His name. (9)

There are many forms of Sun and Moon, and there are many kings like Inder at His door. There are many Indras, Upindras (Bavan avtar) alongwith many Munis (mendicants). There are many incarnations of Kachh and Machh, alongwith many Sheshnags. (10)

Many Crores of Krisna Incarnation and un accountable number of Rams are standing at His Gate for cleanliness. Many Kachh and Machh Avtars are guarding His gates. (11)

There are many Shakar and brahampati seen around, alongwith many data triya and Gorakh to ber seen. There are many Rams, Krisnas and Rasool (Mohd) but without reciting His True Name, no one is acceptable. (12)

Apart from Lord's True Name, all other activities of religious types or functions are fruitless. Those, who follow Guru's teachings, could realize His secrets, and the Lord. (13)

Do not recognize anyone else apart from the Lord and do not have dual mindedness and recognize the authority of the Lord alone in the mind, which alone will be helpful at the end of life. (14)

The (authority) which has no colour, shapes or appearance, should be considered in a common form for everyone. Apart from the Lord's True Name, we should not recognize any other authority or belongingness. (16)

One, Who could create this world alongwith the secondary world (after death) and then mingles it with Himself (after destruction). Whosoever wishes to get Salvation for his human body, should always resort to the worship of the Lord. (meditation of God). (17)

O fool ! You should worship and recite the True Name of the Lord, who has created the fourteen regions of the world. We should always recite God's Name only, which would help us achieve (fulfil) all our desires and aspirations. (19)

" There is no other poet like me, and only myself could be like me. because of mind's haughtness (such state of mind) the Lord got annoyed and threw him on the ground (on dust) like Indra (god). (23)

When he fell down on the Earth (when he was reduced in status) then the author of four Vedas again started serving and worshipping the Lord with great devotion.(24)

For ten lakh years he served the Lord again like this, and he requested the Lord again like this, and requested the Lord, "Pray, grant me this boon of mind (thought-ful mind) so that I could gain salvation from this life by some means. (25)

The Lord then directed Brahma like this :-

"O Brahma ! If you serve the Lord with great devotion and concentration, then He will be pleased with you, and the protection of the world and the worldly helpless people, will honour you with great strength and power and you will receive His benedictions. (26)

Then Brahma after listening to him astonished with these remarks and thought to himself and got engaged in the true service of the Lord as suggested by the God.(27)

He (Brahma) then pleaded with the goddess by falling at her feet, who had got engrossed in a battle against invincible enemies and having killed Jalackh and Dhrum Lochan had thrown them on the ground. (28)

(The goddess) Chandi then said, "When you will meditate (worship) on the Lord, then the curse will be revoked." On hearing this, Brahma started worshipping the Lord, and forsaking, his pride, he took solace at the Lord's feet. (support of Lord). (29)

Those who take shelter at Lord's feet, are blessed ones in the world. They are not afraid of anyone, and all their jobs (functions) are completed without fail. (any problem). (30)

For ten lakh years Brahma was standing on one leg only and served the Lord with full devotion so as to please the Lord. (31)

When the goddess explained the details and fruit of Lord's worship, then Brahma had performed his service with devotion and the Lord was pleased with him. (32)

Then the godly declaration was heard saying, O Brahma ! want to destroy pride, leaving aside everyone's haughtiness, and everyone is brought under Control by twisting (destroying) their haughtiness. (33)

"Why have you indulged in pride, which had displeased me. Now I am giving you one sermon, which would help you in your salvation." (34)

You go to the world and undergo seven Incarnations, so that you could gain salvation. Thus Brahma accepted this ordain and took birth (again) afresh in the world. (35)

"You should remember without forgetting it that for me praise or slander has no difference or meaning (both are equal for me) keep this in mind without forgetting it. I am giving you another sermon. O Brahma ! Listen to me with concentration of mind, O my child ! " (36)

"One god, called Vishnu, had also meditated on me, and had earned my pleasure through my great service (worship). He had requested for a similar boon (gift of life) and I had bestowed on him, the boon he asked for." (37)

There is no difference between him and me. Everyone is aware of this truth (fact). The whole world considers him as the creator of the whole world, present and future, including all the mountains. (38)

Whenever that Vishnu will take up the form of an Incarnation (body) and whatever programme he announces, you should proclaim and describe that formulation without a second thought." "O son brahma ! Listen to me carefully with full concentration of mind ! (39)

Naraj Chhand

That Vishnu (god) will take the form of Ram (as Incarnation), being fully armed with weapons and all the ferocious enemies will flee away from him, leaving behind their weapons and coats of arms. Whatever functions he performs during his life, you should explain fully by improving that if required. Even if he makes thousand functions of life, you bring out in words nicely by improving them. (40)

Then Brahma memorized those heavenly sermons (ordains), and appeared in the form of Balmik, having remembered those descriptions. He had described the battles (war) of Shri Ram Chander beautifully with great consideration. He described that war in seven episodes, on reading which people got endeared to it. This was the Incarnation of four-faced Brahma. It has been described like this with necessary improvements. (41)

Naraj Chhand

That Brahma, after his Incarnation, has explained the whole episode in a different manner and has given us a taste of fresh clever moves of a special type. Having attracted the attention of the goddess Kalika towards himself, he has used some wonderful wordings. He has selected some distinct words to describe the whole episode with great care. (1)

At first, he has described the thought of Lord's existence and his worship and then used selected words for description. Having meditated on the Lord, he has explained what was really requested, and there should be no doubt about it in the mind. He himself will give us strength to improve upon it. Many people will level praises on the type of poetry provided by him. (2)

The poet Balmik is like Ganga and his poetry will transform others. (human beings). Through the grace of Lord, he had produced the Granth. On reading this granth by the scholars of Vedas specially would be very much pleased. Then they feel overjoyed in heart on thinking (pondering) of their own writings. (3)

The description of that poetry is considered in the world to be as pure and serene, which gives us an insight and knowledge and it possesses the treasure of important sayings/words. Balmik has made use of such a (wonderful) poetic formation in the production, which spreads pure and holy word. That rare produce (praise of Ram's beauty) is so beautiful, that it is not possible to describe the praises of the poetry. (4)

So far this reason, it behoves us to serve the Lord by considering Him as indescribable. We should recite His Name by getting uparly in the morning. The worshipper of His Name, after killing many enemies, will bestow many alms to millions of people. Such people will get the protection of the Lord, by offering His helpful hand. (5)

The Saints do not come to grief, whereas the others (non-saints) such as warriors get killed while fighting, while their unconquerable army runs away (from the field), just as the darkness of the night disappearance on the face of the rays of the moon. Then the Lord will protect me with His helping hand, and will not allow untoward incidents of hardship to occur, and the enemy will not be able to see our position. (6)

Here the episode of Balmiks Incarnation ends.

Now the second Incarnation of Brahma, Kashaps Kathanung.

Padhri Chhand

Then Brahma took up the form of Kashap Incarnation. He was reciting the sermons of Vedas, and had married four women. He had created the (Earth) world through Maithan, and he had created all the gods, demons and towns. (7)

The rishi Kashap had become an Incarnation and his preachings (message) have been described with full thoughtful consideration . He produced Vedas from Surtis by giving their meaning and did away with worlds Evil designs. (8)

Thus Brahma appeared in the second Incarnation. Now I am going to describe the third Incarnation with due consideration. I am going to describe Brahma's third avtar in a beautiful manner. (9)

Here the Episode of Keshap, Bachittar Natak granth
about the Second Incarnation of Brahma is completed. (2)

Padhri Chhand

Then Brahma took up the form of third Incarnation, and the demons became the kings in the world. The families of demons spread out in the world greatly, and ruled over the world hirely. (1)

Considering him as the eldest son, kashap helped him, so Brahman's third avtar became Sukar. He praised the Lord under the pretext of Lord's slander, which resulted in the weakness of the gods, on perceiving this. (2)

Here is the end of the episode of Shukar from the Bachittar Natak granth, dealing with third Incarnation of Brahma.

Now the fourth Incarnation of Brahma as Baches's Kathanung
Padhri Chhand

The brow-beaten gods, now got together and started serving the Lord. After hundred years the Lord got pleased with them. Now Brahma took up the form of Baros Incarnation which resulted in the victory of Inder and the demons suffered losses. (3)

This is how Brahma took up the form of fourth Incarnation, which gave victory to Inder and the demons got defeated. All the gods, with down-cast eyes, and for-saking their pride, then started serving the new Incarnation. (4)

Here the episode of Brahma's fourth Incarnation of Baches is completed. (4)

Now the episode of Brahma's fifth Incarnation of Biyas kathanung.
The Raj of man Raja Kathanung
Padhri Chhand

This was the end of Treta Yuga and Doapar Yug had started. Then we witnessed many miracles and special events When Krisna Incarnation occurred, then Brahma had appeared in the form of Bias Incarnation. (5)

Whatever miracles Krisan had performed, were described by the goddess Saeda. Now I am going to describe briefly all those had been enacted by Krisan with great glamour. (6)

The miracles detailed earlier were explained in poetry form by Byas. The way Vyas has described in poetry, I am going to describe all those miracles or special doings, with great important glamour. (7)

The stories of All the important kings, who ruled then, have been detailed in poetry by Bias poet. How far all those details could be listed ? O friend ! Listen to me, as I am going to describe all those stories briefly. (8)

Bias has described the rajas, who came into existence. The Puranas have mentioned the names of the Rajas. One raja by the name of man happened to be there who used to hold a sword in hand (expert in Sword manship) and was known all over for his bravery. (9)

He created the fourteen regions of the human world, and spread his glamour and honour all over the regions. Who could describe the great glamour and honour of the creation ? Everyone keeps quiet after listening to his glory with one's ears. (being over whelmed). (10)

He was a treasure of eighteen philosophies and had sounded his victory drum having won over all his enemies. He had waged a war against the rebel rajas, where the demons had roared and evil spirits had danced. (11)

He had defeated (won over) the rebel kihgs and their families and supporters (soldiers) had been maltreated. Having launched an attack against the rajas and threw them out of their lands having won their countries. (12)

The blood-thirstyKashatriyas had been thrashed fully in the battle field and defeated the most horrible and courageous warriors, and had killed the invincible soldiers. He got engrossed in battle against those who were not willing to fight and brought the most powerful warriors to their knees, overpowering their pride. (13)

The blood-thirsty warriors were brought under his control (sway). The rebellious kingdoms were brought under the control of new rajas, so there was much hue and cry in the whole region. So this is how the Man raja was being honoured by all. (14)

Thus he ruled over the country with great strength and performed many Yagnas including home Yagna. He gave lot of gold in alms, and also gave away in alms many cows after bathing in holy waters according to customs. (15)

All the customery practices of the Yagna were performed by the Raja, as per Vedic rites with great devotion. He earned the pleasure of giving away land and diamonds in alms and enjoyed such practices. (16)

So he proclaimed his suprenacy on various lands, and performed many acts of alms-giving. The king had given away elephants in alms and performed asmed and nripmed Yagnas. (17)

He gave to the brahmins many horses alongwith various ornamental things, and these brahmins were expert in the fourteen academic sciences (knowledge). They were giving sermons from four Vedas. Six Shastras and Smritis. They were giving details of Sex education and were playing music on Veena. (18)

It was the practice to mix camphor with rose water and then rinse it and then by adding Kasturi (deer's inner special) in this mixture, wine was prepared. For proper essence, saffron was added to it. With this, a fragrance would enevolp the whole house. (19)

Har bole mana Chhand

This is how the Raja Man had ruled over the land, and lots of musical instruments were being played there, on listening which even the gods were feeling belittled.(22)

Here the Bachittar Natak episode of Raja Man is Completed.

Now the episode of Prith Raja's reign is explained

Totak Chhand

How could I count all the Rajas, who happened to rule that time. The Lord has already mingled their Soul with His Prime-Soul. Then there was a Prith Raja of the land (Earth), who gave many alms to the Brahmins. (23)

One day, alongwith his horde of army men, the Raja went for hunting, and saw many huge lions there in the jungle. There one beautiful lady by the name of Shankuntala lived in great glamour, on viewing her even the brightness of the moon and sun was feeling belittled (ashamed). (24)

The Raja went there and hunted some deer. There he saw a hut and (it appeared) as if this is a place of peaceful (Yoga) meditation. (25)

The Raja went inside the hut without taking anyone else with him. He saw a women standing there, who was beautiful in the prime of life. (Youthful Beauty). (26)

She is looking gracious and endears any onlooker towards herserlf. When the Raja saw her, he got bewildered. (27)

He was wondering, whose daughter she would be ? It appeared, as if she was a portrait of beauty. He was pleased to see her and felt overjoyed to see her. (28)

The Raja caught hold of her arm, but the women kept quiet. Both were involved in the love of each other, and sexual desires had overtaken both of them. (29)

Then the Raja had sexual relations with that woman in many ways, and would not leave her till the night fall. Both of them were aweloped in the love of each other, which cannot be described. (30)

They were engrossed in the love of each other and had sexual relatios to full satisfaction. The raja had given her many sexual poses, which gave her great satisfaction. (31)

He took the woman in lalit pose (asan) and then made many other poses. Both had full sexual relationships in Lalna and lala forms to their full satisfaction. (32)

Then Shakuntala after having sexual relations with him, got up in the hut of leaves, and the Raja went away. Thus Shankutala became pregnant. (33)

After some time she gave birth to a child (bhoor). The child had covered his body with a coat of arms, and was more beautiful than moon even. (34)

It appeared as if the child was like the jungle fire. The child was so bright and glamorous that any Rishi (mendicant) who would see him, would feel wonderstruck. (35)

When the child grew up, then Shakuntala took him with herself and came to the place, where his father was residing. (36)

When the Raja saw them, he felt ashamed, and said He is not my son. O woman ! Who are you ? (37)

The woman told the Raja :-
Har bole Mana Chhand

O King ! I am the same woman, with whom you had sexual relations, and in the shabby hut of leaves, you had developed sexual relations and love affair. (38)

Then you had given me your word, which you have forgetton now. O King ! Try to think of that incident and get married to me. (39)

Else, I will throw (bestow) a curse on you. Having enjoyed copulation with me, now do not cast me away, and do not feel ashamed. (41)

The Raja told the woman,

Show me some impression (mark) and show me some solid proof. I am neither running away like this (from my duty) and nor I am feeling ashamed of it.(42)

The woman handed over one ring into the hands of the Raja and said, " Please examine this ring carefully. Why are you looking downwards ? (downcast). (43)

On seeing the ring the Raja recognized her and remembered Shakuntala. Then he got married to her and gave her many gifts to her satisfaction. (44)

The Raja had seven sons from that woman who were very handsome and full of youthful glamour. Those sons were full of glory and bravery and could crush every force enemy. (45)

Having killed many warrior kings, he won over many countries, and then established the practice of Yagnas by calling Rishis and Brahmins (who performed Yagnas). (46)

Those sons had crushed lot of rajas (enemies) through various benevolent actions. They were great warriors and none could equal them in bravery. (47)

The seven canopies were flutering over the heads of seven sons. It appeared as if seven Indras (gods) had landed over the Earth, and they were all seven Incarnations of Inder (god). They all joined together in the recitation and meditation of all Shastras and Vedas as per customs. They kept apart some wealth for the welfare of common people and their development. (52)

The unbreakable land was also divided by the sons among themselves by dividing it into seven parts. The name of seven islands was also changed to 'Narkhand' with full Consideration. The eldest son, who adopted the land, named it as Bharat. The treasure of eighteen literatyres (according to intelligent people) were named (the land) as Bharat khand. (53)

How many names the poet could mention as the names and areas were beyond count. The various islands were divided among themselves. The names of Rajas and their lands were many, out of which some warriors, with due thought could be singled out for description. (54)

The seven kings were enjoying their rule over the nine islands (regions). The mighty warriors, with swords tied (with their waists) started moving around in different styles (all around). They started relating the names of the great regions, which were unconquerable. It appeared as if a second Indra (god) had appeared (in the form of these kings) on the Earth, and control of their kingdoms (like Indra). (55)

All of them had assumed authority (with canopies overhead) according to their times and having won over all other mighty warriors (unconquerable) with great ruthlessness, they ruled over them. While practicing varioyus types of Truthfulness and falsehood (virtuous and villainous deeds) they were engaged in various acts of wonder and pleasure seeking and finally they were engulfed by death (in turn) and none-was left alive. (56)

For one's own welfare (they) people were engrossed in power politics and the more powerful men were perpetrating various misfortunes on weaker sections of society (injustice was rampant) finally as is usual, whatever was desined by the Lord, would come to pass in spite of our efforts. The foolish people do not realize the secret of the Lord and face sufferings knowingly (they land themselves in the well). In the end one could serve one self only by realizing the (power of the) Lord Almighty. (57)

The foolish people do not realize that finally whatever the Lord wills, is bound to happen. Forsaking the Lord-Sublime, the foolish human beings, function as per their own selfish interests. Thus the fools commit sins, without realizing the truth and taking flimsy rituals as acts of religion. But the Lord knows all about the manifest and hidden acts of man (being omni-scient) at all times. (58)

They consider all the sins as virtuous acts and thus perform various sinful actions in the grab of virtuous deeds. They consider all irreligious deeds as pure and virtuous, thus practicing false religion. They do not recognize any places of real worship while worshipping all other places without any truthful background (religious background). Thus knowingly, with a lamp in hand, they land themselves into the well, (and undergo sufferings), the fools land in trouble. (59)

They do not believe in the abodes of Sidhas, but they worship the places of non-virtuous people. How long could these foolish people manage their lives in fruitless efforts just like running on a wall ? How long could a bird fly having no wings and how could a blind person (without eyes) see things ? How could an armless person (without weapons) enter a battlefield and how could a person without intelligence and proper understanding, give discourses on Shastras ? (60)

Just as in the world without money one cannot carryout any business (being penniless) and a blind person cannot see the world and without the knowledge of Kok-Shastra, one cannot enjoy sexual pleasure. A person without knowledge cannot study the Gita and without intelligence one cannot enter into any discourse. A warrior without strength cannot fight a battle, while a prince without wonders and pleasures cannot appear glamorous. (61)

How far could we recount the kings, who happened to rule over the land ? How many masters of islands and other lands could we recount in the world. It is only The Lord who created them, that could manage to detail them as none else has the strength to list them. No one could attain The Lord without His worship. (62)

Here the episode of the kingdom of Raja Bharat is completed.

Ruaal Chhand

I am going to describe all the great kings, who have ruled the Earth with the Lord's Grace. The rule of Bharat came to an end and The Raja Sagar assumed the role of the ruler. He worshipped Shiva (Rudra) and begot one-lakh sons. (63)

All the princes possessed tilted wheels, banners, maces, and attendants. It appeared as if the god of love (Kamdev) had assumed a million forms in the world. The various princes were dressed up in different garbs and had won over many other countries (lands). All the people behaved with respect (like slaves) for the princes and had regard in their mind (hearts). (64)

The Raja Sagar then began preparations for Ashmed and selected one horse from the stable. The Raja then sent for great scholars (Reciters of Vedas and Brahmins adept in Yagnas), great ministers and friends. He made many groups and sent them along with troops and the horse. The princes started moving around with canopies overhead (with authority). (65)

Wherever they went, they got their authority recognized (with victory gained over them) and all the enemies were annihilated. All the Rajas fled away leaving behind their dreadful weapons. The warriors, throwing away their arms and protective covering, dressed themselves as women. They fled away forsaking their friends and families (sons) behind. (66)

The armed warriors (with maces) were roaring all around while the cowards were running away, leaving behind their horses and other weapons (goods) while the warriors with patience were getting perplexed. Everywhere the mighty warriors were thundering around, showing off their armour and winning victories, their superiority was recognized, everywhere. (67)

Having gained victory in the East and West they moved southwards and subjugated them. Then the horse moved towards the direction where great Muni (seer) Kapil was seated, (on seeing him). The Muni was engrossed in his meditation, so he did not see the decorated horse. Perceiving the Muni in the grab of Gorakh, the horse stood behind the Rishi. (68)

All those following the horse got (shocked) surprised, when they did not see the horse with their eyes. All were feeling ashamed and were looking around for the horse but could not find him and felt tired of locating him. They thought to themselves that the horse must have gone to Netherlands. Then the prince Sagar and other warriors started digging up all around. (69)

Geeting furious with rage, many warriors were digging up the Earth and throwing around the clay. All the beautiful faces of the princes with digging Earth, got covered with dust. After digging up the land in the southern direction, then with (egoism) pride, they moved eastwards to win over that side. (70)

Having dug up the southern area, the princes having knowledge of eighteen sciences moved eastwards and after digging up there, they moved westwards. Having gone to the North side, when they were about to dig up that land, then those fools thought to themselves of many other designs while the god of death had designed something else (for them) in this age of Kalyug. Having dug up the whole area, when they had covered about half the area, then they realized the secret (of whole affair) that there was a Muni, sitting in meditation, and at his back they saw the horse standing there with all its decorations. Then the sons of Raja Sagar getting furious with rage, struck the Muni with their legs. (72)

Then the Muni was shaken off from his meditation posture, then flames of fire, were seen coming out of his eyes. The flames were protruding in different ways just like the wild fire of oceans. His flames of fire completely struck the million sons of the Raja Sagar and they were reduced to ashes. Then the decorated horse along with the troops with armour was completely destroyed. (73)

Madhbhar Chhand

All the princes of Raja Sagar's army, with sweet tongues, were reduced to ashes along with the troops. (74)

They were looking glorious and were very charming. They gave up their egoism (pride) after they had been burnt down. (75)

On seeing them burning the great renowned warriors, with long arms reaching up to knees and having many qualities (having fourteen virtues). (76)

The warriors got worried and gave the message of the state of princes to Raja Sagar, sitting in the Yagna (performing Yagna).

The Raja Sagar had identified those warriors and felt uneasy at heart and then asked about the plight of his sdons along with any message. (78)

The warriors, forsaking there pride and with folded hands said, with tears trickling down. (79)

"O Mighty King ! The princes had moved around the horse all over the lands, and having won over various Rajas, got them collected (arranged) on their side." (80)

"Then the horse had gone down to Netherlands. Your great sons had dug up the whole Earth (land) and they became greatly egoistic." (81)

"There was a Muni, with great occult powers, who was gifted with many virtues, but seeing this Muni, engaged in meditation. (82)

Your sons got enraged and taking some warriors along with them, they started beating the great Muni with their legs. (83)

In the end the Raja Sagar started reciting the name of Shiva and while repeating the name of Shiva and restraining his tears from the eyes, he consoled his heart and purified his mind like a Muni (an ascetic). (87)

Then he performed the last rites of his son as per Vedic rules along with other religious functions with great love and devotion. (88)

Finally the Raja gave up his life in observing the heartfelt condolence at the loss of his sons. Who could detail other Rajas of similar nature who lived during those times. ? (89)

Now the episode of Raja Jujaat's Kingdom commences :
Madhbhar Chhand

Then there lived the Raja Jujaat, who was renowned everywhere for his supernatural glamour. He was known for his scholary bearing (knowledge) of all the sciences (fourteen studies). (90)

He had very charming eyes, as if he was a personification of the god of love (Kamdev) and he was established as a renowned king of glory. (91)

He was a king of great renown with beautiful features. He was known for his scholary learning (of all the fourteen sciences) and his supernatural personality of glamour. (92)

He possessed great virtues with a charming personality and liberal leanings. He was glorified as a great scholar (of all sciences) of renown. (93)

He was dexterous (skilful), amassed with wealth, along with various virtues. He was fully aware of the superior authority of The Lord Almighty and was a glorious king of repute. (94)

He possessed great knowledge of the Shastras, being a great scholar, while in the battle he was ruthless. There lived a king by the name of Bane and it appeared, he was a personification of the legendry Kamdhein cow (who was all powerful). (95)

He was a great wielder of sword, being bloodthirsty and was a great warrior who would not flee from the battlefield, and was an invincible Kashatriya with a great fury and ruthlessness. (96)

He was like the god of death for his enemy and was always wielding his sword for their elimination (killing). His splendor was like the glory of the sun, as if he was like a (flame of) fire. (97)

Once he was engrossed in any battle, then he would not be deterred (by any power) from the battlefield. many foes would flee away from the battlefield (against him) and none would dare to oppose him. (98)

Even the sun would feel belittled before this glamour (sun would tremble before his power) and all the directions (powers) would crumble before him. All the rebellious kings were disappointed in opposing him and were running away. (99)

The warriors were trembling with fear, and the cowards were fleeing away, leaving their country, such was the might of the Raja. (100)

Even the moon, on perceiving the Raja, would feel bewildered, Indra's heart was throbbing, and sheshnag was feeling flabbergasted and striking his fangs on the ground and the mountains would run away. (101)

Sanjuta Chhand

All had heard about the praises of the Raja (about the glorious Raja) and all the enemies (groups) had become frustrated (with beating of head). The Raja had organized many Yagnas in the world and alleviated the sufferings of the helpless (poor). (102)

Then the Raja Jujat became a victim of the god of death.

Sanjuta Chhand :

Then Bane became the king of the land, who had not been punished by anyone. All the beings of various types including human beings were very happy and enjoying comfortable life. All had given up their egoism from the mind. (103)

All the beings were very happy and none of them appeared suffering from any afflictions. The whole land was very much comfortable and enjoying all pleasures. It appeared as if the goddess (of wealth) Lakshmi had manifested herself there. (104)

Thus the Raja had established a reputable kingdom, enjoying all comforts of life and alleviating all the sufferings of poor and helpless people and hearing this the gods even felt overwhelmed. (105)

After ruling the country for a long time the soul of the Raja got mingled with the prime soul (he died). He had his authority proclaimed everywhere (with a canopy overhead). Thus a king Bane of great might and repute, that had destroyed all the enemies, had lived there. (106)

All the kings who were virtuous (devoid of all vices) had finally got their souls mingled with the prime soul. Is there any poet who could detail such Rajas (list them) but briefly they have been listed here. (107)

Now the Raja Ban
has also died

Dodhak Chhand :

When Bane Raja had died after ruling the land, then Mandhata became the king, who ruled over the country. When he went to the (heavens) abode of Indra, he had offered him seat in his throne itself along with, by showing him all respect (received him by getting up). (109)

Now the Raja Mandhata was filled with fury and challenging him, took up his double-edged sword in hand. When he was about to strike Indra with great wrathfulness, then Brahspati (Dajindra) held him back by holding his arm. (110)

He then said, O King ! Do not destroy (kill) Indra. He had offered you half the throne as per rules. It was done like this because o the Earth you had not been able to kill the demon called Lavnasur. (111)

You deserve the full throne (seat) of Indra if you comeback, after killing the demon. So better get seated on half the place. I am telling you the truth, so you need not detest it. (112)

Astar Chhand :

Raja Mandhata then hurriedly went there along with his bow, to Mathura mandal where that demon (Lavnasur) was abiding. That bad (vicious) demon due to his egoism and fury had collected a huge force (for fighting). (113)

He attacked like a streak of lightning from the dark clouds, thundering and getting furious with rage . Learning about the attack all the other demons also came rushing forward and were trotting their horses with ruthlessness. (114)

Medak Chhand

Now both of them would not relent unless one was killed. Both of them, gnashing their teeth attacked each other with great fury. Till he learnt that Lavnasur (demon) was killed in fighting, he would not come back and you will not see his horse coming back from the battlefield. (115)

Very soon both of them would try to kill one of them and without reducing themselves into one person being left alive, they were not willing to stop fighting. Many trees of Shorea robusta had been uprooted along with many stones, which came down hurling down. From both sides the warriors were attacking each other in the battlefield. (116)

Then Lavnasur took up his trident, getting furious with rage and cut the head of Mandhata into two pieces. Then all the army commanders along with their troops started fleeing and were feeling ashamed of themselves so much that they could not carry back the head of the Raja even. (117)

Many wounded soldiers were running away from the battlefield just as the clouds get depressed with the blowing winds. Blood was flowing from their wounds like the shower of rain. Having lost the king Mandhata in the battlefield, the whole army forces came back saving their lives. (118)

Some wounded soldiers were moving around, while some had their heads damaged (cut) in war and some were bleeding badly (blood was flowing from the wounds). While some other had their hair disheveleed. The King Mandhata had been killed with the striking of a trident while other mighty warriors had been forced to flee from the battlefield. (119)

Now the episode of Raja Daleep's kingdom begins

Totak Chhand :

When the Raja Mandhata got killed in the killed in the battle, then the King named Dalip took over the reins of the kingdom of Delhi. He crushed many mighty demons and the masses started worship and practicing true religion. (120)

He was a great charioteer and was so charming a great king as if someone had transformed him in a mould by pouring molten gold therein. He was very beautiful, being a personification of the god of love (kamdev) or it appeared, he was made a king of beauty itself. (122)

He organized many Yagnas (fire pits for worship) and in the yagna place (building) there were many Hom Yagnas with alms giving as per religious practices. Everywhere the banners of religion were fluttering, and the decorations of the whole place would put Indrapuri even to nothingness (to shame). (Even Indrapuri would feel belittled before its beauty). (123)

At each step there were huge pillars (depicting) indicating performance of yagnas, and each house was made a store of food grains by the Raja. Even if a poor destitute were to visit a house for alms, he was instantly given whatever he desired. (124)

The house owner instantly gave, whatever one had asked for, to him. No beggar was left wanting in the land (the beggar was given whatever he desired) and in each house there was banners of religion fluttering and on seeing their beauty even the Dharampuri (religious place) would feel ashamed (was looking pale). (125)

There was not even a single (foolish) illiterate person left in the land as all the children and old persons were made literate by locating them throughout the area. The worship (service) of The Lord was being performed in each house and everywhere people were made to worship and recognoize The Lord almighty as the supreme power (Gurdev). (126)

Thus Dalip became a renowned king of the land, who was known to be a great charioteer and a great archer (bowman). He was also a great scholar of Kok-Shastra and smritis as well, and a treasure of the fourteen sciences and a great luminary. (127)

He was a great practical leader of great wisdom, who was known for his splendor and glory, being a (treasure) scholar of all the fourteen sciences. He was very charming and glamorous in personality and was known for his (neutral) virtuous character and praiseworthy nature (of religious type) (man of principle and good character).(128)

He was a great scholar of Vedas and the six shastras (great exponent of shastras) an expert in archery (Danur Veda) and Lord's True Name (love of the Lord). He was a great swordsman (wielder of sword) who had crushed many enemies. (129)

He had won over many invincible kings and there was none-equal to him in power and authority. He was a powerful king with great might who had defeated many powerful enemies. (130)

He had (won over) defeated many (near and far) Rajas and his kingdom was spread over the whole land and many canopies were fluttering over his head (his authority recognized everywhere) and many Rajas, forgetting their pride, had accepted his suzerainity over them and thus recognized his authority. (131)

Now everywhere the religious practices (virtuous nature) were being followed invariably and nowhere there was any talk of irreligious type. The drumbeats would announce the practce of alms giving in all the four directions (everywhere offerings were being given). The king was renowned like the kings, Karan, Kuber, Bane and Bal everywhere. (132)

With the varied nature of his kingdom his fame had spread all over, reaching up to the oceans (end of land). Everywhere the (thought of) sins and fear complex had disappeared and all the (attendants) people close to the Raja, were busy in virtuous practices (of religious nature). (133)

The sinful actions (practices) had been completely uprooted and all the kings were engaged in virtuous deeds (religious practices) at all times. His renown had spread all over the end (up to the oceans). This is how the Raja Dalip ruled over the world. (134)

Now the episode of the rule of Raja Raghu begins :

Choupaiee :

Then the soul of (Raja Dalip) got mingled with the prime soul (died) and the world had acclaimed this fact, and after him Raja Raghuraj had assumed the control of the kingdom and with canopy fluttering overhead (authority proclaimed) along with new royal emblems he ruled the land. (135)

He arranged many Yagnas to be performed in many ways and spread the cult of religion (virtuous nature) everywhere in distant lands. There was no sinner left in the land, and no one could dare to tell a lie (even by default). (136)

He was like the brilliant moon shining during the night and the day looked at him as the glorious sun shining everywhere. The Vedas took him as Brahma (the originator of Vedas) and the gods looked at him as the king of gods, like Indra. (137)

All The Brahmins looked at him as the form of jupiter while the demons took him to be the form of Venus (evening star). The suffering humanity looked at him as the medicinal herb while the Yogis took him to be the personification of supreme authority (prime soul). (138)

The children took him as one of them (child) and the yogis looked at him as the (main yogi) representative of yoga cult. The benefactors saw him as the supreme donor (alms giver) and the worldly people looked at him as the greatest pleasure mongering person. (139)

The ascetics looked at him as a personification of Dutt (greatest seer) while the yogis took him to be an embodiment of Guru Gorakh Nath, and the recluse looked at him as the form of Ramanand whereas the Muslims took him to be a personification of Hazrat Mohammad. (140)

The gods looked at him as a form of god Indra while the demons looked at him as Raja Shumbh. The demi-gods took him to be the Raja Kuber (of demi gods) while the (mythological horse with human head) Kinars took him to be their Raja Kinar.(141)

The lovers took him to be the god of love, and the suffering humanity looked at him like the physician Dhematri (the physician at the court of Indra) and the kings took him as the contender for kingdom, while the yogis took him as the main yogi. (leader of yogis). (142)

The Kashatriyas have looked upon him as a great Kashatriya while the warriors have taken him as a great warrior with weapons. The night had looked upon him as the moon while the day had seen him as the embodiment of sun. (143)

The saints had looked upon him as a person of great patience while the fire looked upon him as a flame of light. The Earth took him as a mountain while the deer have seen in him as deer with musk. (144)

The beloved ones thought him to be a lover (a piece of love) while the Sidhas thought him to be a Sidha (an ascetic); the cobras mistook him for sheshnag and the gods took him to be a form of the nectar (elixir). (153)

The cobras looked at him as the form of gems (mani) while the human beings took him to be the source of life. The Raghubansis had thought him to be like Raghuraj while the Yadvas took him to be Krishna only. (154)

The suffering humanity looked at him as the destroyer of ailments whereas the Raja Bali took him to be like Bawan Incarnation. The Shiva worshippers looked at hm as a form of Shiva while Vyas took him to be the Lord sulime itself. (155)

The Brahmins described him as an embodiment of Vedas while the Kashatriyas took him to be a representative of war. Whatever one thought in one;s mind, in the same manner he appeared to them from the same angle (approach). (156)

The king ruled over the land in many ways, having won over distant lands along with their social structure. he usurped many distant kingdoms and Yagnas were pwerformed at various places (at each step). (157)

At many places, the pillars of Yagnas (holy fires) were entrenched and performed home yagnas with chanting of mantras (cantos) at each step. There was not a single place devoid of the pillars of Yagnas. (158)

Many great Gomed Yagnas were performed by calling many Brahmin scholars with religious leanings. Many times Ashavmed Yagnas were organized and enjoyed the pleasure of occupying different lands (kingdoms). (159)

He performed gaj-Yagnas (where elephants were given as sacrificial offerings) many times and many Ajamed Yagnas (where goats were offered in sacrifice) were organized which were countless. Many types of gomed yagnas (where cows were given in sacrifice) were arranged and on all these occasions many animals were killed.(160)

Many Yagnas of Rajsu type were performed (royal yagnas) as a result of which the king Raghuraj was acclaimed as the second Indra (god). Many types of offerings and alms were distributed as per the normal practice and had taken aths at various places of pilgrimage. (161)

All the religious places (of pilgrimage) the steps of bricks were built (for bathing places) and each house was made a storehouse of food grains (food grains were distributed in plenty). If any needy person happened to visit him (for help) he was given all help and material as per his requirement (as per his demand). (162)

There was no person in the land, without having food or clothing (hungry and naked) and even a beggar would be made a wealthy person with offerings, and he need not request another person for alms (help) after his visit to the Raja Raghuraj once in lifetime. (163)

Many types of gold offerings were made in alms, while there was no count of silver offerings (in Yagnas). Many decorated horses were also given in offerings (alms) it would appear that the king Raghuraj had converted all the beggars into rich persons (with material possessions). (164)

The offerings (alms) were given in the form of elephants, camels, cows, and than bathing as per rites, many offerings of jewels and beddings (clothing) were made each time (in alms). In this manner the king Raghuraj had enamoured the whole populace of the land (on the Earth). (165)

He gave offerings of horses and elephants and gave recognition to poor and helpless people of various categories with appreciation. Now nobody was suffering from hunger (due to food shortage). Whatever one could demand or ask for orally was bestowed on him immediately. (166)

So Raja Raghuraj was acclaimed as a mountain of alms giving and (possessing) good nature and an ocean of kindness. He was a charming king having expertise in archery. It seemed as if the god of love (Kamdev) had appeared in that beautiful form. (167)

The Raja was performing worship (puja) of the goddess with the flowers of roses and pandanus by getting up every day. He would bow before the goddess at her lotus feet and was visiting the temple daily for the worship of Chandi. (168)

He had started religious practices (of virtuous nature) at all places and everywhere the subjects were living comfortably. There was no hungry or poor (naked) person to be seen. All the rich and poor people were basically wealthy and well to do. (169)

There were religious banners (of virtues) fluttering everywhere. Nowhere the thief's or cheats and vagabonds were to be swwn. Infect, everywhere the thieves and vulgar people had been picked up and killed and there was not even one thief left in the whole country. (170)

No one could dare to trouble the Sidhas (holy persons) or cast an evil eye. The kingdom of Raja Raghuraj was thus functioning beautifully. In all the four directions the Raja's fame had spread and his acclaim was known all over, and his wheel would cut off the heads of sinners and then return to him. (His reign was supreme, where the sinners were punished with death). (171)

The cow was suckling the lion's cub while the lion would take the cows for grazing grass. The thief was guarding the wealth and due to fear of punishment no one would touch (steal) another's money. (172)

The woman and man would live together (would be sleeping together on the same bed) but would not dare to make any overtures without the woman's consent. The fire and ghee were placed together but the ghee would not melt (be affected) due to the fear of the Raja. (173)

The Thief and the rich (person) would travel together, but due to the fear of the Raja, he would not dare to rob him. The cow and the lion were moving together in the same field but no one could dare to attack the other (one could not act according to one's wishes). (174)

Thus the Raja Raghuraj was ruling the land with authority, and his fame had spread far and wide (all the four directions). The guards were controlling the whole land (all the four directions) and they were very powerful with a mighty (glorious) personality. (175)

The Raja Raghuraj, a scholar of all the fourteen sciences (languages) ruled the land for twenty thousand years and performed many religious (virtuous) acts during his tenure, which no one else could have enacted. (176)

Padhri Chhand :

Thus during the rule of Raja Raghuraj many decorated horses and elephants were given away as offerings (alms) to the poor and helpless people. He had gained victories over many other kings, and many Rajas entrenched in their (strongly built) forts had been crushed completely, with a strong hand. (177)

Now the episode of Raja Aaaj's rule commences :

Padhri Chhand :

Then Aajraj, a great warrior, took over as the king of the land, who won over many mighty rulers and had destroyed many dynasties and kingdoms. He had defeated them, thus he had annihilated their pride (and brought them under his control).(1)

He had defeated most invincible kings even, and had smitten the heads (killed) of many mighty rulers. He had crushed the unconquerable rulers even. The king Aajraj was a mighty ruler with the knowledge of all the fourteen sciences. (2)

He was a great and mighty king and a great scholar of the Vedas, shastras and other sciences (learning). He possessed a great and charming personality (with a proud bearing) and other kings would feel belittled (ashamed) before him. (3)

He was the king of kings, a great king emperor, and his treasury was full of the society's wealth. Seeing his charming personality, the women would get enamoured by his beauty. The Raja was greatly renowned for his knowledge of Vedas, a great benefactor and religious person with a scholarly leaning, having a benevolent character. (4)

If I were to describe all details of his personality then the Granth would become unwieldly (large size) so O friend ! Lisdten to his episode in brief. There was another king, named Sabahu, ruler of the land of Bedarbh and a great warrior. He had a beautiful wife, named Champavati. (5)

They gave birth to a charming girl who was known as Indramati, a great woman of repute. When she became of a marriageable age, the king pondered over it. (6)

All the Rajas were invited and many kings with large armies left for the function. All were blessed with the learning from Saraswati (goddess of education learning) and all were reciting her praises. (7)

Then kings from various lands arrived there and paid their obeisance to the great king. (Aajraj) The Rajas, seated there were looking glorious as if it were a collection of the gods (even gods gathering could not compare with it). (8)

Countless drums and kettle drums were beating, clarionets were being played, and many strings were making noise. His glory was beyond description, as if Indra was looking glamorous in his godly setting. (9)

The royal gathering was functioning and seeing them even Indra was feeling upset. Who could describe the glory of this august gathering ? No one could describe it). The demigods and Shiva's musicians were all praise for this splendour. (10)

Ardh Padhri Chhand :

The warriors were all looking glamorous, and they were enamouring the fairies, and in their own hearts they were thinking of owning them (marrying them). (11)

They were singing songs and were looking very pleasing to the heart. They were bestowing their blessings on them saying that they should live for (all the four Yugas) millions of years. (12)

Many were clapping around, making lot of noise while the spouses of gods were watching them in great numbers. (13)

They were looking charming like the fairies, with beautiful hair and bewitching eyes and having a sweet voice like the black cuckoo. (22)

They had a very glamorous personality, and their looks were enticing all with their charming laugh. They were full of pride (with their nose protruding high). (23)

Even Indrani was feeling shy (ashamed) on perceiving the beauty of the queens. These women were looking glamorous like a necklace of songs (musical tunes). (24)

Mohini Chhand :

These women, with the beauty of Parbati, were looking glamorous and praiseworthy. They were enamouring the hearts of the gods and human beings equally with their looks. Who could explain the glory of the mirth and joy of the great kings who were watching their charm ? (25)

These women possessed a great charm with a pleasing personality. Great many warriors were getting enamoured with their beauty. The women were dancing around with great embellishments (charm). The gods and human beings were feeling overjoyed by perceiving their splendour. (26)

The horses were neighing, while the elephants were trumpeting. The women were dancing around while singing their tales. On seeing them the gods and human beings were all praise for them and the kings were being enamoured with their charm, and were distributing many offerings (alms) to them. (27)

The fairies were singing songs and dancing around. The Rajas were feeling amused while their queens were getting annoyed. The flute of Narad was producing a sweet musical note and with the appreciation of gods they were getting excited like a flame of fire. (28)

They were having collyrium in their eyes with their limbs fully decorated. Beautiful dresses on their beautiful bodies were looking glorious. The fairies were dancing, while the Rajas were getting amused, and were clamouring to wed them. (29)

The women were dancing with the beat of small drums (producing musical notes). The musical instruments were being played with certain notes with Rag Mala (the necklace of Ragas) as their components. The kings were seated with their decorations everywhere, who were completely absorbed in the whole fun of music. (30)

They were enamouring whosoever had seen those women, and those who had missed them watch, were getting annoyed in their hearts. The beautiful women were dancing with great delicacy and interest. Their body movements were full of their inner feelings. (31)

Their beautiful movements were getting established in that gathering and they were looking glamorous in their dances which had amused the great ascetics (Munis) even, which resulted in leaving their (Munis) meditation and rushing towards them. They were greatly enjoying this entire glittering scene in their minds. (32)

The kings were seated everywhere with all their beautiful decorations looking glamorous. They were getting overjoyed with pride on noticing their good qualities. On perceiving the glittering scene, the Munis (ascetic) were completely lost in their ecstasy, being forgetful of their state of mind. (33)

The din produced with wonderful notes of the songs, with pleasing words, was amusing everywhere and the people with the knowledge of musical notes, well versed in the art of the music, were feeling completely abashed (ashamed). They were falling flat on the ground with its absorbing effect as if warriors were falling down, being wounded in the battlefield while fighting. (34)

The Rajas, seated there, were looking like flowers blooming in the forest and their bodies looked glorious like the roots of the flowery trees. The Rajas were swinging around being intoxicated with wine as if peacocks were producing musical notes like the gurgling of thundering clouds. (35)

Padhri Chhand :

Everywhere there were glamorous arrangements and the kings from various lands were seated in glittering make-ups. This whole scene is beyond description. The eyes were completely enjoying the whole set-up, which was very beautiful. (36)

Having seen such a charming dance, the Rajas were pierced with the arrows of sexual desires (The god of love had aroused their sexual interest). The whole atmosphere was praise worthy, but beyond description. The Rajas were enamoured with the beauty of the charming dancers. (37)

The whole atmosphere was so glamorous that it appeared as if spring had set in. The whole gathering of the kings was looking praise-worthy. The whole, lots of Rajas were embellished with decorations, and even Indra (god) could not compete with them in splendour. (38)

The dances continued there for a month, and no one could escape taking wine (and getting drunk). Everywhere one could see glamour and glitter, and kings along with princes were seated there in their glory. (39)

The goddess Saraswati, whom the whole world worships, brought the princes herself along with her in the assembly. "O Princess ! See, this is the prince of Sindh, whose splendour can not be matched by Indra even." (40)

On seeing the pronce of Sindh, the princess did not (approve of him) attach any importance to him in her mind and moved ahead leaving him behind, as if she had swallowed the whole assembly (disapproving them). (41)

Then Saraswati said to her, "Now look at the prince from the west with open eyes." Even seeing his great personality and charm the princess did not approve of him. (42)

Padhri Chhand :

(Then she said to the princess) "Look at this prince. He is a great warrior from a great country. He had a charming personality. (43)

The princess looked at him with due thought and he was a (great) mighty Raja, but the princess did not approve of him, though he was having a pure transparent outlook. (44)

Then the charming princess moved further. She was smiling like the lightning shining among the clouds. (45)

The Rajas were getting excited on perceiving her charm, while the spouses of the gods even were feeling jealous and annoyed considering themselves inferior to the princess (in beauty). (46)

Then there was another Raja with a charming personality, who was looking glorious and was looking praise worthy. (47)

"O Princess ! Look at this Raja. He was a great mighty king of Multan, and a king of kings. (48)

Bhujang Prayat Chhand :

The princess moved ahead ignoring that Raja just as Raj Laxmi would have ignored all the five Pandvas. She was looking glorious standing among the Rajas, just as jawalmala was exciting the hearts of Munis. (49)

The princess, standing midst the Rajas, was looking so charming and glamorous just as a painter had painted a great painting of his. The red twinkling attached to the gold necklace (chain) were looking so beautiful as if a flame of fire was lit among the assembly of the Raja's yagna. (50)

Then Saraswati said, "O Princess ! See for yourself (with your eyes), many brilliant and gallant Rajas were standing there. Whomsoever you prefer, you could take him as your spouse (Master). O my dear Princess ! Please accept my advice". (51)

"Look at the beauty and glamour of this Raja, who had a huge army along with him and conch shells along with clarinets were making loud notes and many musical notes were being played. The Raja appears to be very powerful with thousand arms during day and night". (52)

"His banner carried the symbol of a lion and even the greatest sin would disappear (fly off) on hearing his great music". (His band music)". (53)

Many conch shells, drums and clarionets were making thunderous noises; specially various musical instruments from the south were being played, including music of clarionets, Kaura Tur, Tarung, Muchang, flute and mirdang". (54)

"The Raja, who had diamonds studded on his apparel had a great sway over large lands (with a canopy overhead) and a large army was accompanying him with splendour. Brown coloured horses were attached to his chariot. O Princess ! Consider him to be the king of the south in your mind". (55)

"The master of the huge army may be considered to be the king of hilly tracts (kingdoms) and he had millions of troops to give him a glorious outlook like the petals (leaves) and his beautiful large elephant was embellished with a glittering covering and he may be considered the king of the northern states". (56)

"O dear Princess ! That king should be considered the king of Lanka, and his courtiers are also looking praise-worthy along with him. In fact, he had looted the treasury of Kuber even once and had defeated King Indra even, being a great renowned king". (59)

All these kings mentioned above had not come up to the expectations of the princess, All the great kings of the land have been detailed already. Now, I would mention the names of all the Rajas who had come from the four corners of the country and the princess, as before, had rejected all these kings. (60)

"O Princess ! The King with a huge demon army, along with many mighty kings, adding to his glamour, having the symbol of a vulture and crow on his huge banner; you should consider him the great king (Bali) of the nether lands, and is looking glamorous and honourable". (61)

"The King, whose chariot was loaded with various apparels and diamonds, and various eminent persons were following him with dignity, was the king Indra, a dreaded enemy of the demons, and his spouse, Sachi, was the princess of Aditi".(62)

"His chariot was moving on wheels, and drawn by seven horses, and great many cobras were tied with his chariot and was full of splendour. He was a great master of archery (dreadful archer) and his arms stretched up to his knees. So, it would be worthwhile to recognize him as the Sun." (63)

"He may be considered armed with an arrow in hand, and the moon riding a deer and was looking glorious. His rays were shining forth like a trap (mesh) for the human beings and he was worshipping the power (goddess of might) with thousand arms day and night. (64)

The king, riding a buffalo, and was looking like Sumer mountain. He may be considered god of death (Yamraj) with great power of destruction and winner of the twenty armed Ravana (with twenty arms). On his banner (flag) the symbol of a great staff is looking glamorous, on seeing which, the proud people lose all their egoistic tendencies. (65)

How far could I describe, as all the proud kings were standing there like a coward and looked like a great multitude ? Many clever dancers were dancing, making a twinkling noise with their twinkling bells attached to their feet, for hearing which people had thronged there." (66)

"The king with all the wealth (of the world) was having a large army accompanying him, having great pride (ego) for his wealth in the mind. He may be considered in mind as the great Kuber, producing flames of fire from his great body." (67)

"The princess went to the place where all the kings were collected and there was none else as beautiful on the whole Earth and there were many kings with huge armies, standing there with a great egoistic profiler," (68)

Many rivers had transferred themselves into human beings, (form) and accompained this king, and all the oceans had come there with great splendour accompanying him. The person, with a great body built up and looking glamorous, and perceiving him the princess of gods was getting enamoured with his beauty. (69)

"O Princess ! I am telling you that king Varuna, on seeing whom other Rajas feel abashed, losing their pride. How far could I detail the Kings who had shown the princess all the kings, who had gathered there, Saraswati had shown the princess all the kings, gathered there. (70)

Swaiyya :

All the kings from the assembly of kings who had come there (in the show) were shown to the princess. But the princess, having seen various kings from all corners came back (dejected) and did not approve of any one of them. The whole lot of warriors got frustrated and became withered on seeing their plight. All the faces became pale (with disappointment) while the princess came back to her palace.(71)

Then Ajraj, the king emperor, along with a huge army, came there. He was dressed in beautiful silken robes, which could put to shame the honour of the god of love (Kamdev). Along with him many other Rajas in beautiful robes came along (with him) and they looked like great youths looking like apostles of peace and pleasure. So Raja Aaj with golden robes had come and in his presence all other Rajas appeared like blankets. (72)

He had arranged his army in a single line formation, while the drums, and mirdang were being played beautifully, and golden ornaments worn on all the limbs were shining with a glitter, on seeing which the glamour of Kamdev (god of love) would become feeble before them. The instruments like chang, mirdang and upang were being played and all were listening to this beautiful music. All the interested Rajas on perceiving the Aaj Raja were getting amused and were praising the beauty and charm of the Raja. (73)

The beauty of the Raja was not to be found in any other person. The moon was getting annoyed on seeing the charm of the Aaj Raja and a hole had appeared in the body of the moon (chest of moon) due to its fury. Even the fire was getting agitated in mind on seeing the glory of the king, and was burning the houses of the people. In fact we have not seen any other Raja as beautiful as Aaj Raja. (74)

We have known him to be beautiful, to be youthful and a great king in all the four corners(directions). Even his glamour was more than comparable to the bright glitter of the sun. Was he a king or a Rana alone or was he considered greater than these also ? The gods and demons both were getting bewildered at heart (on seeing him). The night had compared him to the brilliance of the moon, while the day has seen him like the sun and the Munis (ascetics) have considered him to be The Lord itself, while the peacocks have seen him as the beautiful clouds. (75)

The nightingale was singing, thinking it to be spring season, while the chakors (partridges) have seen in him the light of moon. The saints have seen him as an embodiment of peace and tranquillity, while the warriors have looked upon him as representing wrathfulness. The children were looking up to him as a child only, while the enemies looked upon him as the god of death. The gods had considered him a god and the demons took him as Shiva and the Rajas had seen him as a king emperor. (76)

The saints had seen him as a personification of a Sidha, while the enemies looked upon him as a strong enemy. The thieves have seen him as the dawn of day and millions of peacocks had taken him as the dark clouds. The women of the town had taken him to be the god of love while the musicians saw him as the like of Shiva. The pearl shell found him to be the holy raindrop, while the kings took him to be the king emperor. (77)

The other Rajas seated next to the Raja Aaj appeared like a blanket lying near a shawl of fur (fine wool). The parrot on seeing the Raja's nose, was feeling annoyed while the deer, on seeing his both the eyes, was feeling ashamed (of himself). The rose (flower) on seeing his cheeks, was feeling like a drunkard who had consumed wine, whereas the god of love (Kamdev) was feeling jealous of his beauty. The parrot seeing his neck and the tiger, seeing his waist, had forgotten their path (backwards) being furious with rage. (78)

One would not feel satiated by seeing the charming beauty of the Raja with the eyes, and one would feel like taking the sip of nectar on closing the eyes. The beautiful women were singing while clapping and their words were expressing their heart's desire (to own him). The women were feeling amused and looked beautiful while throwing abuses at him (for his beauty). The charming women were saying in wards (to themselves), "O princess (virgin) ! The Lord had specially created you for the Raja-Aaj only." (79)

Seeing the charming Raja Aaj would not satiate one's eyes and the women were getting enamoured on seeing his beauty. They were singing while the drums mirdang and muchang etc. were being played with reverberations. All the women of the town, would cast away their pots (for bringing water) and stare only at his beautiful body and were offering blessings on him saying, that the Raja should continue to rule for ever on the Earth, so long the rivers Ganga and Jamuna are flowing. (80)

How could I explain the glamour and praiseworthiness of the Raja, being enjoyed all around ? Whatever praises all the poets were showering on him are beyond my description, in fact, I feel shy of describing it. I have roamed around the four corners of the land but could not find any means of detailing the charm of the Raja's limbs (body). In fact, while writing about his beauty, the pen had grown in size (thick) like the sugarcane, while the beauty was still evading description. "How could I say all about it with my tongue ?" (81)

All the women of the town were being (wounded) swayed away with the piercing arrows of the eyes (glances) of Aaj Raja. Even Saraswati was feeling incapable of describing his beauty, so how could my ability cope up with the description of his charming beauty and his glamour ? The king emperor, Raja Aaj, had even robbed the sweet tongue of the black cuckoo along with the beautiful neck of the pigeon, which was much varied from it. The men and women of the whole area were so much overjoyed with seeing his charm that they were falling flat on the ground, as if they were reeling after getting wounded badly. (82)

Couplet :

All the men and women (of the town) were getting enamoured by seeing the beauty of Aaj Raja. All were confused with his beauty thinking him to be (god) Indra or a personification of the moon or sun. (83)

Kabit :

Were they the off springs of snakes or created by some magical wand, or the toys of the god of love, since they were created with lot of care ? They were the very soul of the women, or a mine of beauty or some game of the god of love (Kamdev), as The Lord had created them with great thought. They were representative of cleverness, or the king of charming beauty, or the master of the beautiful land, or an embodiment of the moon's beauty. Were they representing a sword or an arrow or some warriors armed with weapons ? The eyes of the Raja Aaj were so charming, that it needed lot of care to glance at them. (84)

Swaiyya :

The eyes of the Raja were piercing like the arrows or were they like the (sharp) sword or were they like those of the off springs of the deer ? One should see for himself before deciding on this fact, as the whole population was completely mesmerized with the Raja's chafm and were keen to describe his glamour but failed to do so. The princess also moved ahead to have a look at him along with others. Even the peacock and the partridge (chakor) were perplexed with his charm. As soon as the Raja came in sight, the princess was completely enamoured with his charm. (85)

Tomar Chhand :

The princess had now seen the Raja Aaj. He was having a charming personality, and formed a part of the social structure. The princess smiled and made a necklace of flowers immediately. (86)

Then she held this necklace in hand and was looking graceful with char m and put the wreath of flowers around his neck, who was blessed with the eighteen treasures (master of all wealth). (87)

The goddess Saraswati, who was adept in all the eighteen arts, ordained her. "O beautiful princess ! (Maiden) ! Listen to these words, whose eyes were shining with charm like the moon." (88)

"The Raja Aaj was competent enough to be your praiseworthy spouse. He possessed a charming personality and was praiseworthy. O beautiful lady ! Listen to my words. " (89)

That charming princess placed the wreath of flowers around his neck, and the musical instruments started playing them, which included drums, flutes, clarionets, and weaver instrument. (90)

There were many musical instruments playing including small drums, mirdang, weaver's instrument, new flute etc. To match with that music, charming women with beautiful eyes, were singing songs. (91)

The Raja Aaj, after getting married to that princess came back to his palace along with her midst great pomp and show (with beating of drums and playing of flute) and getting great many gifts and offerings and enjoying great pleasure. (92)

The Raja Aaj was a great king, being the master of all the eighteen treasures. He was an ocean of peace and tranquillity who had won over Rudra even in the battle. (93)

Thus he ruled over the kingdom with great honour and prestige (renown) with a canopy fluttering over his head, especially he was a great and mighty warrior and had performed Yagna at the time of his assuming power (coronation). (94)

He had gained victories in all the four directions, and Raja Aaj was a great renowned king. He was a great king, being a mountain (source) of magnanimity and gentleness and was great scholar of all eighteen sciences (studies). (95)

He was a glamorous king with beautiful and charming eyes ; on perceiving these (eyes) even the god of love (Kamdev) was getting annoyed (jealous). His face was shining like the moon that would enamour all the onlookers. (96)

He ruled over the country for long, and performed many Yagnas as per religious rites and social obligations. If all the details were to be given, then this episode would become lengthy. (97)

So I am telling it briefly, so O Brother ! Listen to it with keen and great interest. He performed many religious and social Yagnas (functions of fire worship) and the Raja Aaj ruled over the land brilliantly. (98)

The Raja Aaj had taken the worldly kingdom as his own and would not consider anyone else as worthwile (of importance) then the sword of the god of death suddenly fell upon him and burnt him in the fire. (99)

Thus the soul of Raja Aaj got mingled with the Prime soul and all the people got frightened on perceiving it. They were in such a helpless state just as a boat without the boatman (helmsman) or the body becomes without any life in it. (100)

Just as the village is without its landlord (choudhary) or the productive land appears (barren) after the crop has been taken off or the treasury is without any wealth (money) or a business is without its business sponsorer. (101)

Tomar Chhand :

In the next age Byas manifested the eighteen puranas, and his egoistic tendencies were increased, so that he would not consider anyone else equal to his stature (in knowledge). (1)

Then the god of death became indignant and took out his sword, which magnified the flame of fire, spreading it all over. So he cut Brahma in to six pieces, and considering him helpless, his life was spared. (2)

His light of life was not extinguished. Then he became the great Rishi (ascetic) author of six shastras, and he meditated on the knowledge of shastras, so he became known as the author of six shastras. (3)

He manifested the six shastras and that Byas appeared in the form of an Incarnation of Brahma. Thus the sixth incarnation (of Brahma) edited the six shastras (and finalized them). (4)

Tomar Chhand :

This Brahma was a treasure (source) of Vedas. He was a great scholar of the eighteen Shastras. Then contemplating on the events of Kalyug. Brahma became known in the form of Kalidas. (1)

He produced a great poetry of love, called Raghubans in a beautiful style. Brahma in the form of Kalidas had performed this feat. How far could I describe the great poetry of Kalidas ? (3)

Thus Brahma assumed seven forms as Incarnation of Brahma and after that only he attained salvation. Then he assumed the form of Brahma with four faceted figures, which was beyond description or praise. (4)

The Incarnation of Rudra :

Tomar Chhand :

Now I am going to describe the various incarnations of Rudra, after making it more refined. He had undergone great penance (in Yoga) as per yogic rules, and as such became very egoistic (proud). (1)

He did not consider anyone else on par with himself in various lands or countries. Then the Lord Almighty (prime soul), becoming furious with rage, made certain remarks about Rudra in great haste. (2)

The people who get involved in egoistic tendencies, finally get destroyed automatically (are thrown into the well on their own accord). "O Rudra ! Listen to me with rapt attention, as I am known to be a destroyer of pride (egoism). (3)

Brahma had been guilty of egoistic tendencies and had thought to himself of some uncalled for contemplations. But when he assumed the form of a saint, then he managed to attain whatever he desired. (4)

"O Muni Raj ! (O holy ascetic !) Listen to me with full concentration, and you also be born in the same fashion. O Rudra ! Listen to this fact carefully, as there is no other mode of attaining salvation. (5)

Shiva listtened (with his ears) carefully to these words and that beautiful eyed person gave up his obstinacy. Considering The Lord Almighty as the destroyer of pride (egoism), Rudra was born on this Earth. (6)

Padhri Chhand :

Just as I have described before, the details of the kingdoms of various Rajas, now I am going to detail the episodes of various Rishis (holy ascetics) and their social structure, along with their detailed functions and how they attained the Brahmanical character. (7)

I am going to describe in a beautiful manner the various characteristics of their doings and designs. Thus Rudra (god) appeared as a son of a Rishi (ascetic) who was a great ascetic, observing silence with pleasing form and indiscrimate behaviour. (8)

Then there was another great Rishi Atri (ascetic) who was a great scholar (treasure) of eighteen sciences. He had accepted the yogic life having discarded his kingdom and served Rudra, the source (treasure) of intangible assets. (9)

He observed yogic principles and style of life for a long time so that finally Rudra was pleased with him. (Then Rudra said), " O my son ! You ask for any benediction which you like most, and I will bestow on you the same type of blessing." (10)

When the Muni Atri stood up with folded hands, he gained a great fortune and his love became more intense. He was blessed with a very sweet tongue and his eyes were filled with water. So he spoke in a very cordial (elegant) manner, being full of exuberance and pleasantness. (11)

"O Rudra ! If you are really pleased with me and are blessing me with your benediction, then may I beget a son who should be a kin to you in all respect !" Rudra said, "It will be so, as you desire, " and then Rudra went into a trance. Then Atri Muni, with a great pensive (intelligent) mind also went back to his place. (12)

On coming back, he got married to a woman named Ansua. It appeared as if Shiva had given to Ansua his own true self in the form of her charming personality; while Brahma and Vishnu (gods) had also bestowed on Ansua their own splendour in her (body) beauty. (13)

For many years (days) Ansua was busy in doing yoga, in fact the woman called ansua was a collection of all the virtues. She possessed a charming and effulgent form with a glamorous personality. It seemed that the god of love (Kamdev) had assumed a second Form (in her body). (14)

Her beauty and charm was renowned all over and her wedded life was also a shining example of perfection. On perceiving her beauty, persons with all the (sixteen) worldly qualities were getting enamoured with her. Her glory was beyond description. (15)

On seeing her charm, even the moon was feeling (jealous) peevish and agitated. Her eyes were so beautiful that the lotus would get (burnt) annoyed on seeing them. Her hair would put total (blinding) darkness even to shame and Sumer Mountain was trying to hide on seeing the beauty of her back (would feel belittled). (16)

On seeing (the beauty of) her neck, the pigeon was feeling agitated and on seeing her nose, the parrot would also run away to the forest (feeling ashamed) and on seeing her charming beauty, the river Jamuna felt ashamed and furious, thus drowning herself in the expanse of the ocean (got mingled with the ocean). (17)

On seeing her (beautiful) arms, the lotus stems were feeling belittled (ashamed) and seeing her gait the swan was feeling (agitated) jealous, and the banana was jealous of her beautiful legs and the moon felt its beauty only second to that of Ansua's.(18)

Her beautiful embellishments have been thus detailed and no poet could ever attempt to describe her charming beauty. The Muni Atri once saw such a beautiful woman, which had even surpassed any royal beauty (or beauty of a princess). (19)

The woman also resolved in her mind at that moment that she would get married to a person with full affection who would not enjoy sensuous pleasure with her and who could bear (tolerate) this holy (pure) sufferings (who would not have any sexual relationship with her). (20)

The Rishi Atri got married to her accepting her condition (of abstinence). It seemed he had controlled (snatched) all her beautiful embellishments. He took her home after accepting her as his spouse (after marrying), and Atri Muni became the father of Dutt later. (21)

Now the episode of Dutt, an Incarnation of Rudra, begins

Tomar Chhand :

Many years had passed after their marriage, when a great social gathering (function) was organized at their place and the great gods like Brahma came there. The woman Ansua served them with great regard and affection. (22)

The wise women served them with many offerings and great illumination of lamps and incense along with jubilation and seeing her charming and sweet words and srvice, the gods Shiva, Vishnu and Indra were feeling elated (pleased) while sitting together. (23)

Even (her spouse) The Rishi was greatly satisfied and pleased with her service and devotional behaviour who was known and renowned in the three worlds (regions). On that occasion, Brahma got pleased and blessed here like this. "O beautiful women ! May you beget a son." (24)

Brahma said like this, " O woman ! You will beget a son. "On hearing these words, tears came to her eyes, dripping profusely. (25)

Then the body of the woman (Ansua) became confounded (impatient) and she became furious with rage. Tears were flowing from her eyes, and she became almost pale. Due to her extreme disturbed mind her speech became indignant, in fact for her, during the day itself, it appeared like nightfall. (26)

Her body became confounded and impatient. Being helpless, she became furios with rage. Her eyes and lips were fluttering and were talking without any sense (meaningless). (27)

Mohan Chhand :

On hearing such words, the woman with deer likes eyes and most beautiful woman. (28)

Her pure heart became restless and Muni Attri's spouse became furious with rage. (29)

She started pulling out her hair, as the beautiful spouse of Atri Muni became violent with rage. She was looking beautiful. (30)

She was plucking her necklace and pulling out her hair (of head) and throwing dust in the hair, as she was getting furious. (31)

Tomar Chhand :

On seeing the ferocity of the Muni's apouse, the benevolent Brahma rushed away from there ; Shiva taking all other Rishis with him, forgetting his own ego, became frightened. (32)

Then getting furious with rage, the Muni's wife plucked out the tuft of hair from her head. When she struck her hand on the other hand, then Dutt was born. (33)

His left hand was like the mother, and the right hand resembled that of his father Atri) when the lady had rubbed her hands (one on the other) then due to his mingling of hands, the son Dutt was born to her. (34)

The mighty Dutt, with a strong body, could recite the seven smritis (Hindu literature) and with his tongue he could recite the four Vedas. Thus the great son, Dutt was born. (35)

Shiva was then reminded of his previous curse, and he himself assumed the form (body) of Dutt and was born to Ansua. Thus this was his first incarnation (birth). (36)

Padhri Chhand :

Thus the great Muni (ascetic) Dutt was born, who was a treasure of the eighteen sciences. He possessed the knowledge of shastras and had a charming personality. He was a great ascetic and a leader (king) of all the groups. (37)

He manifested the cults of mendicants (recluses) and yogis,. He possessed an honest, pure and humble personality. It seemed as if all the yogic qualities had taken the human form. He had renounced all the worldly pleasure including princely habits or wealth. (38)

He had an indestructible form, and was greatly renowned being praiseworthy, having knowledge of fourteen sciences and was a treasure of splendor and glory. He possessed all the qualities of the sun, air fire with the nature of water. He was born as a recluse king in the world. (39)

Dutt was born as a form of recluse king being an Incarnation of the invincible Rudra. His might was akin to that of fire, and his patience was comparable to that of the Earth. (40)

The Dutt god was infinitely pure, and his magnificence was indivisible and his wisdom was transparent. The god was even jealous of his body (beauty) and on his head there was a tuft of hair like the waters of Ganga (waves of Ganga waters), on his head. (41)

His arms were long enough touching his knees, and his (beauty) personality was detached (neutral). He possessed a mighty character, with a charming personality. A fresh fragrance was spreading (coming) from the majesty of his limbs (ash rubbed on the body) and he manifested the cult of asceticism (ascetic yoga). (42)

His limbs were infinitely glorious (praiseworthy), and this is how the ascetic cult was created. His body was marvelous with a (special) grand glamour. He was a great ascetic with a radiant glamour. (43)

He possessed a great luster (brightness) with indescribable dignity (praise), and was a mighty ascetic. With his (birth) appearance on Earth, malice (hypocrisy) started crumbling and he disclosed deceit-less (fraud less) atmosphere (surroundings).(44)

His praise was undisputed and his body (personality) was marvelous (magnificent). Perceiving such a son, the mother was wonder struck (bewildered) ; people all over the land (interior and foreign lands) were left wondering. The pride (egoism) of all the Rishis was (abandoned) thrown aside on hearing his arrival (birth). (45)

All the inhabitants of the whole land, including Netherlands and skies (beautiful palaces) became perturbed in their hearts on hearing about his arrival (birth) and their bodies were trembling (with fear and wonder). Their hair stood apart (on hearing) due to their mirthfulness. (pleasant surprise). The whole land was amused and delighted (on his birth). (46)

The whole Earth and the sky were trembling and everywhere the Rishis (ascetics) had given up their egoism (pride), and the sky was resounding with the music of various types (various musical instruments were being played). For ten days there was no nightfall to be seen. (47)

Everywhere different types of music were being heard rationalism (discretion) had taken birth in human form. His glory was indescribable and this is how asceticism was born (was introduced on Earth). (48)

From his very birth he took to ascetic practices (yogic principles). He propagated religious practices destroying sins (of all types) and great many Rajas became his followers, and had started practicing asceticism. (49)

The Raja Dutt appeared beautiful and wonderful in his form and various other kings became his stooges (fell at his feet). They all look up to Raja Dutt (as guide) who was proficient in the eighteen sciences. (50)

He had a tuft of hair looking glorious on his head while his hands were full up with religious principles (nails of a discipline were grown). The state of being free from whims and fancies was appearing marvellous from his personality, and following of Brahminical practices was his personal character. (51)

The wonderful facial beauty was hidden inside the body ; in fact the abstinence from fraud and deceit, in fact, is an ascetic (basic) function. His main posture is a complete meditation posture (of complete silence) and detachment from worldly love (attachments) are real functions of Yoga. The indestructible splendour reflects his main glamorous form and its praiseworthiness. (52)

He had forgotten all other hopes and worldly desires, having maintained regard only for the yoga of asceticism (ascetic principles). His spectacular body always remains morose and gloomy. His main job (function) as a muni (ascetic) was the relinquishment of all worldly desires. His eye, devoid of any brightness, was a picture of religious leanings (his religious principles). (53)

His mind, free from vicious thoughts and sinful actions, in fact, was keeping his body limbs in pensive mood (unperturbed by worldly pleasures). His indestructible glory and praise worthy eyes were worth considering (his contemplative eyes were praise worthy) ; and with one hope at heart his mind was always gloomy. He was a perfect ascetic. (54)

His body was free from any sinful actions, and was looking glamorous. He was a great scholar of Vedas and an ocean of kindness and benevolence. That muni (ascetic) possessed a great mind (intelligent) and had many qualities. It appeared a great scholar (with great knowledge) had been born. (55)

His body had never enacted any sinful action (sin had never touched his body), and was full of great many qualities (virtues), with a beautiful body. He was a great ascetic observing abstinence (celibate) having a purified body. His mother was getting wonder struck by perceiving him. (56)

His body was a reflection of a great ascetic and seeing his glamour (splendour) even the god of love (Kamdev) was feeling ashamed (belittled). The Muni 'Dutt Dev' was the king of asceticism, who had been embellished with all the qualities of an ascetic. (57)

His body was sanctified (pure) and worldly desires had never been his mainstay in life. His tuft of hair had glorified his head. Thus the King of ascetic had assumed such a beautiful form. (58)

His brilliance (splendour) was manifold which cannot be described (beyond description). On hearing about it, the demi-gods and Shiva's musicians had become benumbed (silent). Even Brahma was bewildered on thinking about his glory and the god of love (Kamdev) was feeling shy (ashamed) on seeing his splendour. (59)

He was a great scholar and was an adept in all his functions. He was devoid of any desires (hopes) and was always at the service of the Lord-sublime. His splendour was akin to the brilliance of millions of suns and the moon in the sky was feeling bewildered on seeing him (his glory). (60)

He was born as an embodiment of Yoga (man of principle) and was engaged in the great and praiseworthy worship of The Lord. First of all Dutt had left his home (abandoned his homely life). He possessed a clear and transparent wisdom (with great intelligence). (61)

When he had performed a great worship for many days, in the end, the god of death (prime-soul) got pleased with him, and a heavenly voice said, "O king of ascetics ! Listen with attention ! " (62)

The heavenly voice told to Dutt

Padhri Chhand :

Dutt ! You will not attain salvation without the guidance of Guru. O Dutt, with a sanctified wisdom ! Listen to me carefully, what I am telling you. First of all you should embrace (assume) the guidance of a true Guru (guide) and then only you will attain salvation. Thus the god of death (timeless god) proclaimed this mode of attaining salvation to him for practicing. (63)

On hearing this heavenly verdict, Dutt made his proper obeisance to the Lord, and became a disciple of the Lord without any worldly hopes or desires. Then he got involved in yogic exercises (meditation and worship) in many ways, which was devoid of any slander (defamation) and was praiseworthy. (64)

Then Dutt Dev saluted him and said words of praise for the Lord Almighty, who was beyond discrimination, who was a great yogi and king (king emperor) and his presence is felt everywhere (though) being formless. (65)

The Lord, whose glory was felt everywhere, in lands and oceans and whose virtues were being sung by great many Munis (ascetics) and the Vedas had described Him as infinite and omni-potent. He was beyond our comprehension and His presence was known in the beginning, in the middle and end of time (ever-existent). (66)

The Lord-sublime (The one Lord) had assumed many forms, and who had created this Earth and the sky with great skill and intelligence. He was known everywhere, in the lands and the skies and oceans. He was devoid of any form (of life) fearless and was beyond the hope of anyone. (67)

He was renowned as pure and righteous (of the highest order). He was having his arms extending up to his knees, fearless and invincible. He was well-known and perfect human being, having knowledge of Puranas. He was king of Kings and a great lover of worldly pleasures. (68)

He was having an indivisible splendour and was self-effulgent. He was a great swordsman, and was full of six virtues and appeared glamorous. His brilliance was (renowned) infinite and was beyond description. Then He was controlling all the religious forms and directing them on the right path. (69)

He was of an infinite brilliance, and was known as following a divine purpose and free from any defamation. All the occult powers were lying at His lotus feet and all the sins would take to wings on his mention. (70)

He possessed a virtuous nature, full of gentleness and saintliness. There was no other outlet except taking to his support. To help the poor and helpless people, was in his habit only. The moment, anyone calls out his name, he was willing to help or support them. (71)

He was free from any fault and having an indestructible glory. His seat of power was unshakable and a comfort lending place. He possessed countless virtues present in his personality. Even friends and foes would be always (liking him) enamoured of him. (72)

He treated both his friends and foes with equal regard, taking praise or slander equally. His seat (of authority) was unshakable and his personality was indivisible and his beauty was impregnable. He was highly pure (transparent), sanctified and he was the king emperor. (73)

His tongue was uttering sweet words like the nectar and the sword in his hand looked very graceful. The gods and demons were equally enamoured by seeing him. He was not an enemy towards anyone and was having glamour of his own. He possessed an indivisible body and free from any hopes all the time (during day and night). (74)

His brilliance was always of the same order from beginning to end. He was blessed with six limbs and a treasure of all qualities (mannerism). His radiant personality was looking glorious, and seeing his splendour both the demi-gods and Shiva's musicians were equally impressed. (75)

His body was indestructible and was looking radiant with sensation (feeling). His presence was perceived percolating through the beings of the world. He had created many beings (of various forms) but finally all would merge into one form only.(76)

He was not affected by Time's web (snare) and was not influenced by sin any time. His glamour was unaffected (by anyone) and was free from physical entity. He was of the same form at all times, be it day, night or dawn. (77)

Thus Dutt had recited such a version (reading of books) of religious studies that the sins would vanish at its reading. (78)

Who could venture to describe his glory, so it has been described in brief ?

If the whole Earth would become a paper, and we were to write on it Ganesh (Lord) with pride, with all the oceans as ink and all the forest were to become pens, even then sheshnag could not describe its infinite form. (79)

Even if Brahma were to praise him (by sitting in meditation) then he would not be able to detail his glorious personality. If the sheshnag, with thousand fangs, were to utter his praises, he would not be able to say it all. (80)

Even Sanak and sanatan were worshipping him day and night but they could not explain his splendour fully. Brahma, with four faces, who had pronounced the four Vedas, also thought of him as infinite (beyond description) after getting free from his egoism. (81)

Shiva had performed yoga (worshipped) for thousands of years and had taken to exile in the forest leaving the worldly pleasures. He meditated and worshipped for long, but could not attain his limits (infinite qualities). (82)

He possessed one form but had manifested himself in many ways (forms). His glory was beyond description, and he remained aloof from worldly attachments all the time (during day and night). His posture always remained unperturbed (unshakeable) and his glory was impregnable (permanent). He could be realized only through perception and his splendour was very glamorous. (83)

For him, friend and foe had no discrimination (being equal) and whose glory was beyond description and his praises were limitless. He had one form only, from beginning to end. The glorious Lord had created this whole (world) universe in its wonderful form. (84)

He had no colour, shape, symbol or account and was without any name or place and was devoid of any surface, example and uncommitted to any faith (no other parallel to him). He possessed arms with length up to knees (with all powers) and could be perceived only through his glory. His brilliance was infinite and His charming glory had its own fragrance. (85)

Many had been meditating (worshipping on Him for ages (Yugas) and many Yugas had passed by, but their mind was never stable (they had not meditated on Him with undivided attention). Many Munis (ascetics) had meditated on the all-powerful Lord-sublime, a treasure of manifold qualities and they had undergone many sufferings, notwithstanding all their efforts, they could not concentrate on Him. (86)

He had transformed Himself from one from to manifold forms and finally (converted) restricted Himself back into one form only. He had created millions of beings, which finally got mingled into His single entity only. (87)

The beings of the whole world had taken support of the same Lord-sublime and great many Munis had been meditating on His lotus-feet only. Many years (ages) had passed by when people had been worshipping Him, but without realizing His greatness or perceived His physical entity. (88)

His brilliance was infinite, and His glory was beyond description. He was extremely kind and benign who was enthroned in the hearts of great Munis (seers). His glamour was indestructible, and His might was limitless, which human mind (intelligence) could not grasp (being beyond comprehension). (89)

He possessed one form only, from the beginning to the end. His glory, could never be diminished and His praise-worthiness was always in ascendance (brilliant). He had manifested all the flames of light and had destroyed the egoistic tendencies (egoism) of all proud people. (90)

He had not spared even one egoistic (proud) person (from punishment). He had never refuted His own words, once spoken. (He had never gone back on His word). He, having destroyed the enemy once, would not harm him again. He would strike his arrow once only, and will not strike again. (91)

Once having established His slaves, He would not be away from them again. Having noticed the flaw (fault) of His saints once then He would excuse them by laughing it away. Once He gave support to someone, He would not withdraw it, and continues to support till the end.
Once he got married to a woman, he would not marry another (again). (92)

He does not get pleased with millions of acts of penance, but with recitation of His True Name alone, He would bestow salvation. He is free from any deceit, and could be attained through perception alone. He is a picture of perfection with all the six qualities, and remains free from all worldly hopes at all times (day and night). (93)

He is perfectly transparent (pure) and perfectly complete in all respects, His glory is beyond destruction, and He is a treasure of splendour (praise). he is pure, renowned and perfectly pious. His arms are long enough reaching up to knees (all powerful), He is fearless, and is unconquerable. (94)

There are millions of Indras (gods) as His water carriers and there are countless moons, suns and Krishna's as Incarnations. There are innumerable Vishnu's, Rudras, Rams and Rasools (Mohammad's) but none was acceptable in His court except through true worship (with love). (95)

There were many Dutts, Truth seekers, Gorakh Devs, meditative Munis and Machhindras who had not been able to attain His secrets. They were busy in propagating their own religious paths (ways) through many of their mantras (magical words) but all of them had failed, except having the support and hopes of one Supreme Being. (96)

The Lord, whom the Vedas had described as infinite and manifold, and He was beyond the reach of all causes or efforts. No one knew to which caste or creed He belonged, and He had no father, brother, son or mother even. (97)

No one knew His colour, form and He was the king of kings, and the greatest Raja amongst Rajas. He possessed no caste, creed or Varun and whose (His) praises are manifold. From the very beginning he was infinite, limitless, and free from any ills or vices. (98)

It is not possible to detail His colour, signs or symbols and He was most brilliant, limitless, and most powerful, being devoid of any form. He was having an indivisible mind, and a form sans any vicious thoughts. He was the greatest god (god of gods) having a glorious praiseworthiness (glamour). (99)

For Him there was no distinction (difference) between praise and slander and His brilliance was indestructible, with the greatest splendour. His heart was pure being devoid of any vices, and He was attained (manifested) through perception (feeling) only. He was pervading everywhere (in all beings) and remained aloof (free from hopes) all the time (during day and night). (100)

Dutt had detailed His praises beautifully, whom the son of kindly Muni Atri had paid his obeisance by prostrating before Him and then worshipped His lotus feet in manifold ways and His caste or creed is beyond our comprehension. (101)

No one could ever decipher His limits (as He was limitless and infinite) and qualities for ages (many Yugas). "O Lord ! My intelligent thinking is very limited (less) while your grandeur (qualities) is limitless (infinite). I fail to decribe your vastness as your greatness was beyond my comprehension." (102)

O Lord ! Your virtues are infinite, being higher than the sky whereas I am like a child without any wisdom (knowledge) so how could I detail your glory ? Having given up all my efforts, I have taken support of your lotus feet. (I have fallen at your lotus feet). (103)

The Vedas had failed to decipher Lord's secrets, and His brilliance was beyond description and His praises (glory) were beyond destruction. Even Brahma had got tired (failed) to think aloud about His qualities, and then he remarked "Infinite, Lord was infinite." (104)

Brahma had fallen head long, being tired of describing Lord's praises (virtues). The sons of Brahma even were wondering (feeling wonder struck) in their mind. Even Brahma had failed (felt unable) to decribe His qualities and finally remarked setting aside his obatinacy, "Lord was Infinite." (105)

Rudra had spent millions of years (Yugas) in worshipping The Lord. Even Ganga had emanated (flown) from his tuff of hair (his head) but his mind was not diverted from Lord's worship (recitation of His Name). The Sadiks (mendicants) had spent many ages (years) in meditation of the Lord, but they had failed to conceptualize His form (presence) in the mind. (106)

When Brahma (had penetrated the lotus stem), who was the greatest Brahmin and the highest muni (ascetic), being the master of Brahmins, had failed to detect the other end of the stem. Then let us thoughfully accept that it was not possible to decipher the limits of the limitless Lord (The Lord sublime). (107)

His brilliant splendour was beyond any description. His brilliance was Infinite, with indestructible glory. (praise). The Lord had assumed many forms, so let us take the support of the Lord sublime, leaving aside all other leanings. (108)

Ruaal Chand :

Dutt, the Muni, Atri's son, went around singing lord's praises in various lands (countries) and forgetting about his egoism (pride) in many ways, he continued to take the support of the Lord. When he worshipped The Lord for many years (millions of years) with love and concentration, then a heavenly voice was heard saying. (109)

The heavenly voice told to Dutt.

"O Dutt ! I am telling you frankly that one cannot attain salvation without the guidance of a Guru." Even the Raja all the subjects etc, including poor people were saying the same thing. " Why are you undergo so much sufferings as this will not lead you to salvation ? " O Mumi Atri's son ! Listen to this good advice and accept the guidance of a Guru. " (110)

Then Dutt said

Ruaal Chhand :

When this heavenly voice (words) was heard, then Dutt, who was Truth personified, and ocean of softness and a river of good conduct, and a source (well) of knowledge, fell at the lotus feet (of the Lord) and making his obeisance said, " Pray tell me with full deliberations as to who should I take as my guide (Guru) ? (111)

The heavenly voice said

Whomsoever you like at heart, you may accept as your guide (Guru), and then serve him with full devotion by getting rid of your (egoism) and deceit ! When the Guru would get pleased with you, then he may bless you with some benedictions O wise Dutt ! Listen to me that you cannot attain salvation otherwise ! (112)

Whomsoever had given him the advice (on religion), he accepted him as his Gurdev (guide) and meditating on The Lord with his heart, he started for leading a life of worship (Yoga). The mother and father were trying to deviate him from this path, but he did not listen to even one word of theirs. He assumed many methods of Yoga and then proceeded further to the thickness of jungles. (113)

Going to dense forests, he performed penance of various types. With full devotion and concentration of mind he recited many mantras (cantos) or magical verses. When he had performed penance of a (tough) hard mode (type) for one year and undergoing sufferings, he worshipped The Lord, and the The Lord (treasure of wisdom) blessed him with true wisdom. (114)

When he was blessed with wisdom, he attained great intelligence and the Lord sublime (god of death) made Dutt Dev a great saint. Then suddenly his wisdom improved in all the directions, so Dutt propagated Truth and religion everywhere, so that the grave sins even gave a slip from there (disappeared). (115)

He accepted first of all The Lord sublime as his guide (Guru), who was ever existent (without destruction) and who was omni present, pervading everywhere. He had created the four modes of creation (reproduction) viz from the eggs, from the semen, from perspiration and the vegetable kingdom. Thus Dutt Muni (ascetic Dut) accepted Him, the Ultimate Truth (True Lord) as his guide (Guru). (116)

Here the episode of Dutt's acceptance of the Indestructible Lord (Prime Soul) at his Guru (guide) is completed. (1)

Ruaal Chhand :

The Muni Dutt Dev, with a purified mind and a treasure of Yoga, then accepted his mind as his second guide (Guru) within himself. When the mind is purified and is agreeable then it realizes The Lord within itself. O Muni dear, Listen ! Then only The True value of this mind is realized among with its hopes and desires. (117)

Bhujang prayat Chhand :

When Dutt had embraced these Gurus, then he started serving them (both) with full concentration and devotion daily. He had a tuft of hair on his head, which was the source of waves from Ganga and his body was never affected (overcome) by the god of love (by sexual desires). (118)

He had the glamour of pure magnificence in his body, which would enamour even the most egoistic Munis (ascetics) and his tuft of matted hair was the source of Ganga waves (pure thoughts). He was a great man of wisdom, kindly and a treasure of learning. (119)

His yellow coloured robes were shining, with a loincloth tied to his waist. He had given up all his hopes and he was reciting only Guru's magic word (Mantar) repeatedly, and the great Muni was observing complete silence and was following all the basic principles (rules) of yogic exercises (yoga). (120)

He was an ocean (source) of munificence and was performing all virtuous deeds. He was having a majestic personality, which could destroy the pride of (egoism) all others, and he had been observing all forms of (rules of yoga) yogic principles. He was observing complete (perfect) silence, having attained the occult powers. (121)

He would get up early in the morning and proceed for taking bath and then recite his prayers (sandhya), and worship as per yoga (yogic principles) as he preferred yoga. He was having far-sightedness and had attained the Prime Soul (The Ultimate truth). He was an ascetic of great wisdom (with great learning). (122)

When he was pestered by hunger or thirst, then he remained unperturbed with concentrated mind, and did not allow his mind to get scattered (disturbed). He was observing the principles of yoga, being devoid of any hopes and remained aloof (disconsolate). In fact, he had attained the effulgence of the Lord supreme (Prime Soul) by observing perfect concentration of mind. (123)

He was a great lover of spiritual bliss and eternal truth (essence of life) and remained stable in one posture alone, and was a great celibate. He was performing truthful actions and weould destroy all sinful actions. The great Muni possessed a stable mind, and always remained aloof (disconsolate), free from bondage. (124)

He had the knowledge of all shastras and was capable of destroying all sinful actions. He was always abiding in thick jungles and was having a nature of serious thoughts or with a disconsolate nature. He had given up all the vices like sexual desires, anger, greed and worldly attachments ; the great Muni was shining like a flame of great yoga with glamour. (125)

He was practicing one particular yogic exercise (yoga) in many ways and was practicing celibacy of the highest order. He was an expert recluse and a follower of Truthful behaviour. He was always free from worldly hopes and was always devoid of worldly hopes (desires) and free from sufferings. (126)

He was free hopes, agreat celibate, and a great ascetic or recluse. He was in the know of the Ultimate truth, devoid of any hopes, with an ascetic nature. He had practiced all forms of yoga with full concentration of mind. Having desired everyone, he had endeared himself to the Lord, leaving everyone else. (127)

He had been standing with his feet pointing upwards in the heat of smoke, and was swinging in a flame of fire, but his meditation was not disrupted. He was a great celibate and immensely religious person. In fact, Dutt was an Incarnation of Shiva only. (128)

He was very persistent (obstinate), practicing penance and silence and reciting mantras (magical verses). In fact, Dutt was a treasure of (source of) The Lord's knowledge (secrets) and was practicing yoga, having given up all (royal) worldly pleasures. All the gods were astonished while the whole populace was surprised. (129)

The demigods and Shiva's musicians, treasure of learning, were also bewildered and even the gods, the moon, the sun and the demons and (human) beings were surprised to see the glamorous figure as a magical wand. All the kings, giving up their egoism, had sought refuge at his lotus feet. (130)

Even the ascetics those wearing tufts of hair, mendicants, those engaged in penance, celibates, all those yogis in different garbs including those across the mountains with great power, those living within the mountains, mighty residents of Balakh and Bengalis Room's and Ruhales (all had bowed to him). (131)

All others including those with matted hair with magical powers, those with deceits, aji, amri and with sacrificial actions, those playing with fire, gamblers, those engaged in Yagnas, celibates and those curbing their sexual desires.(had bowed to him).(132)

All the (countries with) mighty kings (having canopies overhead) had given up their pride and fallen at his lotus feet. They were all now practicing renunciation (asceticism) and all became followers of the path (shown by Dutt). (133)

All the people came from various lands and got themselves shaved off by Dutt himself and donned matted hair tufts on their heads. So many people started following asceticism. (134)

Ruaal Chand :

All the kings from various lands had come there and the leading kings had fallen at the lotus feet of the Dutt as their Guru. Having discarded their new paths, they started following the path of Dutt, and then all the royal princes had got their heads shaved off, having given up their rich treasures and royal glamour. (135)

Having accepted Dutt as their Guru, all of them paid obeisance to (Dutt) him. All of them, scholars of shastras and armed with weapons, now came dressed as slaves, to the indivisible and manifold Dutt, whose body was indestructible and uncommitted and it was rather difficult to know the secrets of his yoga. The mighty Dutt was created (born) as pious, invincible and infinite. (136)

On seeing his beautiful personality the living and inanimate beings were getting bewildered and all the gods in their chariots were moving around in the heavens to watch him. Everywhere the Rajas were keenly watching Dutt like statues, and all had adopted the path of renunciation (ascetics) having discarded their royal thrones, weapons and renowned positions. People from all over the land had become ascetics and were paying obeisance to him. (137)

Indra and Upindra (gods) are feeling bewildered in their minds, while the sun and the moon are equally shocked. Indra was getting worried lest Dutt may not snatch his kingdom. All other gods, seated in their chariots everywhere, were getting elated and were paying obeisance to Dutt taking him as their great Guru (guide). (138)

Everywhere in all the ten directions, all the Rajas, casting away their glamorous kingdoms, were falling at the lotus feet of benevolent Dutt. All were giving regards and paying respects to Dutt as their Guru with affection, having cast away their pride. (139)

All the Rajas, leaving their royal glory, were becoming ascetics and were performing yoga, being disconsolate. Having smeared their bodies with ash they were trying to look pious and were donning (wearing) a tuft of matted hair on their heads. All were looking glorious and praiseworthy in many ways, having given up their wealth and royal glitter. (140)

All the Rajas everywhere had discarded their sons , friends, spouses and wealth along with their victory letters, and adopted asceticism. Having given up their swift horses or grand elephants and royal grandeur, they were becoming recluses and started abiding in the forests. (141)

Padhri Chhand (with lord's Grace)

Thus all the kings on the Earth, discarding their kingdoms, were adopting asceticism at the earliest. Some were engrossed in yogic exercises and dressed (covered) with animal skins, were meditating on the Lord. (142)

Some were covering their bodies with the bark of trees, while some others were standing with arms raised upwards for long hours, some others were taking only milk for their food, while some others were having no food for many years. (143)

There were some others, being free from any worldly hopes or desires, were engaged in yogic exercises. Some were only paying regards to the one Lord sublime being controlled by Him. Some were worshipping and repeating the name of the goddess (Siama) only. (152)

Some of them were pinning their hopes on the one Lord Almighty being devoid of any worldly desires or hopes. Some were undergoing (body) sufferings of many types, while some others were relating the discourses of The Lord only. Some others were keen to attain (the permit for) salvation (before their death). (153)

Some were paying their obeisance at the abode of the Lord-Sublime while some others were having the support of the Lord Almighty only. (Lord's True Name), and recite the Lord's various names while some others attain Salvation (from the Lord) from worldly bondage. (154)

Some of them were repeating The Lord's True Name during day and night. Some were performing fire worship by concentrating their mind on the Lord Sublime. Some others were reading Shastras and Smritis while some others were doing virtuous deeds as per the principles (rules) of the godly (holy) persons. (155)

Some were performing haven (fire worship) and giving away alms (gifts) as per Vedic rites. Some friends would get together and read Shastras, while some others were reading the four Vedas. Some others were having discourses on the supreme authority with lot of lnowledge (learning). (156)

Some would call various poor people and (serve) feed them with sumptuous food during day and night. Some were reading religious books and some others were chewing wood, leaving food. (157)

Padhri Chhand :

Some were meditating (on the Lord) I various ways, while some others get together and sing the Lord's praises, while some others listen to this (with ears). Some others listen to the recitation of the religious books while some others, even at the end of the Yuga (age) would not stop performing such actions. (158)

Some were sitting and taking water only as their food (for sustenance) while some others were roaming around foreign lands or mountains for solace. Some others would enter great caves and meditate on the Lord. While some others were practicing celibacy (bathing in the river of celibacy). (159)

Some were sitting in water for long periods (time), while some burn fires and sit around feeling its warmth for long, while some ascetics observe silence for long periods. Some keep one hope (of salvation) in their hearts, leaving all other worldly hopes (desires). (160)

Some people feel their bodies were steady and stable, while no vices were affecting their limbs. Their glory was great, and their beauty was indestructible (imperishable). They become fearless and could be renowned through their inner feelings (religious revelation) their glamour could not be depicted and remain gloomy (morose) throughout day and night. (161)

Thus many of them performed (followed) the yogic path, but none of them, without the guidance of the Guru, attained salvation, then they fell at the feet of the great Dutt, and said, " O Gurdev ! Pray tell us the yogic path." (162)

Those of them, who were shaved off in the water, were called Bani whereas many followers were accepted in the mountains and they were called Giri, due to their form (dress). (163)

Those of the many followers, mentioned in the Bharath, were named as 'Bharthi' whereas the followers accepted in the towns were called 'Puri'. (164)

Those followers, accepted in the mountains (parbat) were named Parbati. Thus there were five categories of followers and then Dutt went into relaxation. (165)

The followers accepted in the oceans, were called "Sagari', while the followers made on the banks of Saraswati were called with an added name of Saraswati. (166)

Those followers accepted in the places of pilgrimage (Tiraths) were given an added name of Trithi. All those persons who took shelter at the lotus feet of Dutt, were given the treasure of knowledge (became learned). (167)

Those persons, who were made followers at old places, wherever he went, and those made followers in the ashrams (religious places) as he went to those places, were given the added name of 'ashramis', and glorified thus. (168)

Those of the followers, who were accepted in the jungles (ban) and became ascetics with a pious mind wherever Dutt had gone, and accepted them as followers were given the name of agini. (169)

Padhri Chhand :

The princely Muni Dutt, with arms extending up to the knees, with a great sway and unexpressed effulgence, and a great ascetic, was responsible for casting an inexplicable glamour and pure wisdom, wherever he would go. (170)

The kings from various lands including distant lands, would pay their obeisance to Dutt, casting away their egoism and moulding mind (adapting) accordingly. They had given up their false activities (prentensions) and embraced (had fallen at) the lotus feet of the princely ascetic (Dutt). (171)

Having given up all their worldly desires, they had only one desire (hope) and their mind was purified being devoid of all sinful actions (thoughts). Wherever Dutt used to go, in various lands or foreign (distant) lands, all the great kings from those lands would get up and follow him meekly. (172)

Couplet :

Wherever the Muni Dutt, with an infinite (great) mind, would proceed, (as the subjects there) would accompany him leaving all their worldly possessions. (173)

Choupaiee :

Whichever country was visited by the great Muni Dutt, all the people there (high and low) would accompany him. How could anyone escape being anamoured by Dutt, as he possessed a grand personality and having knowledge of Yoga also ? You may ponder over it but the conclusion would be same. (174)

Everywhere the cult of asceticism (Yoga) was being followed and the Rajas had given up their behaviour (glamour) and become recluse. There was no place in sight where the asceticism was not being followed. (175)

Here the episode of taking one's mind as the second Guru is completed. (2)
Now the episode of the Third Guru (guide) Makarka begins.

Choupaiee :

Thus the Muni (Dutt) had embraced (accepted) twenty-four (choubis) Gurus, which I am going to describe. So listen to me. Dutt saw one spider, (Makraka), and then thought to himself (in his mind). (176)

He thought to himself that he would take (accept) the spider as his third Guru. He felt that like the spider he should extend the cord of love for the Lord, devoid of Maya (worldly falsehood), just like the spider, for attaining the Lord. (177)

When the spider thinks of itself involved in the web, similarly if the human being were to look (keep) within himself for his true image, then he could perceive the Lord sublime (Prime soul) within himself. When the mind, leaving the thought of the one prime soul within, will not wander around, then only the individual will attain the Lord supreme. (178)

The human being should perceive the Lord's entity only as the single one within, without having any love for the dual mindedness (the love of Maya). One should not run after another one, leaving the desire of meeting the One Lord, and then only the individual could attain the Lord. (179)

One should mingle one's entity (existence) with the Lord's entity and leaving this love (of Lord) one should not think of another one's hope or desire. One should meditate only on one prime soul, and then only one could attain the Lord Sublime. (180)

Thus he (Dutt) realized the Makraka (spider) as the third Guru and the proud Dutt advanced futher. When he thought of the spider in this manner and meditated on the spider in the mind, then with an elevated mind Dutt moved further. (181)

Choupaiee :

When the Guru Dutt moved away further, then he saw the crane, the eater of fish (the dramatist) who was standing quitely. He saw him as white coloured bird, which was thinking (meditating) intensely and all the ascetics feel ashamed on seeing his devotion. (182)

Thus this crane concentrates on catching hold of the fish (with single-mindedness) thus with this vicious act he brings dishonor to the whole clan of cranes. But the way the crane concentrates on one single objective only, his motive (act) appealed to the ascetic Dutt's mind. (183)

If we were to concentrate and meditate on the Lord Sublime like this (devotion), then we could attain the Lord. The mind of Dutt was overwhelmed (endeared) on seeing the crane, the catcher of fish, so he accepted him as the Fourth Guru. (184)

Choupaiee :

The great Muni Dutt advanced (moved) further who had the tuft of matted hair looking glamorous on his head. As he went ahead, he saw a male cat, so the Muni got keenly interested in watching him. (185)

The way he was concentrating on catching a rat, on seeing his concentration even the great mahants (mendicants) would feel belittled. If we were to concentrate on attaining the Lord like this cat, then only we could attain the Lord Sublime. (186)

So I have accepted him as my fifth guru (guide), so having said this, he (Dutt) thought in his mind accordingly. If anyone were to meditate with concentration like this, he would surely attain the Lord Sublime. (187)

Choupaiee :

The princely ascetic then moved further, who having held one hope (desire), forgot about the other supports (as hopes). Then he saw a person, ginning cotton (who would not divert his attention even if gold were to distract his interest) and the ascetic (Muni) thought in his mind thus. (188)

Then this ginner did not bother to notice the moving army of the king near him, and (involved in his work) his head was bent down attending to his work alone. The whole army was moving near him, but he did not bother to look at it (being busy in work). (189)

While ginning the cotton, he did not even look up, as his head (neck) was bent down (attending to his work). Seeing this scene, the Muni Dutt smiled within himself, and accepted him as the sixth guru (guide). (190)

Now the episode of the fisherman as the seventh guru begins.

Choupaiee :

Then the ascetic Dutt moved away from there, whose mind was purified and fully keeping himself secluded (as a recluse). He saw a fisherman catching fish, who was going with a net in hand, and this was beyond description. (192)

He was carrying a stick in hand, fitted with a (catching) hook. He was carrying on his shoulders some nets, and was moving like a blind man completely absorbed in the catch of fish (he was not conscious of anything else around him except the catching of fish). He was only concentrating on catching a fish. It seemed as if he was not breathing even. (193)

He was standing in the hope of catching a fish alone, and it seemed he was not worried about the royal presence (about king's presence). So we should also develop such a love for the Lord with full devotion, so as to attain the Lord Sublime. (194)

Choupaiee :

She was fully concentrating (on her job) with full attention, without letting her mind to divert (deviate), seeing whom even the picture (painting) on the paper was feeling ashamed (belittled) of it. (196)

The ascetic Dutt, along with other ascetics went past her, brushing aside her body, but she did not even look up by raising her head, whether any king or pauper had passed by her side. (197)

On perceiving her, Dutt was moved (impressed) and accepted her as the eighth guru. (He said to himself) that this woman was truly praiseworthy, who was devoted to here master so much, with love and devotion. (198)

If we were to develop such devotion for the Lord Sublime, then only we could attain the Lord Sublime, free from worldly falsehood (Maya). The Lord could not be grasped without developing such a devoted attitude (attention) and love for Him. The Vedas had revealed this secret even. (199)

Choupaiee :

The great Muni, with matted hair tuft moved further and was having many followers along with him. He was moving across the forests, towns and mountains, watching the whole lot, when he saw a banjara (trader) coming that way. (200)

He was loaded with wealth (material) of all types, and had started with a load of merchandise on the backs of a group of bullocks. It included many bags of cloves. Even Brahma could not express the details of this entire load. (201)

He was always hoping to gain more wealth day and night as such he had left his place (house) for selling his merchandise, and he did not entertain any other desire at heart. He had developed only one hope (desire) of disposing off his goods.(202)

Then the Muni, leaving all those desires (hopes) worth discarding, proceeded further. He was a great ascetic practicing complete silence. He was a great praiseworthy person, having knowledge of the True Lord and the great Muni was the beloved of the Lord-Supreme. (205)

He was a grand scholarly person, with glamorous fortune and a great ascetic, who was completely absorbed in the love of the Lord Almighty. He was completely attuned to the worship of the Lord with devotion and was adept in all the six virtues and was immersed in the pleasure of reciting True Name. (206)

At his very sight, the doubts and attachment would vanish from the liver (of people), and all of them get involved in the Lord's worship. All the sins and sufferings take to their heels, and people were immersed in the recitation of True Name during day and night (all the time). (208)

There he met one Kachhin (an ordinary woman from Kachh) who was shouting a warning for the people, saying that anyone becoming careless about the fields would be lost (any farmer being negligent will have his crop destroyed). This idea was contemplated by the Muni (ascetic) in his mind, and accepted her as the tenth guru (guide). (209)

Whosoever would become careless in life (would go to sleep in life) would lose the basic ideal of life. We have accepted her warning (saying) as truthful. All those involved in Yoga meditation (yogic exercises), would be able to appreciate this fact. (210)

Then Dutt Dev moved further, who was an adept in the art of Yoga (yogic exercises). He had an image of a transparent king with a splendour of his own. It appeared as if he was a second Raja Harish Chander. (211)

He had perfected all the aspects of the art of Yoga, and had attained the occult powers as a great ascetic. He had such a glamorous effect all around, perceiving which even (god) Indra's throne (existence) was in jeopardy. (212)

Madhbhar Chhand :
With Thy Grace.

The ascetic (Dutt), with a benevolent heart and having all the virtues within himself, was immersed in the worship of the Lord Sublime and was following the will of the Lord. (213)

He had given up all royalties and worldly pleasures and had embraced asceticism, and then attaining the position of a great ascetic, he was engaged in the Lord's worship with great love and devotion. (214)

His was radiant with a halo around it, as if he was a personification of God. He was full of wisdom like the sharpness of the sword, and a great man of learning. (215)

His personality had a charm and glamour of his own, which was beyond praise or description, and had a brilliant outlook. The Muni Dutt possessed a benevolent heart. (216)

The king of ascetics was a source (treasure) of virtues, and was indiscriminate. His appearance was distinct and his praiseworthiness was of the highest order. (217)

His nature was very presentable and pleasant, with a berilliant appearance, and was very praiseworthy as he was a bunch of many virtues. (218)

There was a Raja by the name of Surab, who was very wealthy and very sociable and was worshipping Chandi (goddess) day and night. (219)

He was a king of great eminence and his personality was indivisible from all accounts. He was an expert in the art of weaponry (warfare) and was a follower of the goddess. (220)

He was serving (the goddess) Chandi, who was having a mighty figure, all the time (day and night). He was always praying to the goddess alone and was always remaining morose and gloomy. (221)

He was worshipping Durga (during) day and night like a devotee and was serving her with devotion. (222)

He was a fountain of virtues, and was renowned everywhere. His body was very pure (spotless), and seeing his transparency, even Ganga was feeling abashed. (223)

Then Dutt who was very intelligent (wise) saw him, and he found his glamour was undivided as if the brilliance had emanated. (224)

His limbs were shining, and seeing this glitter (brilliance), even Ganga was feeling ashamed. He was full of virtues and well known for his qualities. (225)

He had the light (knowledge) of the unseen and was always feeling sullen (sad) and aloof, during day and night. He had a charming nature and was a great ascetic.(226)

On perceiving his service, the Muni Dutt Dev (ascetic) became very much impressed and seeing his devotional service, got enamoured by his love. (227)

Sri Bhagwati Chhand :

Dutt saw him and found him to be a Raja with great wisdom and pure heart. He found him to be a king (Raja) on all the scores. (228)

That Raja with unparalleled actions, and believer of all faiths was an invincible king and was beautiful like the god of love (kamdev). (229)

He was having the beauty of (Kamdev) god of love, a king of kings and was having a charming personality, who would not be cowed down by despondency (he was not sorrowful). (232)

Madhbhar Chhand :

The whole world was enamoured by his charm having the appearance of an ascetic, and a great recluse, having all the qualities of greatness. (233)

If seen with a careful glance, he appeared like the full moon. He was of a pure heart with virtuous actions and was following asceticism as a religion. (234)

He was wearing the robe of an ascetic, and was a staunch enemy of evil deeds (irreligious actions). He had an approach everywhere and was a perfect man of religion. (235)

He was practicing Yoga, which was beyond erosion and was inaccessible to other people. He was a strong celibate and was abiding among common people. (236)

He could mix with all others amicably : destroyer of sins, a Yoga practitioner, and would avoid all afflictions (ailments). (255)

Rasaval Chhand :

Dutt moved further and the sins would, on seeing him, make haste to avoid him. Many gongs were beating, as if the peacocks were shrieking. (256)

Many new music tunes were heard while the sins of the world were running away. People were worshipping the goddess and discourses on the four Vedas were being (held) given. (257)

He was reciting the four Vedas, and he was the king of ascetics and was practicing great yogic exercises (Yoga) and always remained morose (disconsolate). (258)

All the six shastras were being discussed while Vedas were being recited repeatedly and people worshipped them. He was a great Moni (observing silence) with pride and was following asceticism. (259)

Dutt moved on and the sins were taking to their heels. He then saw a young girl, who was renowned in all the three worlds. (260)

Dutt was a great celibate and was a deserving religious person. He saw a doll in the hands of the young girl. (261)

She was playing with it (kite) and would not move from there for drinking water even, and she was fond of playing with the doll (she liked it). (262)

The great Muni (observer of silence) went there and glanced at the bean, but the young belle did not look at him, nor she stopped playing with the doll. (263)

Dutt saw the girl and felt as if she was a rosary of music (melody queen). She was fully involved in her play (game) and was delicate like the creeper of betel nut. (264)

Then Dutt Raja went and saw her carefully and assumed her as his guru (guide). He realized that one should concentrate in reciting the great Mantras (Vedic text) just as this young girl was involved in her play. (265)

So he embraced (accepted) her as his guru and recited the Vedic hymn (mantra) (repeatedly). So Dutt took her as his twelfth guru (guide), as the treasure (of concentration). (266)

Runjhun Chhand :

He saw the glamour of the small girl, who was radiant with charm. She was having a beautiful figure as if she was a (well) source of learning. (267)

He saw (glanced) her repeatedly, and tried to understand her behaviour thoroughly, rather tried to know her thoroughly (with body and mind) and found her as a collection (bunch) of virtues. (268)

He took her as his guru (guide) and won great praise all over. Dutt then moved further, as if it was a gem of fire. (269)

Here the episode of the young girl playing with her doll as the twelfth guru is completed. (12)

Tomar Chhand :

Then the great Dutt who was a treasure of learning (studies), and having a body of (great) supreme figure (great personality) would recite True Name of the Lord in the ambroisal hours. (of the morning). (270)

On seeing his spotless and blemish-less radiant body (figure), even the waves of Ganga (river) were feeling shy or abashed (belittled). All the kings and emperors on perceiving the fearless and element-less (devoid of five elements) radiance of Dutt, were feeling ashamed. (271)

He saw one attendant, who was having many virtuous qualities, and was standing (guard) at the night time, and it was raining also (from the clouds). (272)

At midnight Dutt saw that the virtuous and powerful attendant was still standing there, and it was raining cats and dogs (continuously). This Dutt (Muni) had seen him with his own eyes. (273)

He (the attendant) was standing there with full concentration, as if it were a golden statue. Seeing his strong conviction, Dutt felt greatly elated at heart. (274)

He was not bothered about the cold or heat (cold or hot weather), nor was he worried about standing in the shade or thought in his mind about it. He was not turning away from his duties. That person, with an indivisible figure, was standing on one leg.(275)

Dutt went near by and watched him carefully and he was standing on guard (duty) in the horrible cold night with a sword in hand in a secluded position. (276)

It was raining heavily, and even the wealthy or landlords getting drenched (were running around). It appeared as if all the beings of the world were running away (for fear of being drenched). (277)

But this attendant of the Raja was standing alert (on duty) at the gate, and was repeating the name in his mind with concentration, and was not bothered to shirk from his duty a bit even. The person , with indivisible figure, was standing alert all the time (standing on one leg). (278)

He was having a horrible sword in hand, which was shining like a flame of fire brightly, as if he was not friendly towards anyone and he was pure of heart. (279)

He was standing firm without moving (lifting) his foot at all and was performing his duty perfectly (by all means). He was a worshipper of the Raja without any other hope, and he was immersed in the love and devotion of the master (Lord). (280)

It was raining cats and dogs, but he was not taking the support of the gate at all. All the birds and animals from all directions had gone to their abodes (destination).(281)

He was having only one hope, and was standing alert all alone, with a sword in hand, which was very powerful and unbreakable. (282)

He did not think of anything else (in mind) and was having the love of his master only at heart. He was standing firm like a pillar dug up in the battlefield. (283)

The place, where his foot was resting, was not being lifted (moved) at all. That place was not getting wet and on seeing him, the muni (ascetic) Dutt became silent.(284)

The great Muni (ascetic) saw him as a blemish-less person in saffron coloured robes. Taking him as a guru (guide) he bowed to him (at his lotus-feet) and in great ecstasy he gave up all his royal glitter. (285)

The undistinguishable and blemish-less Dutt, taking him as his guru, got fully impressed in his heart and felt devoted to him with love, thus accepting him as the thirteenth guru. (286)

Rasaval Chhand :

The Raja (Dutt) then moved further, on the very sight of whom the sins would vanish. Whomsoever he found as worthwhile, he took him like a guide. (287)

His face was shining with brilliance like a halo, on perceiving which the sins would disappear. His face was looking glamorous, and even Shiva was no match to it.(288)

Whosoever had a glimpse of him, would take him to be the god of love (Kamdev). He was truly seen as a form of Brahma (god), the Lord without having the slightest doubt or dual-mindedness. (289)

All the women were enamoured by his personality, who were very beautiful and charming themselves. They were not bothered about their garlands or their dresses. (290)

Either she was an offspring of sheshnag or was having the beauty of snakes ; either she had lotus eyes or she was having even superior eyes thana deer. (323)

Either she was having a great charm or was a great woman of repute or a beauty without any flaw, or she was like a king of the world. (324)

Mohini Chhand :

That woman was a youthful beauty, having the glitter of glamour on her face. She was having deer-like eyes or having the sweet voice of a nightingale (black cuckoo). She was having the brilliance of moon or the (beauty) glitter of lightning. (325)

Her delicate laughter was like the flash of lightning midst the clouds and her nose was having an attraction of a morning song. She was having charming eyes with a necklace around the neck. She was having deer-like (beautiful) eyes and the flowery tresses, tied nicely. (326)

She was a beautiful woman (fairy) fro the heavens, having a gait of an elephant. She was having a delicate laughter with the sweet voice of a nightingale (cuckoo). She was having beautiful eyes with a white necklace (around the neck) and even lightning felt ashamed before her charm. (327)

She was completely attuned to virtuous deeds with a religious zeal and could destroy (cast away) all the sufferings and was like a river of virtues. Her face was shining brilliantly with glamour. The eyes of the belle were beautiful and without any hopes (aspirations). (328)

She was having beautiful eyes like the lightning and had developed a nature of performing virtuous deeds or truthful actions. She was a destroyer of all afflictions and could crush the ailment of dual mindedness. She was a loving worshipper and could sing songs in praise of the Lord. (329)

She was beautiful like Rambha, Urbasi, and Ghritachi and was very captivating to the heart and it appeared as if she was created that very moment. On seeing her, all others thought her to be a destroyer of egoism and being ashamed of themselves, they went back to their places. (330)

All the ladies who were like Shiva's musicians alongwith the women of gods and Girja, Gayatri, Mandodri (Lankan princess) Savitri, Moon's might, Sachi, sun's power were feeling belittled before her glamour. (331)

All the snake category females, demigods or mythological females, the pious Parbati, ghosts, bhimbri, bhama or royal powers were looking pale before her charming beauty. (332)

She was the great benefactor-like goddess, destroyer of suffering, and kingly moonlike young beauty, the snake-like mighty woman having Shiva's power, Mandodri (Lankesi) and beautiful like Sachi. (333)

The eyes of the (drunken) rapturous woman were titled like an arrow, and she was having a brilliant youthful beauty. She was looking glamorous, with a rosary around her neck, and her face was shining like a flame of fire. (334)

She was a queen occupying the royal throne (as a mighty power) a great Kashatriya woman, having a canopy overhead. She was having the sweet voice of nightingale (cuckoo) having crystal clear eyes. She was a disinterested slave, worshipper of the sword and was a source (mine) of intelligence with enough prestige to be attained (earned). (335)

Her nature was very good and was having a good body figure and was a place of peaceful existence (atmosphere). She was having a pleasant personality with freedom from worldly concern. She was a beloved worshipper who was always reciting Lord's True Name. She was carefree from all worries, which would be a source of solace to others. (336)

She was firmly attuned to the worship of the one Lord-spouse, who was immersed in the love of the Lord alone. She was free from all hopes, and preferred a secluded place. She was a devotee of her spouse and appeared (fresh) like dawn. (337)

She was devoid of any sleep, and vilification and free from any (food) habits ; she was worshipper of her spouse, and practicing (describing) fasting habits. She was like the musical notes of Basant, Todi, Gouri, Bhupali, Sarangi, and Ghori etc. Ragas. (338)

She was like the Ragini of Hindol, Megh-Malar, Jaijavanti, Goud-Malari or she was glamorous like Banglia, Basant or Barari ragini. (339)

She was like the Sorath or Sarang (Ragni) or Bairari. Either she was praj or perfect, Malari or she was like Hindoli, kafi, or Telangi (musical metres). Either she ws Bairavi, Deepaki or possessing a beautiful figure. (340)

She was having a charming appearance like all the musical metres and free from the worldly bondage. Even the proud beauty was feeling allured towards her on seeing her charm. If I were to describe details of her glamour, then this Granth will become too voluminous (large). (341)

On seeing her character and pledge, Dutt along with all other ascetics with tufts of matted hair were paying obeisance to her (fell at her feet), as her body and soul was immersed in the love of her (Lord) spouse. So Dutt accepted her as the fourteenth guru (guide). (342)

Tetak Chhand :

After accepting the fourteenth guru, the Muni Dutt proceeded further. Having seen and travelled the East, West and North directions Dutt now moved towards the South. (343)

There he came across a town named Chitar and it appeared it had excelled even the heaven in its beauty and glitter. The lanlord (Master) of the town had hunted many animals like many deer, lions, black deer, and all types of birds. (344)

A multi-coloured army accompained the Raja while his banners were fluttering around and the sharp swords were shining brightly (or the peaks of flags were shining). There were many types of ornaments and golden embroidered robes (were shining) as if the abode of gods (heaven) had been won over by the beauty of these things. (royalties). (345)

There was no arrow-maker (ban-gar) in that place and he appeared to be lifeless and would not talk at all. There was a musical note being heard there from (playing of) various instruments like the tambrels, drums, Jhanjh, muchang, mirdang etc.(346)

The Raja, with a huge army, was passing that way, as if doomsday had been declared. The horses were neighing, and the elephants were trumpeting, the gongs around the necks were being struck, and their sound would put the elephants with trunks to shame. (347)

The mighty elephants were trampling down huge trees. They were sucking water from water-tanks and were sprinkling it along the route. People were rushing forward to have a glance of the Raja's glamour and were feeling relaxed and elated. The subjects were getting enamoured on seeing the Raja's glory. (348)

The people were throwing coloured powder like the holi festival, on seeing the pomp and show of the Raja like the sun's rays and were feeling the bliss of life on seeing the king of the land (Earth). The gongs around the elephants neck along with the sound (beats) of the drums and mirdang was making the elephants roar loudly, along with the sounds of the conch shells, clarionets and flutes etc. (349)

Some beautiful cymbols were being played and the limbs were embellished with ornaments, his body was smeared with sandalwood, resulting in great glitter or pomp and show. He was moving slowly uttering sweet words with his tongue. The Raja was coming back (home wards) after a hunting expedition. (350)

The face was fragrant with the essence of rose and flower scented oil rubbed on it. His eyes were looking beautiful with collyrium in them while the face was radiant like the moon, the master of heavenly musicians (Shiva) was pleased with his sight. (351)

Many necklaces around his neck were looking glorious, on his forehead was a Vermillion mark looking beautiful. The Raja was moving along that route with a huge army accompanying him. (352)

Then on that route Dutt Muni (ascetic) also happened to pass, where many conch shells and trumpets were beings sounded. There he saw a person adept in making arrows. He was sitting with his head bent down, as if a statue (painting) had been placed there. (353)

Seeing the bent head of this person, the ascetic laughingly remarked (asked) as to where the army of the Raja had gone. He replied, "O Guru ! I have not seen him with my own eyes." (354)

On hearing these words the Muni got surprised and on hearing this said that this ascetic was really unperturbed and his agile mind got a shock and felt that the person was a great ascetic with a stable mind. He was truly devoid of any desires and his indivisible mind was truly aloof. He was truly devoid of any vicious thoughts, with a brilliant-brain (intelligence) and a great soul. (355)

His brilliance was indivisible and his penance was perfect. He was truly devoid of vices, a celibate and a great worshipper, and without any desires. He was having a concentration par excellence (beyond disturbance) and a flawless body. The son of Muni Atri having a background of great penance with a tenacious mind, thought to himself about this man like this. (356)

Thus the Muni Dutt, with a tuft of matted hair on head and a great believer in penance, got enamoured with this arrow maker. He accepted him as his fifteenth guru (guide) in his mind. Leaving his stubborn attitude him as his fifteenth guru (guide) in his mind, leaving his stobborn attitude Dutt along with others fell at his feet (made obeisance at his feet.) (357)

If anyone were to develop love and devotion for the Lord in the same manner, then he could cross this ocean of life successfully. He (Dutt) kept aside all his physical or mental reservations (of body and mind). So accepting him as the fifteenth guru (guide) Dutt paid his regards to him by bowing at his lotus-feet. (358)

Tetak Chhand :

Dutt had smeared his face with ash, and had a saffron robe on his body and he had his followers, looking glorious with them. They were singing songs in the praise of the Lord, (Gobind). They were wavering (vacillating) in the absence of any comforts in the jungle. (359)

The charming Dutt was moving worshipping the Rishi Nad, who had rubbed the white coloured ash on his limbs and was not uttering anything (with his tongue). He was traveling around various lands and was busy in singing the praises of the Lord, concentrating on the worship of the Lord. (360)

He saw a kite (Chavand) with a brilliant outlook, which was carrying a piece of meat in her beak and was flying back to her nest (home). But then another kite saw her with this piece of meat, which was stronger than this beautiful kite. (361)

When the other one saw this kite flying in the sky with this meat piece, she started fighting with this one, but realizing her being stronger, the beautiful kite left the meat and flew outwards in the sky. (362)

Then seeing the meat piece on the land, and riding herself of any fright, she was watching the ground with great concentration. Seeing her the ascetic Dutt was getting astonished in his mind. Then he accepted her as the sixteenth guru (guide) in his mind. (363)

Thus if anyone, considering wealth as the source of affliction, gives up the whole wealth and feels in the mind completely morose without having any hopes (desires) then all the five senses, devoid of any vicious thinking, get freed from these vices and become purified and peaceful. Even the Vedas have taught us the same message as these kites have done. (364)

Tetal Chhand :

Then Dutt Muni, after accepting her (the kite) as the sixteenth guru, and with a melancholy (sad) mind moved further. His tongue was uttering the beautiful tunes of such words and his mind was very pensive. On hearing such melodious words all the gods, Shiva's musicians and the human beings were getting enamoured. (365)

Proceeding further he reached the banks of a river, as he was a stern and stubborn Rishi who was used to perform great penance. There he saw a bird, Dudhira and the fish were jumping upwards from the river. (366)

That bird was flying in the sky with full concentration of mind and was very beautiful with a white body and charming hue (colour), but with his eyes it was not viewing anything else (except fish) and his whole attention was fixed and devoted towards the fish. (367)

There the Muni (Dutt) took his path and then with a purified mind he started (sat in meditation) his meditation of the Lord. That enemy of the fish was also very much present there all the time. Even when the sun had set (and night had fallen) but the glance of this bird (Dudhira) was still fixed (with a gaze) on the fish alone. (368)

The bird (Dudhira), fish eater, was fluttering all the whilethere only, even though the sun had gone down (had set). the gaze of this bird was not diverted. On seeing his constant gaze, the great Muni got attracted towards him and assumed this bird (Dudhira) as his seventeenth guru. (369)

Tetak Chhand :

The Muni Dutt after having bath and singing Lord's praises got up from his meditation and went away to the jungle. There trees of Vetica robusta etc. (saal, tamal and madhal) were flourishing in glamour and from whose branches the last rays of the sun were penetrating. (370)

There he saw a huge tank, where the Rishi went for his meditation, and he (Dutt) saw a hunter behind the leaves of the trees, whose body was glittering like gold. (371)

He had fixed an arrow in the bow held in his hand, which was shining brightly, and he was making millions of plans for killing the deer. Dutt (Muni) along with his followers reached that forest. (372)

The golden like limbs of this person were shining and the Muni Raj was like the spring season (Basant) there. In the night the Rishi had many followers with him, and among them the Rishi appeared like the crescent moon in its second day phase.(373)

Rishi was making loud sounds like the gurgling clouds. so there was huge hue and cry there. At many places, the various ascetics were having water there, as if a whole rosary (group) of Munis was seen there. (374)

Someone had smeared his body with white ash, and was worshipping in Yoga style, and performing yogic exercises, as such the whole populace from the four corners had become his followers. (375)

His body was looking indivisible and perfect (in all respects) like that of Kamdev (god of love). He had practiced many acts of asceticism in the jungle, his tuft of matted hair were shining as if he was Shiva himself. It appeared as if the tuft of Shiva's matted hair had made their appearance. (376)

It appeared as if the Ganga was flowing from the Shiva's tuft as his hair was disheveled. It seemed that Dutt was appearing from the matted hair like yoga and all the ascetics meditated there for a long period. It appeared that the Muni (Dutt) had subdued all the ascetics along with their spiritual powers. (377)

All the occult powers attained from yoga as mentioned in the Vedas had been attained by him and these appeared like the streak of lightning, flashing from the clouds as the Rishi was looking like a picture of virtues. (378)

The matted hair from the Rishi's head were shining like the sun's rays and looked graceful, which could snap the noose around one's neck with a single glance in a moment from the Rishi. (379)

All those persons, destined to suffer the pangs of hell, were relieved of their sufferings with a single meeting with the Rishi. The persons, due to their sins who could not attain unison with the Lord' were enabled to rid themselves of their sins by worshipping the Rishi for a while only. (380)

The hunter was sitting in search of a prey just as a dreadful wolf remains watching the sheep for a kill. He mistook the Rishi for a deer and held his breath, and stretched his bow for a strike at the Muni. (381)

All the Sidhas seeing the stretched arrow told him that it was not a deer but the grand Muni Raj, but he did not leave the bow from his hand. On seeing his strong will power the royal ascetic (Muni Raj) felt ashamed. (382)

After long time when he gave up his meditation posture and he saw that he was the Rishi with a tuft of matted hair. Then he remarked that why they were all coming fearlessly towards him, as he saw in all of them the deer only. (383)

The master of the Rishis (Dutt) seeing his firmness, accepting him as his guru, praised him greatly, as his mind was strongly concentrated on the deer as if he was immersed in the love of the Lord. (384)

Thus the Muni's mind was greatly impressed with this hunter's love that was keen on killing the deer and accepted him as the eighteenth guru. Then Dutt thought to himself and contemplated on the virtues of this hunter, which he grapsed fully.(385)

If anyone were to develop such a strong love for the Lord, then he would surely be successful in crossing this ocean of life. By having a dip (in devotional love), the impurities of the mind are washed away and one attains salvation (from the cycle of rebirths). (386)

Then the Rishi bowed to him with reverence and assumed him as the guru. He accepted him as the eighteenth guru which has been composed by the poet in these kabits (poetry form). (387)

Along with his followers he made his obeisance to him, on seeing which the whole world was astonished (including animate and inanimate things). Then all the animals, birds and human beings, the Shiva's musicians and ghosts etc. All got into a state of surprised shock. (388)

Kirpan Krit Chhand :

The grand Muni (Dutt), adopting all the virtues of various parties, was pondering and contemplating on various aspects of Knowledge and studies. (389)

Even Kamdev (god of love) was feeling ashamed (belittled) on seeing his (Dutts) glamour. Even the Ganga (symbol of purity) was getting surprised on watching the purity and simplicity of his body (personality). (390)

Even the princes were getting anamoured by seeing his charm and glamour, as he (Dutt) was a collection (bundle) of all the virtues of knowledge, scholastic learning and kindness. (391)

The beauty and charm of his unperceivable body was indestructible, and his praiseworthiness was very attractive as if Kamdev (god of love) had assumed a human form himself. (392)

He (Dutt) was always immersed, engrossed in prayers and meditaton and would remain (desire less) gloomy throughout day and night. He had been enlightened with knowledge and learning of all types. (393)

The king of ascetics (Dutt) was bearing the heat of sunshine on himself and he had a personality of charm and beauty par excellence, as if he was a reflection of Shiva himself. (394)

His forehead was having a charm (glitter) and his brilliance was indivisible. He was fully engrossed in yogic exercises (in yoga) and would never retreat from that posture (position) or such actions. (395)

His glamour was radiant everywhere and was always morose (devoid of desires or hopes) day and night. The Muni's mind was very much full of vituous thoughts (filled with aroma) and was a source (fountain) of worldly detachment. (396)

His yoga was indescribable and he was free from any afflictions. He was always devoid of any ailments and had given up all (royal) worldly pleasures. (397)

The Muni was very benevolent at heart and was a collection of all virtues and kindness. He was having a right and virtuous type of wisdom (intelligence) and a perfect and stubborn nature. (398)

He was bearing the cold (weather) on his body and he could never mind avoiding it. Many years had passed in doing such actions, as if he had completely won over yoga practices. (399)

With the blowing of cold wind, even the stones were trembling (shivering) and body had turned yellow and even words could not come out of his mouth (he could not speak). (400)

He was consuming hemp (bhang) while carrying out yogic exercises and playing on his (kingri) horn and he was singing the praises of the Lord. (401)

Muni's mind was very stable and was not to get distracted (by any means) and was engrossed in the battle of (practice of) yoga, just as the kite flies in the skies. (402)

He was engaged in his penance with great devotion, and would not falter or feel the pangs of difficult (tough) tasks of penance. He was involved (immersed) in his worship (prayers) with love every day. (403)

He was inhaling air through the mouth and had given up visiting his home. Muni was observing silence and this was his auspicious royal abode. (404)

No one could have an access to the secrets of the mind of the ascetic (the great Muni). He was free from ageing (old age) and was invincible (at heart). He had a grand heart (being very stable). (405)

He had an enlightened mind, and was always looking morose (desire less) and possessed many virtues. On perceiving him even an ordinary person, devoid of hopes (desires), would feel ashamed. (406)

The leader of the ascetics (Dutt) had all the virtues (a bundle of virtues) and was indiscriminate (open minded). He was a king of gods and was invincible, being free from any formalities (showing off). (407)

He was a master ascetic, free from any support and would subjugate all. He was repeating only one word (Lord's Name) and was concentrating on one thing. (408)

The benevolent Muni was a bunch of virtuous deeds, having a beautiful intelligent mind, as if he was a mountain of wisdom. (409)

He was dressed as an ascetic and was free from all vices and was devoid of dual mindedness. He appeared free from any guise. He was a wise person but indescribable. (410)

Kulak Chhand :

The heart of Indra was beating fast, the moon (god) was surprised, and the wind was (tired) stopped and was thus quiet. (411)

The demigods were wonder-struck, the birds were frightened (forgot flying), the ocean was upset (with heavy waves) and Vindyachal was making great noise. (412)

The ocean had squeezed (being doubtful), the grand elephants were trumpeting, and the gods were motionless (being concentrated on one point) and were tired of getting at his secrets. (413)

The worldly people (enjoying worldly pleasures) were surprised to watch his yogs (yogic exercises). They were muttering some words while their eyes were wondering.(414)

The warriors were throwing away their arms, the Kashatriyas were getting elated (pleased), and were paying their obeisance while the sun was filled with awe (fear). (415)

The bugles were blowing and music was being played with Ragas (tunes) rising high, giving an appearance of happy atmosphere. (416)

The warriors were elated, the fairies were roaming around and one felt pleased at heart and money was being offered in alms (to poor). (417)

The demigods were getting enamoured, and the birds were fluttering around (flying) in the skies, the kings were fighting against one another. Seeing the state of Rishi this sort of atmosphere prevailed there. (418)

Charpat Chhand :

Dutt was engrossed in his yoga fully, having crushed all his worldly desires or pleasures. He was wearing a saffron robe, and was having a successful body (personality).(419)

He was a devout religious person, and was performing all actions, with an indescribable yoga, having given up all worldly pleasures. (420)

He was perfect in his actions, having a fully religious bent of mind, and was a destroyer of all evil doings (or vicious acts) and was having a virtuous disciplined life (decorum). (421)

He was having saffron coloured robes, belonging to a successful country, and was like a river of magnanimity and was a destroyer of all sinful (evil) designs. (423)

The go ds were getting surprised, and were trying to consummate his glamour, while worshipping the only Lord sublime, and were establishing the supermacy of .the Lord. (424)

He had abandoned his kingdom and was meditating on (worshipping) the Lord, and his mind was attuned to the establishment (propagation) of one Lord supreme (prime soul). (425)

The bugles were blowing and Ragas were enanating from musical instruments and with the Lord's worship all the sufferings (ailments were being cast away (leaving). (426)

The moon was also getting bewildered, while Indra;s heart was beating fast, and the gods were watching, and they became Dutt's followers (worshippers). (427)

The ghosts were moving around and glancing his charm and glamour and were getting surprised while the Muni was a source of magnanimity. (428)

Then Dutt, the ascetic saw a parrot sitting atop the pipe. He took out the parrot out of rage, and the parrot flew away at once. In the same manner the soul is also encaged (caught) in certain doubts or misgivings. (429)

Watching this secret, the Muni Dutt said that he had assumed him (the parrot) as his twentieth guru, as he appeared to be of a great fortune (a great worker). (430)

Man was an abode of intelligence (wisdom) and was always enamoured by his spouse (woman) and was always attracted towards the love and attachment of the woman (thus getting astray). (431)

All the people possessed the knowledge of affection (love) for someone while there were few religious persons having no worldly attraction, while others were engaged in worldly pleasures. (432)

The love and affection of the mother, and the love for one's wife, son and brother has kept everyone's wisdom engrossed in such affection. (433)

Man was engrossed in love (of others), and developed various desires (due to this) and burns in anguish, being engrossed in 'Maya' (worldly falsehood). (434)

The dual mindedness had crushed this man and always looked for a chance and finally landed up in the hell. (435)

Someone had ridding himself of the love of all others, got immersed in the Lord and leaving the dual mindedness he wins Lord's pleasure. (436)

Like the parrot, he gives up wealth (like the pipe) and becomes successful in his actions and attains all comforts of life. (437)

Choupaiee :

The ascetic Duff with matted hair tuft, moved further, with whom there were many trumpets and musical unstruments being played. Perceiving this scene. all the inanimate things came to life, while the animate were surprised completely. (438)

It was a glittering scene, which was rather indescribable and seeing this, the whole populace was left wondering. Whichever route was followed by the great Rishi, was made presentable with the burst of the cloud of love. (439)

There he saw a great wealthy person, a merchant (shah) who was looking glamorous, having a treasure of wealth. His appearance (face) was shining with glory and splendour. It seemed as if Brahma had created him personally. (440)

He was very alert in selling his goods, who did not know anything else except his own business (of merchandise), His mind was fully glued to the hopes (of gaining more money). It appeared as if he was following yoga with great concentration (devotion). (441)

The Rishi along with many ascetics reached there in great numbers beyond count and all of them along with the Rishi went and gathered there (at his shop). (442)

But the attention of the merchant (shah) was fully devoted to his business (of collecting money) and he never bothered to look at the Rishi even. His closed eyes were only glued to the collection of money, and it appeared as if he were a great ascetic, with great gloom (devoid of desires/hopes). (443)

All the rich and poor people gathered there made obeisance at the lotus feet of the Rishi, leaving all their doubts of mind. But the merchant had a huge business and he did not even care to glance at the ascetics. (444)

Perceiving his concentration, Dutt, ridding himself of any stubborn attitude said, " If such a devoted love were shown for the Lord sublime, then only we could attain the Lord Almighty. (445)

Here the episode of the twentieth guru, the Shah (merchant) is completed. (20)

Now the episode of teaching (teacher of) the parrot, the personification of human being as the twenty-first guru begins.

Choupaiee :

After assuming twenty gurus, Dutt moved further, who had learnt all the various yogic arts (exercises). He was having a great impression (on others) with a great strength and splendour. It seemed as if he had returned after having perfected all the modes of prayers and worship of the Lord. (446)

Then he saw a person having a parrot in hand, who had no other parallel in the world. He was concentrating on one thing only, without knowing what was happening around him. (447)

Dutt, along with an army of ascetics, which included great Munis, and fasting sadhus, went very close to him. but that man did not even notice his presence. (448)

He was training the parrot and continued his job, without saying anything to him (Dutt). The great Muni Raj got enamoured by him due to his complete negligence and rude behaviour and developed an urge in his mind. (449)

If someone were to develop similar love for the Lord Almighty. Then he would surely attain unison with the Lord sublime. So Dutt accepted him as the twenty-first guru. It appeared as if he had won-over all these (gurus) with body, mind and (soul) speech (word). (450)

Choupaiee :

When Dutt moved further after accepting the twenty-first guru, he saw a man ploughing his field. His wife was very helpful, giving him all solace, and was having lot of faith and trust in her husband. (451)

She was coming with the food (for her spouse) and moving in such a style as if the master had (called) sent for her from her home. She did not pay any attention to this ploughman, with her attention fixed completely on her husband. (452)

The great Muni, with the army of ascetics, whose glamorous appearance would put kamdev even into shame (insignificance) was moving side by side with this woman and sat behind her at at a place close by. (453)

Anup Naraj Chhand :

He (Dutt) had a charming and glamorous body with ash smeared on it looking beautiful, while his appearance had an indivisible glitter (light) and had enamoured many hearts already. He was dressed up in saffron colored robes, and perceiving whom even the gods, demons, Shiva's musicians and human beings were getting attracted towards him. (454)

Ganga even was taking (considering) him for Shiva, on seeing his tuft of matted hair, and various people of the three worlds considered him to be a wonderful charm (beauty). His (kingri) horn (trumpet) was blowing beautifully and hearing its frightening sound, even the ghosts would take to their heels out of fear. The proud spouses of demigods or mythological horses (with human body) were feeling enamoured at heart and falling down on the ground (becoming senseless). (455)

The (coloured) beautiful woman seeing the brilliant and wonderful personality of Dutt, was becoming like a painting (still) and seeing his glamour all the wives of demigods, Shiva's musicians, and women (of ghosts) were feeling peevish at heart, while others were laughing away. The brightness of their teeth was such as if lightning was emitting flashes at times. (456)

Which ever way the Muni was passing through with his repetition of Lord's Name (simran), he was crushing (destroying the bigger sins(all along) on his way. The saffron colored robes werelooking glamorous on his body, while the effulgence of his personality was showing through each movement. The earthly walkers (human beings) were bowing to him and Dutt was moving in all directions. The great men, following the religion were ridding themselves of all their sinful actions. (457)

The warrior Kashatriyas were shown great magnanimity (kindness) by (Dutt) him, though they were showing bright arrows and were tearing apart all other weapons (of enemy). Even the sun had stopped (it was almost sunset) moving to watch this fun. The warriors were falling down on the ground in the battlefield, with their mouths bleeding. (458)

On all the four sides weapons were being used (wheels were turning around) while the warriors were falling (dead or wounded) on the ground, whereas the stubborn ones would get up again by stroking their arms in prisde. The trunks, with tied cloths around them, mutilated in some cases, were moving around. Many warriors were falling down and were singing songs of Maru Rag. (459)

The warriors would gulp wine and then again get engaged in frightening war, penetrating arrows were being shot and the attack of sharp swords (from enemy) was being brushed aside, and warriors were falling down on (the ground) while wounded soldiers were getting up again and were shouting "Kill them". Those who were not stubborn, were fleeing away and the warriors from both sides were engaged in fighting. (460)

Many wonderful bows with special wonderful paintings were lying broken ; many spears with shining blades and beautiful arrows were being shot around. All the Munis (ascetics) got bewildered on seeing this battle and being fully enamoured they went away towards their Ashram (restingplace) and placing the head on the ground, they fell down. (461)

The Rishi was wearing heavy saffron coloured robes and was (meditating) reciting True Name. The ascetic Dutt on seeing him, fell at his feet (made obeisance) and accepted him as the twenty-second guru ; who had earlier managed many warriors and had crushed many sinners. Taking many followers along with him, the grand Rishi Raj went away towards his yogic posture. (462)

Here the episode of the ploughman and the woman bringing food as the twenty-second guru is completed. (22)

Anup Naraj Chhand :

Trumpets were blowing from both the sides, with the sound of beating drums rising high up. Seeing the saffron coloured clothes, the sins were taking to their heels like the demon foes. Just as the human being, seeing gold, loses his patience and falls on the ground, in the same manner, the people were falling on the ground on seeing the glamour of the wonderful ascetic with a charming body. (463)

Countless demigods, specially decorated Shiva's musicians, the female snakes devoid of any attachement, the women folk of the beautiful gods like Indra and other gods, the most pious Parbati and the charming Kuber's (Alka's spouse) spouse and many other spouses of great gods and demons were getting enamoured (with his beauty). (464)

One beautiful glamorous woman of demigods who was enchanting everyone's heart with her (singing) Ragas, was now moving (dancing) around, singing the Sarang tune, had forgotten about her love or attachement for the family (home) and was only devoted to the classical music (Ragas). She was dancing around like a wounded deer, struck by the hunter's sharpened arrow. (465)

She was getting amused at heart with the music (Raga) and was singing a special classical note (music) and was playing on her kingri (trumpet out of animal's horn) and was moving towards the ashram, being completely bewitched. She was embellished with the beauty of an accomplished woman like a sharp arrow and was taking the food of free leaves while moving around. (466)

Tomar Chhand :

She was full of virtues, with great gentleness knowing all the eighteen sciences, with a generous nature, accomplished in all the Ragas (classical music), in fact she was most fortunate on the Earth (in the land). (467)

Such a woman was singing Ragas (classical music) who was full of virtues and good natured. Her beautiful eyes were full of calmness and having a soothing effect and she was singing (songs of joy). (468)

Her brilliant face was having a charm of its own ; she was gentle and generous in nature and an ocean of bliss, being a source (treasure) of Ragas, and her glance would enamour anyone. (469)

She was a flawless youthful beauty, and was like an ocean of bliss. She was singing Ragas with single mindedness and devotion, as if nuptial song was emanating (from her) incessantly. (470)

On perceiving her, the Yogi prince (Dutt), having a tuft of matted hair, along with his group of Yogi followers, was feeling amused at heart, and he (Dutt) was pure and perfect in Yoga. (471)

Similarly if anyone were to develop such a devoted love for the Lord supreme, then he would surely attain (salvation) unison with the Lord. There was not an iota of doubt in this thing. (472)

Dutt's mind was filled with aspirations and eagerness and taking her as his guru, made obeisance to her. His heart was filled with love and joy and assumed her as the twenty-third guru. (473)

Tomar Chhand :

Then Dutt meditated (prayed) on the top of the Sumer mountain for many years and finally the (dexterous) wise Lord was pleased with him. (474)

On seeing the worldly behaviour the Muni Raj thought to himself as to who was the creator of the whole world and then mingles everyone with Himself ? (475)

We should clearly understand this fact through the light of knowledge, then only we could meditate with concentration. We should learn about Him through the Yoga of crlibacy (controlling our sexual desires). Then pnly this body would become free from ailments (sound mind in a sound body). (476)

Then only we could realize the One Lord-Sublime, who is also known to be the destroyer of this universe, who is known to be the master (Lord) of the world and is free from fear, uncommitted (to any faith) and is infinite. (477)

Without realizing (knowing) Him, one cannot have peace of mind, even if one were to bathe at all the holy places ; once we recite Lord's True Name, all our desires are fulfilled. (478)

Apart from Him, even the teachings of twenty-four gurus (teachers) are of no avail, and the whole world or its people are (useless) of no use. Whosoever has realized the One Lord, enjoys the bliss of the (teachings of) twenty-four gurus even. (479)

Whosoever is immersed in the love of the One Lord Sublime, has enjoyed the bliss of the twenty-four (gurus). Those who have not realized the One Lord Almighty, shall not understand the twenty-four (gurus) even. (480)

The persons, who have not realized (recognized) the one Lord, would be devoid of the useful fruits (benefits) of twenty-four gurus even, but those persons, who have realized the One Lord, have also enjoyed the bliss of twenty-four even. (481)

Bachittar Pad Chhand :

Those persons who have inculcated the love of one Lord in their hearts, having rid themselves of dual mindedness, have earned renown in the world (having beat their trumpets) and the gods have showered flowers on them. (482)

All the ascetics with matted hair, were feeling overjoyed and were singing while clapping their hands. They were moving around everywhere in a happy mood, having forgotten all their sufferings. (483)

Tarak Chhand :

When he continued his penance (worship) for many years and whatever practices were shown by his Guru were inculated by him in his heart, then he got enlightened by the Lord by showing the right path and he got the secrets of the world (of all ten directions) and he got fully attuned to the Lord. (484)

Then that Brahmin god (Dutt) having assumed twenty-four Gurus, along with other ascetics went to Sumer mountain. When he performed devoted austerity (penance) for long, the Lord gave him this knowledge (teachings). (485)

Totak Chhand :

The ascetic Dutt, along with his followers, went away to Sumer mountain and he had worn a tuft of matted hair along with saffron coloured robes. He performed his worship (penance) for many long years and did not give up the Lord's prayers (remembrance) even for a moment. (486)

For a million plus twenty thousand years, the Rishi performed his austerities (worship) and started his religion throughout the land (made followers). The great Muni was a very serious (grave) ascetic, having great wisdom and dyanism. (487)

When the Rishi's end came, then the Muni got an inkling through his knowledge of Yoga and realized this world as a (world) house of smoke and adopted some others practices for his life. (488)

Then the great Rishi with the help of his yogic powers controlled his breath (air) and leaving his physical existence on Earth, he left this world (died). By ridding himself of the tenth outlet of body (breaking his skull) his soul got mingled with the prime-soul. (489)

The god of death (Kaal) carries a shining and dreadful sword, who had killed many valiant and great kings including warriors. This death had controlled all movable and immovable things, as it had spread a great noose throughout the world and no one could escape its effects. (490)

Swaiyya :

If one possessed all the eight occult powers, all the nine worldly treasures, along with all other worldly riches and had a moon like beautiful spouse and great riches at home, which could not be maintained (controlled) but without the support of True Name, everyone gets subdued by death and finally proceeds to the next world with bare feet (without anything). (491)

This world had not accompained them on the demise of Ravana, Mehravan, Raja Man or Nal's death. Even this world did not keep company with Raja Bhoj, or the Delhi's Master, Kauravas and mighty Raghunath. " I swear by the Lord Sublime, the destroyer of sins, that I have never accompained any one at the time of death till this day. O careless and foolish person ! Remember that I have never accompained anyone and have not wavered from my duty. (492)

This (shameful) human being had been involved in truth and falsehood in many ways and engaged in actions of sexual desires or with wrathfulness and been running around in shamefully saving his wealth due to fear, thus losing face both in this world and hereafter, "O foolish person ! For twelve years you, were engaged in studies without gaining any real (true) knowledge, thus you never had been able to attain the lotus-eyed True Lord. Thus without any prestige and being under the spell of god of death, one has to go bare foot only to face death." (493)

"O Muni ! Why have you dressed yourself in saffron coloured robes ! As everything will burn away in the fire. Why have you started this new life style, which will last only for a few days and will not last long ? The dreadful effect of death has never been offset by any Yogi so far, and will not and shall not be deterred (deceived) in future as well

" O great Muni ! This beautiful body of yours will finally, after death, be consigned to flames and mingle with dust." (494)

"O Muni ! Listen ! Why do you live on air as by these means nothing shall be gained ? Why do you wear saffron coloured robes, you cannot become God Almighty by such efforts ? Look at the episodes (examples) given in Vedas and Shastras as all of them were under the control of god of death. You have not burnt the sexual desires within (your body) and you call yourself 'Bare bodied' (devoid of any secrecy). Even your tuft of matted hair on the head will not accompany you (after death). " (495)

"O Muni ! Even if a golden mountain were to fall or all the seven seas were to dry up, or the sun were to rise from the west, or you could even imagine the Ganga to be flowing upstream ; or the sun's heat during the spring season had gone to its extreme (very hot in Basant season) or the sun were to become cool and gentle like the moon, or the Earth were to stumble down from its stable position, not-with-standing all these things happening, the destruction (end) of the world was certain and sure. (496)

There had been many ascetics like Atri Muni, Basar, Narad, Sarda and Byas and great Munis like Galiv etc. had passed by, and even Brahma could not keep any count of them. Then August, Paisak, Basist, had passed by without anyone knowing where they had gone ; they had made their followers by imparting their Mantras (teachings) and had started their great religions but then all of them got mingled with the cycle of transmigration but never apperared on the scene again. Thus the soul of the great Muni (Dutt), after breaking the skull (Dasam duar) got mingled with the prime soul. The loving soul (of Dutt) had got mingled with the Lord Sublime in such a manner just as the sanctified episode of Muni Dutt, the son of Atri Muni, had been depicted by the poet Siam (by uttering with his tongue). So salutations to the great glamorous Master of the world i.e. Rudra and Bhavani.(498)

Ik Onkar Satgur Prasad.
Patshahi-10 (By the Tenth Master)

Choupaiee :

This is how the Incarnation of Rudra in the form of Dutt had appeared, who spread the message of his religion throughout the world and finally his soul got mingled with the prime soul juast as Bhavani mingles with the Lord Sublime. (1)

After him (Dutt) the followers of Yoga (yogic principles) practiced his teachings for one lakh and ten years. After the elapse of eleventh year, a great human being named Paras Nath was born in this world (on the Earth). (2)

Paras Nath, an elevated soul with godly vision was born on an auspicious day at Roh, a beautiful land. His face was looking glorious, lit with enlightenment and there was none else comparable to him. Both the mother and father got wonderstruck by seeing his splendour. (3)

His glory was renowned in all the ten directions. It seemed as if twelve suns had risen at the same time. All the populace from ten sides got up and raised their cry (prayer) to the king. (4)

O King ! Listen, we are relating one anecdote. An arrogant (proud) person has been born in your town, and there is none else in the whole world as beautiful as he was. The creator had created only one person like him (and there is none else like him). (5)

He was either a demigod or a Shiva's musician, and it seemed as if a second sun had risen. His body was looking glamorous with youthful (beauty) charm, and even Kamdev (the god of love) was feeling ashamed on perceiving him. (6)

The king sent for him for his personal glance, and he came with the caller, on the first day itself. On seeing him all the ascetics with tufts of matted hair felt elated but they got heart throbs due to their inner fear and it seemed as if Dutt was reborn. (Dutt had taken a second birth). (7)

On seeing his charming beauty, all these ascetics were trembling and thought to themselves that he was an incarnation only. They also felt that he would get their religion terminated and there will be no more ascetics with tufts of matted hair left. (8)

Then the king was pleased to see him and felt enamoured at heart. Whosoever had seen him, was greatly elated and wonderstruck. It appeared as if a poor (money less) person had gained riches (of nine worldly treasures). (9)

That person had cast a spell over all, or one may say that a wonderful arrow (chetak arrow) had surprised all with its strike. Everywhere people got enticed (with his glance) and had fallen with its spell (had been overcome with his charm), asif warriors had fallen down after fighting a (losing) battle. (10)

Every man and woman, whosoever saw him, felt he was an embodiment of Kamdev (god of love). The ascetics saw him in the form of all the occult powers, while the Yogis (imagined) saw in him the personification of Yoga. (11)

The whole harem (inner part of palace) was enamoured by seeing his beautiful form. The king thought to himself of marrying his daughter with him. When he became the son-in-law of the king, he was renowned as a warrior (archer) expert in archery.(12)

He was a great personality with limitless glory and it appeared as if he would get himself worshipped by the whole world. He was a great scholar of shastras and a great man of arms (warrior) and there was no pandit (scholar) in the world to equal (compete with) him in learning. (13)

Though his age was small but his wisdom (intelligence) was profound, as if Kamdev (god of love) had taken his form. Whosoever saw his beauty, was bewildered to perceive his elegant charm (glory). (14)

Swaiyya :

The eyes of Paras Nath was full of pride just like the stretched (sharpened) arrow on a bow or a sword sharpened on a grindstone, which was ready to suck blood. Whosoever would glance at his eyes, would feel lifeless after that and they could not go back home. All the people, who had come to have a glance of Paras Nath, had reeled and fallen down, as if they happened to be struck by a spear. Whosoever had seen him, had fallen on the ground, being enamoured with his charm (like the noose of love,) and could not rise (get up) again with effort even. (15)

His charming eyes were being praised (looking glorious) like the ocean of nectar, or they were like the well of love, or the ships of prestige had anchored there, or the (souls) lives on the onlookers were won over by them. (They would say), " I have roamed around the four corners of the world but have not seen such beautiful eyes anywhere else." His eyes were like the arrows of Arjun (penetrating), or the source (mine) of youthful beauty, or the sword of Kaal (the god of death) or the bayonets of lust (lustful eyes). (16)

His eyes were known to be filled with a magic spell (like a Tantar) or were studded with Talisma (Jantar) or were like an incantation (mantar). It was either a beautiful light of youthful effulgence or his eyes were intoxicated with a tinge of wine in the love of the Lord or they were looking charming like the Kasumbha (flower) or were beautiful like the rose flower or they were trained in many (millions of) snares of vileness. On its very sight, his appearance would enamour any heart as his face was lovely and charming. (17)

When Paras Nath, chewing a betel nut, fully embellished with beautiful scented robes, would come to the royal assembly, then all the mythological figures (human face with horses body) demigods, snakes, animate or inanimate world, gods and demons, would get bewildered. The proud persons in the world, being enamoured by his charming personality, were getting the bliss of life. They were offering diamonds and robes as a sacrifice (honour) to him and all the women, losing their patience were eager to offer themselves as sacrifice to him. (had immense love for him.) (18)

Paras Nath had a great charming personality having attained knowledge of all the fourteen sciences and an enemy of the demons (a god), was renowned throughout the world (in four directions). He had gained the knowledge of all the arts of warfare in the world. The great warrior, having gained victory over various lands, had spread his might and adoration tn all the ten directions. (He was renowned as a great warrior throughout the world). The gods likened him to Indra (god), the milkmaids equated him with Krishna and the night accepted him as the moon (shining with brilliance of moon). (19)

The eyes of people in all the four directions were dazed with his beauty and felt bewildered and he was known all over the Earth and sky. The warriors recognized him as a great warrior, and the scholars had accepted him as a learned person. The day had seen him (likened him) as the sun, while the night compared him equal to the moon (in beauty). The queens took him to be a king and the young belles took him as their master (Lord) while the women accepted as their beloved (being devoted to him). (20)

Bhujang Prayat Chhand :

After the period of two years and eight months, then he managed to acquire the knowledge of all (sciences) education. He was a worshipper of the goddess, called by the names of Hingla, Thingla, Anasa, Chhudha, Aterdhari or Abhevi and he used to make obeisance at her feet. (21)

He used to meditate on the goddess (worship) called Totila, Sitla, Khagtrani, Bharma, Bhaihari, Bhim Rupa, Bhavani or Durga and whose conveyance was a roaring lion and whose weapons were brilliantly shining. The goddess was laughing merrily, (saying Hahu, brilliantly shining. The goddess was laughing merrily, (saying Hahu, Hahu) and a canopy fluttered over her head (she was a known authority). (22)

She was laughing loudly with her hair dishevelled and was holding an unseathed sword in her hand. Our salutations to that dreadful looking figure, who was having a necklace of skulls around her neck while her teeth (column) were shining. Seeing her (dreadful) face even the mighty enemy would flee away, but the saints were feeling happy. (23)

The eyebrows of the goddess were looking glamorous like a chain (string) of black bees. She was having a frightful (light) with a sword like a flame of fire, elegance held (in hand), on whose sight even the most mighty foes get frightened while the mendicants with a perfect, (controlled) mind were laughing with joy and were worshipping the lotus feet of the magnificent Durga. (24)

Hearing such praises the (goddess) Bhavani became benevolent, who was a picture of blissful joy. She got pleased with him and bestowed on (gave) hum two quivers of unbreakable arrows along with a beautiful axe which was supposed to be made of iron. (25)

When he got armed with the weapons, given by the benevolent goddess, then he made them uncovered, kissed them and touched them with his head and neck. All the other kings then appreciated this elegant move that he was free from the cycle of Rebirths, invincible and adept in Vedic studies. (26)

When he trained himself in all the weapons and protective coverings (coat of arms) then he pondered over the Vedic knowledge and its true value. He then studied the sciences (knowledge) of other countries and he had won over all the kings from friendly countries. (27)

He sent out messages to all the lands (inland and foreign countries) that they should come and learn Vedic studies (meditate on Vedas). He sent for all the ascetics, chand dharis, with shaven heads, those undergoing penance, celibates, intellectuals, Saravagi (Jains) to come and study Vedas. (28)

He arranged to call the Rajas of various lands, all the ascetics, mendicants and other religious people (disguised) and all those with tufts of matted hair, were also called wherever they were seen, saying that Paras Nath had sent for them. (29)

Messages were sent to kings of various lands and whosoever failed to meet him, was divested of his kingdom and troops. On one side messages were delivered while on the other side men were sent to take hold of any ascetic or with shaved off head or other disguised person and was brought there (before him). (30)

The Raja had organised a Yagna and all the Yogis were coming up there including all young, old or child even. Even all the Rajas, poor people or even women were heading towards that place, since the king had organized a Yagna. (31)

Many messages were sent all over the place, and the Rajas from all over, had collected at his palace. From everywhere all the ascetics (with tufts of matted hair) or disguised persons, came to the Roh land. (32)

All those believing in Yoga or worshippers of Shiva, the god of Yogic beliefs, or those with bodies smeared with ash, or those practicing celibacy, or those with tufts of matted hair on the head, they were all believers in Yoga and studying Yogic culture (knowledge of Yoga). (33)

The Raja had called all other kings and alms were being distributed with beat of drums everywhere (in all four corners). The ministers from various lands came and met him (Paras Nath), who were performing Yogic exercises and were praising the Yogic principles. (34)

All the saintly people on the Earth were sent for by Paras Nath. They were given great offerings or sumptuous foods. On seeing the honour bestowed on these people (Munis) even the heavens felt belittled (the Abode of gods felt ashamed). (35)

All got together to ponder over various studies (of Yoga) and were presenting their own modes of solution (yogic practices). There was pin drop silence with meditation being practiced, and they were watching one another's face. Whatever we had heard with our ears, was now perceived with our own eyes. (36)

All were trying to explain and interpret their Puranas and were studying the knowledge of various lands (culture of different lands was being discussed). Thus being fearless, they had rid themselves of the greater apprehension (terror). (37)

The people of Bang desh, Rafzi or those belonging to Roh desh, or from Roma and Balkh lands were going away leaving their own motherland behind. All those people from Bhimbhar desh, Kashmiris, Kandharis, Kalmakhis, and Kaskari were pulled up by making them fearless. (38)

The people of the south who were scholars of Shastras engaged in discussions, or Dravar's who were tough to be won over and those belonging to Tilang desh with arrogance and hot tempered or those from Eastern lands and the North who were great warriors from different lands all came to meet him (ParasNath). (39)

Padhri Chhand :

Thus he collected many warriors and called many kings from various lands by giving them offerings of many diamonds, robes, wealth, materials and other goods and the Raja honoured them greatly. (40)

He had gained victory over many fearless, indestructible, asetics, men with canopies overhead, invincible, adept in warfare, having knowledge in use of arms, indivisible and other great warriors. (41)

He had won over many kings of various lands and fought many war with wrath and great efforts. He had collected many invincible Rajas with giving refuge, alms (offerings) fines, and discrimination. (42)

He had gathered various kings, then he issued his victory order and he announced (his supermacy) by beating of drums. Thus he won over the love of all Rajas by offering them diamonds, robes and limitless wealth. (43)

After one day had elapsed Paras Nath went and worshipped the great goddess and offered prayers with singing her praises, which I am going to describe in Mohini Chhand. (44)

Bisanpad Paraj (Through Thy Grace, being described).

The beauty of your lotus feet is indescribable (how could I describe it ?), as it seems to be like the dipping in the everlasting nectar, which the warriors are always meditating on. I am like the black bee hovering around the lotus like feet in my mind and being fully enchanted, (by their beauty). I am raising the bee-like noise (sound). Thus with this ecstasy (prayer) I will manage salvation for seven dynasties each of my mother and my father. (75)

Bisanpad Kafi :

That day I will consider my life worthwile when the mother of the world, being pleased with me, blesses me with the benediction of victory over the world that day I would arm myself with weapons of all types (including protective cover) by tying with my waist and put a vermilion mark (of sandalwood) on my forehead and I would seek the blessings from the Lord, whom the Vedas have described as infinite and get His benidictions. (76)

Bisanpad Sorath (saying with Thy Grace).

O omniscient Lord ! O fearless Bhavani ! Seeing the extreme love of Paras Nath you have realized the state of his mind and have revealed your true form of destroying the worldly fear, being fearless, considering him as your devotee. Perceiving all this, the Munis (ascetics) and the gods are all wonder-struck and they have gained a state of immortality and ever young (without ageing) entity. (77)

The goddess had a sword in her left hand, which had under its control all the demons, (mythological horse with human face) Kinars, demigods and their actions are worthless before it, which had destroyed the demons Madh and Ketabh (into bits and pieces) and had killed Sumbh and Nisumbh. (O Bhavani !) I wish that sword to remain in my right hand till the (doomsday) end of the world. (78)

The same sword had been used to crush the demons Brilachh and Chichhar and with the same sword the demons Dhulcharan and Dhrumlochan were killed and their flesh had satiated the vultures. Then Almost all the people have tried to escape the onslaughts of the sword used by the god of death for the killing of Ram, Rasool, Krishna, Vishnu etc. but have not been able to save themselves in spite of millions of their efforts and without the support of Lord's worship. (79)

Bisanpad Suhi : (Spoken) through Thy Grace.

The (goddess) Bhavani had a shining sword in hand, which was looking glorious, which had destroyed millions of Indras, Vishnus and Shiva's. Then all the Munis, by uttering Ram's name have served the Lord by meditating on Him. The same Ram and Krishna had been created (by the Lord) millions of times and then destroyed them also. (80)

How could we sing the praises of the Lord, whose form was fearless and was indivisible; whose praises were being sung by sheshnag and his thousand fangs would get tired by so doing ? The poet had only one tongue, so how could he manage to sing His praises ? The Earth, Sky, nether-lands had been created by Him and then along with the fourteen Khands (the Universe) He destroyed everything and it is His light alone which enables everything to shine and His effulgence pervades all the lands, Khands and the whole Universe, (Brahmand) thus making them brilliant. O goddess without any signs and having an elegant form, salutations to you ! (82)

With whose ordains countless Ramas and Krishna's were created and then disappeared after due course of time. Let us consider the god of death, free from the effect of (death), Time and devoid of blemish (flawless) form. The whole world (Universe) came into existence with whose command and with whose orders it would get destroyed again. O foolish thoughtless person ! Why do you not consider it as the Lord Himself?(83)

O human being ! Why do you not recognize the Lord Sublime ? (Narhar). O foolish (animal hearted) person ! Why have you engaged yourself in the love of worldly falsehood)Maya) being careless and completely dependent on it ? Then you recite the names of Rama, Krishna and Rasool every morning after getting up, whereas they are no longer living in this world and where is their abode? (84)

Sorath :

Why do you not recognize (accept) the Lord Almighty who is ever existent (being present now and in future as well). Why do yoi worship the stones in vain and will such practices give you some useful result (or some benefit) ? We Should serve the Lord, whose service will result in fulfilling our worldly desires and by repeating whose Name we could get our desires fulfiled? (85)

Bisanpad Ramkali (Through Thy Grace)

When he praised the Lord, Prime soul and benefactor, the Dev (god) got pleased with him. The goddess came herself and met him and Hanuman, having a canopy over head was dancing in front of her, while the musicians were dancing and clapping.(86)

The (load of) arms and weapons worn by her were flashing (shining) with glamour while many small drums were beating, the ghosts and evil spirits were dancing (merrily) in many ways while the betals were making noises. The goblins were giving shrill notes while the ghosts were producing noise and laughing away. The flashes of lightning were seen in the sky produced by clouds, while the Rishis got frightened with fear and were looking shocked sitting in their chariots, moving around in the sky. (87)

The goddess then remarked

Sarang, Bisanpad, Through Thy Grace !

"Clever son ! Ask for some benediction ! We have realized that during the past and future periods, there had been no other saintly person like you. You may ask for any favours or blessings as I am ready to bestow anything you ask for. You may seek any amount of gold, diamonds, rubies, pearls etc to your hearts satisfaction. (88)

Paras Nath then said
Bisanpad Sarang.

O goddess ! May you bless me, so that I could gain all the knowledge about Vedas and I could wield any weapons available so that I could win over all the lands by subjugating them and then rule over them as per my (desires) will. The goddess Chandi said, " It will be so, (as desired by you) and bestowing on him great blessings (benefaction) Chandi disappeared. Then riding her lion, Chandi meditated on the Lord. (89)

"Bisanpad, Gouri, Through Thy Grace !"

Paras Nath, after paying obeisance to Chandi, went back home. As soon as he arrived, he sent for warriors from various lands, having defeated them. All the warriors got surprised to see the Raja's personality and they were in ecstasy on his glance and said," They had never seen a king like him, ever before as was seen today. The fairies were equally bewildered while the Shiva's musicians and others were equally amazed. The gods showered flowers on them, which were evergreen (fresh) and were like a shower of rain, which were falling like a drizzle. It appeared as if Paras Nath, after having a wash (bath) in the ocean of beauty, had come out like a source of (mine of) youthful charm or one may say that the god of love (Kamdev) had appeared in person on the Earth. (90)

Bisanpad. Sarang. With Thy Grace.

When Paras Nath had attained the sublime bliss (enlightenment), which was very difficult to gain with body, mind, words and actions and he meditated on the Lord and performed many yogic exercises (Yoga) with recitation of True Name, he was blessed with a vision of Bhavani and given the knowledge of the whole Universe by the queen of fourteen worldly regions, Bhavani (the secret of this creation). Then the Raja Paras Nath recited all the shastras with his tongue and realized Truth, as opposed to Untruth (falsewood) He realized that apart from one Lord Sublime (the main Truth) everything else was (Untruth) subject to extinction He realized (saw) the light of the Lord Almighty which was spreading its effulgence throughout the Universe and the Unstrung music of Nature was heard (by him) all around. Thus the mighty Raja, having gained victory over other kings, (he) had gained the supreme position (of fearless king). (91)

Thus he had attained the eternal position (of ever lasting nature) of immortality. Having won over all other kings, he had called all of them in his presence. All those kings were full of their pride (egoism) and came with the beating of drums. They came with an ardent desire filled with the strength of their armed forces and then made obeisance to him (Paras Nath) by greeting him and accepted his authority (superiority). The Raja then embraced all of them, one by one, by greeting them and welcoming them in the routine manner. Then he made offerings of diamonds, robes, horses and elephants and honoured them (with robes of honour). He had thus enamored all of them by offering gifts to saintly persons and greeting them with respect. (92)

Bisanpad. Kafi ; With Thy Grace !

Thus Raja Paras Nath, a source of wisdom having offered many gifts and honouring them, had won the appreciation of all other kings and had given them offerings of many bedecked horses and elephants. He had made all other kings as his own (slaves) by these means. He had offered many necklaces of rubies, parvaal, diamonds, pearls many robes, millions of cows with golden horns to each one of the Brahmins. Then he arranged for a Yagna, after having enamoured all other kings and with beating of drums (announcing his victory), where many assemblies of kings were organized. (93)

One day the Raja (Paras Nath) was attending an assembly of kings, having called all the great kings of the land, along with various religious leaders from various lands. Hearing this the ascetics (with tufts of hair) also came there, who had grown tufts of matted hair on their heads, with ash smeared on their faces, they had worn the bark and leaves of trees on the body and they had grown long nails which would put even the lion to shame, their eyes were closed and they were standing with raised hands with beautiful loin cloths tied. Those great Munis were meditating on (worshipping) the Lord day and night. (94)

Dhanasari, With Thy Grace

"Either you show me some spiritual wonders (miracles) or else you get all your matted hairs shaved off. O Yogis ! If you had any Yoga in your matted hair, then leaving the prayers (worship) of the Lord you would not be begging for alms. If someone were to realize the secret of life then he would have (attained) mingled with the prime soul (Lord). Then he would observe silence and sit in a trance and would not roam around in search of Lord. The Lord, who had no signs or symbols and who is always called formless, who had no symptoms of his indivisible form, then how could he be seen in any costume (guise)? (95)

Those, who were wise among them accepted Paras Nath as having the knowledge (realization) of the prime soul (Lord) and agreed to his being superior with greatness (in scholastic learning). All of them bowed their heads to him and with folded hands said, " Whatever the Guru had ordered, we had acted accordingly and apart from that we know nothing else. O King Emperor ! Whatever talk you had given, we have listened carefully. But hearing those words from the benefactor we had accepted them as perfect Truth in our hearts. Those words were full of bliss as if they were like nectar and whatever words had been uttered by him, were accepted by us (as ordains for us)." (96)

Bisanpad Sorath.

"O Yogi ! The Yoga was not restricted to your matted hair alone, so why are you roaming around and begging for life. Try to think in your mind. The person, who has realized the prime soul, has gained the real knowledge (of value). Then he concentrates his mind at one place and does not roam around in his search. What was the use of leaving the home and then running around in the jungle. His mind was still at home without being sad. He had cheated (deceived) the world with his clever moves, thinking it as the strength (power) of Yoga. You have considered (thought) in your mind that you have completely discarded (Maya) the worldly falsehood, the three pronged Maya, whereas theMaya (falsehood) had not left your company. (You were still not free from Maya). (97)

'O Men of disguise ! True Yoga does not consist in wearing a particular garb. Yoga does not lie in tuft of matted hair, nor in smearing body with ash, nor in uncut (extended) nails, nor in wearing a particular garb (dress). If one were to gain Yoga by living in jungles, then the birds are always staying in the jungle ; If by putting ash in the head would lead to Yoga, then the elephant throws dust on his body all the time ; you should think it out in your mind. If by bathing at holy places, one could gain Yoga, then the frogs and the fish were always bathing in water. If one could attain Yoga by meditation, then the cat, the crane (male or female) are always concentrating (on a kill) so have they gained Yoga ? It is only for deceiving people, that we manage to undergo suffering even, but if we were to bear such suffering (afflictions) for the attainment of the Lord, then only we could gain true knowledge and realize the Lord, thus partaking the nectar (elixir of life) (making us immortal). (98)

Bisanpad. Sarang.

On hearing such words of wisdom, all the Yogis (ascetics) were embracing the lotus feet of Paras Nath. But the foolish among them, devoid of knowledge, did not accept his advice. Instead, these foolish stupid and ignorant people were using rustic and crude language by getting up. Many of them went away to the jungle and many took shelter in water, while many of them hearing these roaring words, got ready for a battle. Many of them came and made their obeisance to him (Paras Nath) while many others fled away leaving the battlefield, and many others waging a war of the life (in the battle field) got honoured and went away to heavens (Indrapuri). When the conch shells sounded the note of the battle, then all those ascetics (with tufts of hair) who were brave warriors, started with trotting of their horses jumping around and the fairies (in the heavens) got wonder-struck and the gods or demons both got frightened. On seeing all this, the sun had set and the eyes were fixed (on one object). Many arms and weapons are given up and many quivers of arrows had been spent up (had been shot). It appeared as if the arrows were being shot like the drops of rain coming through the thick clouds. With the striking of arrows on the shields, flashes of light werec seen, as if due to their feeling ashamed, they were burning like the straw. With their robes draped in blood, they were looking glamorous just as warriors were coming back after playing holi. (100)

Bisanpad. Kedra.

Thus there raged a great battle and beautiful young warriors were seen lying fallen on the ground. In the battlefield, the forcès of stubborn warriors, while using their weapons and arms with great wrathfulness had been reduced in numbers. So many warriors with beating of drums and challenging one another (the enemy), had gone to heavens while fighting. Everywhere the warriors were seen running around while sounds of hue and cry were heard all around. The defeated warriors were seen going to their camps as darkness was enveloping the scene in all the ten directions. Many arrows had been shot around, which had caused darkness around and everywhere the warriors were lying being cut into pieces. (101)

The charming music of Maru Raga was being heard while the brave warriors in the battlefield, armed with various weapons were roaring. Having worn the protective covering, they were placing the saddles on the horses and getting armed with weapons. The warriors were full of pride like the lions and were heading towards the battlefield. All the warriors, carrying the maces, were going to war (against the enemy). The warriors were looking gorgeous in the battlefield, which would put even Indra to shame on watching their glamour. Many warriors had fallen on the ground being cut into pieces but they had not fled away from the battlefield. The warriors who have succumbed to the striking weapons (honoured by the weapons) have proceeded to heavens (have gained martyrdom). (102)

Bisanpad. Kalyan.

The fighting warriors were running around in all (the ten) directions. They were (firing) using mudgar, gopi, maces, catapult, patas, parag etc. The warriors were falling down and lying on the ground, as if they had gone to sleep after playing Holi. Getting enraged with fury, some warriors were getting up again and continued fighting. in fact the warriors, red hot like coal, were fighting with their teeth grinding within and challenging the enemy. They were holding their weapons like spears, arrows, swords, maces and other weapons or protective covering. The Shiva's musicians had been reduced to ashes and the gods were shouting (for help), being burnt, saying that they were rather unfortunate in coming under their protection, so why were they not protected ?" Maru :

When the warriors from both the sides reached there, the beating of drums, trumpets, mirdang etc. made the clouds of sawan (rainy season) feel belittled (ashamed). To watch this great drama (battle) the gods and demons came riding their chariots, and looked glamorous there. On perceiving the ornaments of gold studded with jewels, the musicians of Shiva were feeling jealous. By tightening their loin cloths and their waists and getting furious with rage, they were coming closer to each other. Some of the warriors were still standing fast in the battlefield, while some others had fled away. The arrows were being shot like a shower, like the dreadful clouds of the doomsday. On perceiving this wonderful drama, Paras Nath himself was coming to the battlefield. (104)

Bisanpad. Bhairon. With Thy Grace.

The big drum was beating loudly. "I will arrange (the battle) so as to litter the field (ground) with heads and trunks, while the fairies from the heavens will watch all this fun. Many great warriors will fall on the ground, with thuds, and with their blood the evil spirits will get satiated. I shall make all the ghosts, evil-spirits, and the crows will be fed with their blood by me. The dreadful Bhairon will rise from the battlefield with a resounding noise and all will be killed there. I will kill all the gods including Indra, Moon, Sun, Varuna etc. by picking each one of them. I have been pleased by the gods (goddess) with this benediction, which has no other parallel. I am the creator of the Universe and whatever I want (order) will come to pass. (105)

(Parath Nath said), Who else is there, more powerful than myself who could gain victory over me and become a victor in battle ? I could gain victory over (gods) Indra, Moon and Pavan in no time. Who else is there in the world like me (as powerful), who could gain victory over me in battle ? If I were to become furious with rage, I could dry up all the oceans (seven seas). I could crush within a moment (within a wink of the eyes) all the demigods, Shiva's musicians and mythological horses (with human face) (in millions) I have won over all the gods and demons and made them my slaves (my stooges). The goddess had blessed me with the benediction that no one could ever touch my shadow even (could harm me in any way). (106)

Bisanpad, Maru.

After saying these words Paras Nath became more furious with rage. With the beating of drums and trumpets producing a dredful sound (tune), he attacked the ascetics from the front. He shot many types of shots frm his arms and weapons with a shower of the arrows. Thus he broke asunder their protective coverings (coats of mail) with the shooting of arrows like the leaves of a papal tree. From all the four directions, the arrows were being shot (by the warriors) with their hands, which had covered (the light of) the sun even. It appeared as if the Earth and the sky had become one unit and the whole world took it to be an earthquake, (which had struck them). The gods Indra, moon and the great Munis were trembling and even Basu or Degpal were frightened to death. Even Varuna and Kuber had deserted their abodes (regions) and fled away, thinking it was the doomsday. (107)

The fairies in the heavens were greatly elated as they took this battle as a Swambar ceremony and they were to select their spouses. "They said they will watch this battle (standing on one foot) with great attention and see how the warriors were fighting and then accordingly take them to heavens in their chariots. Then they would make paintings of sandalwood on their bodies, beautiful like chandan (sandalwood) on the day of selection of their beloved spouses (of choice) and then take them to heaven like a swambar ceremony (in this battle). That day their lives would be successful and they would embellish their body (limbs) with ornaments. O Friend ! The day we would wed (marry) Paras Nath in this battle like swambar, (then only this life would be worth while). (108)

Bisanpad. Kafi.

On all the four sides, the songs of death were being heard and all the warriors carrying their maces and weapons in their hands started pouring in the battlefield raising war cries with great stubbornness. They used many weapons like arrows, bows, swords and bayonets along with shooting many arrows. It appeared as if the rain drops from the thick clouds were coming in the form of arrows. The shields and coats of mail were penetrated (with arrows) in no time and had passed (penetrated) through to the other side. The sharp arrows had penetrated the Earth and reached the abode of snakes (nether-lands). The warriors, unsheathing their swords, were brandishing them in various ways and were using their daggers. It appeared as if the path to heavens was clearly shown to the hearts. (109)

Countless ascetics (hermits) had been wounded with the arrows and they had gone to heavens forgetting their love for the body and wealth. The shields, protective coats of mail, chariots, banners and small flags (buntings) had been cut into pieces and thrown on the ground. They were looking glamorous so that Indrapuri, Jampuri (place of god of death) and devpuri (place of gods) would put themselves into shame in comparison (feel belittled). The ornaments and coloured robes were lying scattered on the ground. It appeared as if in the Asoka garden of Indra, the coloured flowers of Basant (season) had withered and fallen (had scattered). The pearls fixed on the heads of elephants had scattered, being killed. It appeared as if the beautiful drops of nectar had fallen down on the opening of the mouth of the ardent. (110)

Dev Gandhar. Second form.

From both the sides, the warriors were attacking each other and were running around while wielding their swords, and were shouting, "Kill them, Kill them." The enraged hermits with fixed positions (with feet entrenched) were moving around the battlefield in great rage. Having attacked the forces of elephants and chariots with great strength, they had finally fallen down in the battlefield. They were stretching the bows up to the ears and pinpointing their aim on certain positions, they were shooting their arrows. The Kashatriyas, fulfilling their religious (moral) duty, truly brave men, were shooting their arrows and were causing wounds to the limbs of the enemy (thus throwing them down), thus the youthful warrior were waging war. It was just like Mahabharta (war) wherein Bhisham Pitama was lying on the bed of arrows. (111)

Thus many ascetics had been killed, many were tied together and then (forcefully) drowned in water, while many others had been burnt in fire. Many had their one hand cut off while some others had both their hands cut off. The infantry men along with those on chariots were cut into small bits and pieces, while many others had lost their heads (being chopped off). Many had lost their crowns, being beaten (struck) with sticks while some others had their tufts of hair pulled out (cut off). The warriors fallen on the ground being frightened with fear, were wounded and blood was oozing out of the wounds. It appeared as if all of them were playing holi at the end of life during the Basant festival (spring season). (112)

Bisanpad Adan.

The oily beautiful hair were dressed up (arranged) nicely, while the fairies were dressed up like charming women and moving around in all the four directions. Their chins were looking beautiful, with their noses having nose rings ; while the eyes had been filled with collyrium. What to talk of the common men, even the god of love (Kamdev) was enamoured with their beauty (charm). They were all watching this charming youth and wishing to wed him (after his death). He had all his limbs covered with robes, sprinkled with saffron all over in that battle, they were wedding all the warriors, being picked up one by one, with great zeal (facing death one by one). They were wedding all those warriors, who used to win (the wars) with swords, arrows and spears in action. (They were facing death). (113)

How far could I praise their valour, as I am afraid the Granth may not become voluminous but I am trying to detail these events briefly by editing it with due consideration. So I am depicting it briefly with the Grace of the Lord and with my ability as far as possible. When Paras Nath waged such a war, using various types of weapons. Apart from those killed in battle, the rest of them managed to escape saving their lives, slipping away in all four directions. All those warriors, who fell at the lotus feet of Paras Nath (paying their obeisance), were saved. They were given gold and robes of honour and sent away with great respect. (114)

Bisanpad. Kafi.

Paras Nath had waged a great wars and spread his religion in the world, thus eliminating the religion of the Lord. He had killed many enemies by using various types of weapons. Finally the warriors of the (Prime male) Paras Nath had gained victory (in war) and all the ascetics (with matted hair) had lost the war. Many warriors in different guises (dresses) were lying dead on the ground , being wounded with the shower of arrows. It appeared as if to gain the abode of heavens, the souls had been blessed with wings. The warriors had lost their weapons and coats of mail, being cut into pieces were lying on the ground and they were being glorified (in their death). It appeared as if, with the beating of drums, they had effaced the blemish of their dynasty and gone to heaven with honour. (115)

Paras Nath had won a great battle. It appeared as if Karan and Arjuna had fought a second war as bloodshed was beyond imagination, which had made horses and elephants wash away (in the blood stream). Considering this battle as very dreadful, even the seven seas were feeling abashed (ashamed). With mutilated bodies due to the striking arrows, the ascetics were running around everywhere. It appeared as if due to the fear of Indra's strike, the mountains had taken to their wings. (even mountains got shaken up). Everywhere blood streams were flowing and the enemy being frightened, was running around. The Kashatriyas were talking ill about religion while the ascetics were fleeing away in all the ten directions. (116)

Bisanpad. Sorath.

The remnant of sanyasis (hermits), left alive, did not turn up again out of fear and went away to the jungles. They were being hunted around in various lands, jungles and mountains and had been killed by catching them up. They had been traced everywhere, including nether-lands, skies and heavens even and then killed. Thus the ascetics were completely destroyed and he (Paras Nath) started his own religion. Everyone was made to learn his style of worship, he spread his own spell of magic (mantra). The wounded ascetics caught during the battle, were shorn of their tufts of hair. Thus he made the religion of Datatra extinct from the world and Paras Nath made his principles (religion) as the main religion. (of the state). (117)

Thus a holi with swords was enacted there. (festival of colours). The line of shields was looking glamorous like a row of beating drums and spears delete were the handle of (gulal) covered powder (being sprinkled). The guns were like the syringes filled with coloured water, which were touching the limbs of the warriors. The blood oozing out of the human body was looking glorious as if it were saffron (being sprinkled). Eve the blood atained tufts (of matted hai) were looking beautiful but his beauty was beyond words. It appeared as if it were vermilion applied with great love. Many warriors, pierced with spears, were fallen on the ground. It seemed as if people having played (holi) were tired and lying down with stretched bodies. (118)

He ruled the country for ten thousand yers. Having banned the religion of Naturalists he assumed both the royal and yoga positions (of authority). The ascetics who kept hiding, were the only ones left alive. Thus they were the only ones reciting True Name in the world. Thus he ruled over the country in many ways and amassed wealth by various means. Wherever he heard (with his ears) about any ascetic living in the land he was immediately liquidated. Thus having gained victory over various areas, towns or foreign lands he sounded his trumpet of victory. Thus considering himself all powerful, (responsible for controlling the world) he completely forgot about the Lord Sublime. (119)

Ruamal Chhand :

Having ruled over country for ten thousand years with strength and having won many other lands, he had got his enemies executed. He had defeated many warrior kings and subjugated them under his control (authority), who were beyond praise with a charming personality. Thus that great Raja deided to perform a Yagna (called Bhup-medh). (120)

He arranged to bring various kings in chains, then along with his sons, friends and princes he (Paras Nath) went to Roh Land. Then along with his spouse, with all formalities, he performed the Yagna. He called millions of Brahmins and many ritaj (various food) were also collected. (121)

The Raja started performing the Bhup-medh Yagna and collected many powerful kings, friends sons and princes. Various types of people had gathered there. He had usurped their wealth including land. (from various Rajas). (122)

The various people (gathered there) saw with their eyes the total wealth amassed by Paras Nath. The Raja (Paras Nath) due to his strength and prowess was very proud and remarked that they should all begin performing Bhup-medh Yagna, just as in Sat-Yog, Raja Jambh had done earlier. (123)

The Ministers then said

If one arranges to kill one lakh Rajas, then only the Nrip-medh (Budh-medh) Yagna could be completed and then lot of wealth is to be offered to each one (of those performing) the Yagnas and all their worldly sufferings should be eliminated and each one without any consideration should be presented with one lakh horses ; then only the Yagna should be considered solemnized fully. O King Incarnation ! Listen to me. (124)

Various forms of wealth and property is to be given away in one istant (go). Apart from this one lakh elephants, two lakh horses and many loads of gold are to be given away. Each one of the Brahmin is to be given without delay ten millions worth of money, then only the Yagna should be considered completed, O King Emperor ! Listen. (125)

Then Paras Nath said

Ruaal Chhand

"There was no dearth of gold and there would be no shortage if we were to distribute it for many years. There is no shortage of elephants even with me, one could easily check up the horses stable. Whatever money was needed could be taken without any hesitation. O friendly ministers ! Listen and do not have any doubts in your mind. (126)

When the Raja made these remarks, then the prime minister saluted the king (Raja) with folded hands and with (both) down cast eyes, he said, " O great king ! I am telling you one more thing, which you should listen attentively, which I have heard (learnt) from Puranas and Smritis. " (127)

When the Raja (Paras Nath) said these words, then the prime minister rushed on hearing these words. He sent for five lakh Rajas and asked them." Is there any other king in the world (seven regions) who had not been defeated by the Raja." (129)

All of them were looking with downcast eyes and none of them gave any thoughtful reply as to who was left on the whole Earth (in the world) about whom they should tell him. One Raja said then
Ruaal Chhand

One king said, " O Raja ! Listen to my words. If you would pardon my life, then only I could say this thing. O King Emperor ! There was one Muni (ascetic) in the stomach of a great fish, who lives under the sea. O Rajni ! He was known and called by other kings as a personification of love and learning." (131)

"One day the king with tuft of hair had entered (gone into) the sea and saw one beautiful maid, with a clever guise resembling a painting. On seeing her the Incarnation of Shiva (Siva's Dutt) (dropped) discharged his semen in the sea. O Rajan ! Then a Yogi, named Machhindra (born out of that semen) was residing in the stomach of that fish, in the form of a small child." (132)

Therefore, O Raja ! So we should go and ask anything of knowledge (learing) from him only, as he alone could tell you correctly. O Raja ! He would tell you many other things as well. When the king Incarnation, the king emperor heard these words, then taking all the fishing nets of the world, he left for tracing him (that child) in the depths of seas. (133)

The Raja then with the beating of drums and bringing all the nets of the world along with a huge force left for that place, as he was full of pride in his mind. He called all the ministers, friends and princes along with their wealth towards the sea and everywhere in the seas spread his fishing nets in search of that great fish (Machh) with intimidating postures for the enemy. He took out of the seas many varieties of fish, tortoises, and other beings, caught in his nets, and they all died. (gave up their lives). During this hour of suffering (difficult situation) all the beings went together to the sea and all wise beings then told the sea like this. (135)

The ocean in the form of a Brahmin, then came to the Raja and without any effort, he offered many jewels, diamonds and pearls and said, " O Raja ! Listen to me ! Why are you killing all the beings ?.The purpose for which you had come was not this spot (but somewhere else). (136)

The Ocean then said

Ruaal Chand

" O Incarnation of King ! Listen. There was a Chheer Ocean, there the great yogi, Machhindra was residing in the stomach of a great fish. You should take him out of the ocean with the help of a fishing net and then ask him. O Rajan ! You should do as I have told you, as this was the only right procedure. " (137)

The Raja, collecting all the warriors and wading through the ocean, went further ahead. Everywhere the fairies were moving around and there was lot of enthusiasm everywhere. There were various types of trumpets being blown and beating of drums was heard. So they all reached the place of chheer Ocean finally. (138)

The a huge fishing net out of cotton was spread (thrown) in the great sea there, Many beings were caught but that child, Machhindar was nowhere to be seen. All the warriors, after (spreading) throwing the nets everywhere in the sea, were tired with their unsuccessful efforts and they then came to the Raja and said, " Many other beings had been caught but that yogi had not been found. (139)

The yogi Machhinder was lying safe in the stomach of the fish without having any hopes. The nets could not even lay its hand (touch him) as the Muni was in a body form. There was another net, which should be used (for the purpopse) without any further consideration. O King Incarnation ! " O Raja ! I am telling you the truth." (140)

" O Rajan ! We have heard the name of that fishing net called 'gyan' (knowledge). By throwing that net in the ocean, you could catch hold of the great Muni, Machhindar, even after the lapse of many years. O saviour of Bharat ! Listen to me, I am telling you the truth." (141)

By such means the great Muni will not be caught, not- withstanding millions of efforts on our part. You may catch hold of him by using the net of knowledge. (Gyan Net). When the great Raja (Paras Nath) had cast the Net of knowledge in the sea, that net managed to catch hold of the Muni, as if a second "Datich" had been born. (142)

Machhindra Yogi was caught along with the great fish in the fishing net. On seeing the great fish all the onlookers lost their sense of proportion. After sometime (two hours later) when they regained their senses, then all the warriors, wearing (beautiful) glamorous weapons and protective covers, came to the Raja's palace. (143)

They ripped open the stomach of the great fish, but they could not pierce it by any means. When all had failed in their efforts, then they called the friend and asked for his advice. They suggested that there should be some other mode of piercing its stomach, so that we could see the great Muni (Machhindra) and our job could be completed successfully. (144)

Couplet :

The stomach of the fish could not be torn open and all their efforts had failed. (They got tired of their efforts). Then they went to the Guru, named Gyan and asked for the solution. (145)

Totak Chhand :

The warriors, leaving aside their pride, went to the Raja and said, " O Rajan ! Let us enquire from the Guru, named Gyan (knowledge) so that he might possibly give us somesolution or mode of operation." (146)

The king, after doing full justice to a proper solution (of good nature) and considering a solution based on knowledge, the Raja said. " O Gurudev ! Pray tell me the secret, so that we may have a glimpse of the great Muni." (147)

The Gyan Guru then remarked by saying (which were auspicious and consoling.) " O Rajan ! Take the dagger of intelligence in hand and tear open the belly of this fish." (148)

The they did accordingly, as advised by the Gyan Guru. By taking the dagger of intelligence in hand, they ripped open its belly. (149)

When the stomach of the fish was torn open completely, then they perceived the king of the world, Machhindra. He was meditating with the closed eyes, and he was resting in a stable (serene) mood, without any disturbance of mind, being without hopes or desires. (150)

There was an idol made of seven metals, which was offered to the Muni. When the Rishi opened his eyes (after meditation), then that idol was (burnt) reduced to ashes. (151)

If anyone else were to come under his glance, then he would not have been reduced to ashes. The (worship) meditation of the Lord cannot be performed without love and devotion. (152)

When the idol was burnt to ashes, then it seemed the sun's rays had completely destroyed the darkness. Then they asked the great Muni to explain the secret of this whole happening (" O Muni ! Please tell us the details of this action.") (153)

Naraj Chhand :

" O great Muni ! Tell me, if there was any king, who was not afraid of me in the world and be benevolent to inform me about it. Was there any (king)stubborn warrior, whom I had not won over ? Was there any fearless place, where people were not afraid of me ?" (154)

"What is the use of winning over the whole world and frightening them (without your control) and what is the value of establishing your superior authority by embellishing elephants with glorious ornaments and beating of drums in the whole world (ten directions) ? O Rajan ! The mind, which controls all minds, had not been subjugated by you. The prestige (of others) has been lost by you and nothing of value had been achieved by you. You have lost this world and even the next world will not be attained by you. (You have not gained anything in this life nor you will gain in the life hereafter)." (159)

" O Raja ! What is the value of gaining control of this Earth ? Why feel proud about it , as this would not keep company with you ? This world was very deceptive and deceitful, as this belongs to none and no one belongs to this Earth. Neither all the palaces, treasures and charming wife will not be yours in the end (of life) and wil not give you company. What do you talk of other things, even this body (of yours) will not accompany you (in the end). ? (160)

Why be proud of your kingdom, which will not accompany you (in the end) ? All your palaces, treasures, landed property would belong to someone else in one (go) moment only. (after death). Out of your sons, wife, friends and other associates, none of them would give your company at the end of his life. O Ignorant fool ! Remember, that even your body, created along with you, will not accompany you. (161)

" O King ! What is the value of your warriors, as they will not be able to bear the burden of your death when this responsibility is thrown on their shoulders (on your death). When you are beset with dreadful problems (of death), all will run away from you and would not like to fight the battle like Mahabharta (on your death) again. O King ! None of your efforts will be of any avail, as all the friends at the time of death, shall shed tears only. O King ! Even your sons, wife and other friends will call you, after death, as a ghost. (you will have no value for anyone)." (162)

" The chariot, decorated with jewels, studded with diamonds and pearls, whose mighty charioteers were embellished with jewels and ornamented robes, seeing its glamour, even gold was feeling jealous and (being attracted towards it). The body was covered with robes of brocade and beautiful ornaments. This way the glory of the son of kamdev 'Anand' Raja. The day he would come roaring with armed strength, then O Rajni ! Listen. Except patience, nothing else would face it." (175)

" Its (His) chariot was of a smoky shade with horses of the same colour being attached to its chariot. The ornaments were also smoky and the gods, Muni and men feel ashamed on seeing its beauty. Its eyes were also like smoke, when a body like smoke, with ornaments also of the same shade, were vomiting also with the same type, and were likely to trouble the enemy race. This was 'Doubt' the fourth child of Kamdev. When he will get furious with rage and attack, O Rajni ! He will destroy your whole army in a moment. (Crush it)" (176)

If we were to enumerate other warriors, they have also beautiful names. They are equally mighty warriors, have won many battles, and are with good nature and qualities. There was one woman called Kaleh (quarrel) who had a clashing personality and could create many conflicts (problems) and she had not spared a single god or man (from its effect) in the whole Universe. She was an expert in using all weapons and arms and she was very impressive. Her fear was felt throughout the world in various lands, garbs and all kingdoms." (177)

There was a great fearlerss warrior called "Vair" (Enmity) which was invincible in the battlefield. It had never shown its back (never had been defeated) and had won over many kings. It had red eyes, and all the weapons worn by it were red coloured. Its standard (flag) was having the glory of sun and even red colour was ashamed of itself on seeing it. Thus, this (Vair) Enmity was a great warrior. O Rajan ! The day, it would become furious with rage and attack with a roar, Listen ! Apart from tranquillity (peaceful), there was no other power to quell it (defeat it). (178)

The other one smoke, which had a banner of smoky colour, with a chariot of smoke, and a charioteer of smoke. It was wearing a robe of smoke on its body, on seeing which even smoke was feeling ashamed. It was having in hand a bow of smoke and the arrows fixed in it were also of smoke, on seeing them even the gods, human beings, snakes, cobras, demigods and demons were feeling abashed (ashamed) with such a glorious nature, the king 'Alas' (laziness) will get involved in a battle, O Rajni ! Listen, apart from "Udam" (endeavour) the whole army of efforts will be washed. (179)

Now with a green coloured flag, with a green coloured bow and green horses and a green coloured chariot, all are looking glorious. The robes on the body are also green coloured, which have enamoured both the gods and men equally. The chariot moves with the speed of wind and even the whirlwind gets belittled on seeing its speed.The cloud on hearing its words with the ears feels surprised and peaceful (comforted) at heart. This glorious picture was seen of the Raja Madh and O Rajan ! When he will come trotting his horse, then apart from Bibek (knowledge) who else could face him in battle ? (180)

Now there was a black coloured banner and the charioteer was also black along with black robes and horses were also black (dark) coloured with black weapons or protective cover on body while a stream of arrows were also black coloured, which were destroying all suffering. The body was covered with black coloured ornaments of jewels on all limbs. Such a type of fearless warrior was 'Kavirat' and the day he will wage a war, then the warrior called 'patience' alone will come up for opposing him as the rest will flee in no time. (181)

Then another warrior with a protective coat of leather (skin) and professing a Kashatriya religion, challenges all other warriors in the battlefield considering himself invincible. When he confronted any warrior, then the other warrior does not show any patience. All the gods, demons, human beings, demigods, Shiva's musicians were singing his praises. Such a warrior called "guman" (pride) would launch an attack one day, with great strength then only 'Seel' (gentleness) O Rajan ! Could oppose him, as the rest will raise a hue and cry only. (182)

Another warrior with ruthlessness will attack with great fury like the lightning of the month of August/September (bhadon) unsheathing a sword with a thud and then with a flash of lightning will strike in the battlefield. There will be mass killings with a flash of lightning will strike in the battlefield. There will be mass killings with corpses heaped together and facing the enemy will use spears. When the Raja called Indignation (anger) will wage a war, who will bear the brunt of its onslasught ? His brother 'Apman' (dishonour of disgrace)was also on his side and when he became furious (like Rudra-Shiva) then apart from seel (gentleness) and duseel warriors, who else could join in the battle ? The person who possessed a circular bow, and who was engaged in a battle always and seeing his might, the groups of warriors were always on the run. Seeing their beauty, who else could have taken up courage to face him ? Instead, the warriors felt ashamed, would not continue fighting in the battle, and were running away in all the directions out of fear. Thus the warrior called anarth (destruction), out of being furious with rage, shall trot his horse one day in the battlefield ; O Rajan ! Listen ! Who else apart from the warrior named 'Patience' (dheeraj) could oppose him and check his advance ? (184)

Then a warrior, having yellow coloured robes with a yellow flag fluttering above the chariot. A yellow coloured bow in hand was looking glorious and eliminates the pride of kamdev (god of love). The charioteer was also in yellow coloured robes and yellow coloured horses were pulling the chariot, while the arrows were also of yellow colour. That warrior then would roar in the battlefield. O Rajan ! The warrior of this type was called Vair. (Enmity) When he would get annoyed and crush the armed strength with a challenge then who else except 'knowledge' would come forward for a match in the battle ? (185)

Then there was another warrior with dirty robes on the body along with some filthy ornaments attached to the chariot, with a dirty crown on the head and was holding very nice arrows in hand. The charioteer was also looking filthy, with dirty ornaments. With a scent on the dirty appearance of sandalwood and was to cause sufferings to the whole enemy race. Such a trunk-less warrior called slander (Nind) will launch an attack one day, O great warrior (Paras Nath) ! Listen. Then except 'Patience' who else will match him in the battlefield ? (186)

Even the warrior, called "Swarga" (heavens) was trembling on seeing its glamour. Thus, there was a dreadful warrior called 'Narak' (hell) and the day it would attack with fury, O Rajan ! Listen ; except the Lord's True Name, nothing else will be of any avail and none will escape its onslaught. (187)

Then there was (another warrior) who holds the spear lightly and strikes with the spear from the front side. It shines brightly with ruthlessness (anger) and gets engrossed in the battle like a drunken elephant. It does not move from one place to another without setting each one of the things in disorder, It launches its attack on one only and bears the brunt of weapons facing it. So, when the disgruntled warrior called "Nasil" (with a spolied nature) and "dusheel (with a rough and crude nature) along with anothr warrior called "Kucheel" (imperfect) challenges some one, O King of Kings ! He was having red eyes with red coloured robes, a great warrior and an archer with great patience. He was formidable, youthful with broad eyes with a haughty mind. He was most beautiful, most powerful, fearless, invincible and a wonderful fighter. Such warriors were hunger and thirst, which were very powerful. " The other warrior had a chariot, moving with the speed of wind, while the wise (sensible) people were getting enchanted with its movement. It was very powerful with great strength, invincible and having an outlook of a status and very impressive figure. It should be considered as the saviour (protector) of the whole force. This was the warrior called (karodh) wrath or anger with huge eyes, to be considered a powerful warrior in mind. It had full control of the body, like the protective coat of mail, with a stretched bow in hand. O king ! The day it will start trotting its horse (attack) listen to me, I am telling the truth, except tranquillity (shanti) nothing else will be able to hold it back." (193)

" Then there is another warrior moving like a drunken elephant, wielding a dreadful sword in his hand. It had black coloured ornaments, studded with pearls and rubies all over. This elephant like figure was embellished with a golden girdle and a net around the waist ; its prowess was very impressive and its attendants were sucessful and great persons. This was the beauty of the warrior called 'egoism' (ahankar) which should be listed as a powerful fighter. It had won over all the the beings of the world, being itself invincible." (194)

" The next warrior was riding a white elephants and on all four Sides beautiful flywhisks were being swung (blown) and a golden girdle was tied around its waist, which had enamoured all the men and women. A beautiful spear was held in his hand while a sword was shining forth in his (other) hand. Perceiving its bright brilliance, even the charm of lightning was feeling belittled. Such a mighty warrior was called (Droh) 'Revenge' which was known to have a great say and all the kings of far and near lands were aware of its might (authority). (195)

He was an indestructible warrior ; with a beautiful form, an extra ordinary glory and a perfect archer. His arms were very beautiful and could not be cut into pieces, with a name (bharam) doubt. The day it will launch an attack, being furious with rage, then only thoughtfulness could save you, O King !" (196)

" (The next warrior) was having a necklace with beads of rubies while the headdress was studded with jewels. He was the caretaker of all the warriors, being very powerful indivisible, and invincible and all the supervisors were uunder him. A sword was hanging from the waist, with a spear in hand, while he was shooting arrows like a shower with the hands. On seeing his impressive smiling posture, even the lightning was trying to hide itself behind the clouds, being ashamed of itself. Such invincible and unbreakable warriors were known by the names of Brahm Dokh and Gumokh (blemish and non-redemption) " O Raja ! Thus the blissful Raja, who could subdue the enemy being invincible, it could be considered as only (indiscrimination). Abibeki."

" Another warrior with black robes and dark body was very powerful who could remain steadfast in the battlefield. He was mighty and a great warrior, who had defeated all the warriors on land or sea. Such an invincible, unbreakable, Indivisible, Indestructible warrior was called Anarth. (Misfortune). It could crush the enemy and its main duty was to completely destroy the enemy. Such a fearless earrior, a warrior who could not be wounded and having great glamour, could be known as invincible, giving solace to its companios and a mighty fighter." (198)

Thus, the warriors called Falsehood and Untruth will create such an havoc one day in the battle then O Rajan ! Nothing else except Truthfulness could match their strength. I am telling the truth." (199)

His chariot was black and white with a black white banner flying gloriously on it. His robes were also black and white coloured, seeing which the gods, men and Munis were feeling belittled The charioteer was also of white and black colour, with the same coloured dress being glorified. There was a golden ribbon (lace) tied to the hair as if he was a second Indra (god). Such a beautiful warrior was called 'Falsehood' with great impressive personality, which was very powerful. It had won over all the human beings of the world and npne was left being defeated." (200)

" (The next warrior) was holding a wheel (revolving) in hand, with a beautiful robe covering the body. He was chewing betel nut in the mouth, with an aroma all around. He was being glorified in all the four directions, with a flywhisk being flown overhead. The spring (basant) was bowing its head on seeing its beauty and charm with its eyes. This type of warrior, called 'Worry' (chinta) was a deadful fighter and was having his arms extending up to the knees. With an indestructible body, fearless, it was known as a mighty warrior." (201)

" The warrior, called 'laziness' was of a very quarrelsome nature. His body was having a protective coat of mail, a shield in one hand and an axe in the other hand. He was a dreadful warrior of a peculiar type and was very wrathful. A horrible smoke was coming out of his nose and eyers." (213)

Ruaal Chhand :

"Suicidal' and 'ungreatefulness' were two brothers who were very dreadful. They would destroy the enemy warriors and were protectors of their own forces. Who was there born out of a double-breasted woman, so powerful as not to be frightened of them ? Perceiving their powerful form, the warriors would flee away in despair."(214)

" Friendly malice" and "royal malice" were both brothers of the same type ; both belonged to the same family with a common mother. By following the Kashatriya religion, both the stubborn warriors attack whichever side in the battlefield, and then which warrior could face them with patience in protecting the honour of their side. They win the battle by engaging them in severe struggle." (215)

'Jealousy' and 'dejection' were both great warriors in the world. On seeing them, the enemy would take to their heels while the fairies get pleased at this sight. Which mighty warrior with patience would oppose them as they could win against all foes? The warriors flee from the battlefield being frightened of them (by mincing grass with the teeth). Then no other warrior could dare to arm himself with weapons or protective cover." (216)

All the warriors will prove to be untrue (worthless) and flee from the battlefield. " The other warrior was smoky in colour with eyes like smoke and was producing (flame) fire from the mouth equivalent to seven lit fires (fumigations). He had worn thin clothes on the body, having a frightening and stubborn outlook (colour). Its name was (alus) ' Idleness' or Lethargy'. O King Incarnation of Kings ! Listen. Which was the warrior to kill it by attacking it with arms and weapons ?" (221)

Totak Chhand :

" It wields the sword with ruthlessness producing a tinkling sound of the gangling clouds. It was called a warrior by the name (khed) 'Regret' which was indivisible. Amongst the warriors, it was known as a perfect fighter (warrior)." (222)

" Then another warrior with a glorious form, spitting a dreadful fire (from its body) (flames were emitting) It was having a white sword in hand, with a white shining flash; its teeth were milky white, which were very pleasing to the mind. This warrior was called by the name (kukiria) "Vicious Actions". (223)

" Then another warrior with a dark (black) complexion and an ugly appearance (body) on the very sight of it, one gets the feeling of 'Ignorance'. Such a mighty warrior was called ('gilan') 'Reproach'. It was very stubborn and never leaves the field getting defeated (never gets defeated)." (224)

" The body is covered with beautiful protective coat of iron. With a form like 'hardship' this warrior would make 'Tribulation' feel jealous of it. It was a mighty warrior and could never be subjugated (brought under submission). Both the gods and the demons were recognizing it." (225)

" When the warrior called (karam) 'benevolence' will function with strength and will land in the battlefield on a horseback, "O king ! Then which warrior of yours would dare to oppose it ? It will defeat then all the power or might (of them)."(226)

Couplet :

Thus when the warriors of the king 'Ignorance' (lack of knowledge) will take up a form (body) and launch an attack, then none of the supporters of the king 'knowledge' will be able to confront it in the battlefield. (227)

Chhapai Chhand :

" Just as the details of the king 'Ignorance' along with its supporters (army) had been described earlier and we have known their destination, ornaments and chariots etc. O Muni ! Just as you had described with great kindness details of weapons, protective coverings, bows, banners and their colours, in the same manner let us now consider details of 'Knowledge' now. So please explain details of the 'King Knowledge' now as explained earlier for 'Ignorance'. Now please explain in detail the glamour, influence and glittering beauty of the king of kings called (Bibek) 'Knowledge'." (228)

The Muni Machhindra had practiced many ways and means and uttered many types of 'mantras' (magical spells), performed many types of mystical formulae and wrote many types of incantations (witchcraft). First of all he purified himself and then enunciated them and explained details of the king 'Knowledge' , as the details of "Ignorance" along with its armed forces were given earlier. Thus the gods and demons like Fire, Wind, Moon, Sun etc. in all the four directions got surprised. All the demigods and Shiva's musicians were wondering as to the type of struggle being brought out by him in this description. (229)

There was a white canopy overhead, while white horses were yoked to the white chariot. The body was also covered with white coloured robes, on seeing them both the gods and men were running in fantasy. The moon was also wondering while the sun seeing its brilliance was getting confused about its own function. The black bees were also in confused state on seeing its glamour while demons, gods and men were all wonderstruck. O Rajan ! This was the beauty of the king "Knowledge" and it was known to be very powerful. The groups of Munis and other kings were paying their obeisance to it. Thus it was known all over the three worlds. (230)

Beautiful flywhisks were being waved on all the four sides; the swans of Mansarovar were feeling (ashamed) shy on seeing its charm and its whole body wass very pure and transparent and its brilliance was very praiseworthy. It had enamoured the hearts of gods, men, snakes, Indra, demigods and mythological horse (with human face). "O king of Kings ! When it will be shooting arrows, then listen to me ! None apart from 'Ignorance' will be able to stand against it and shoot arrows at it. (231)

It had a sharp and a flawless brilliance, with an indestructible strength. It had a great glamour and was a great warrior, whose trumpet was blowing everywhere (on land and seas). Its chariot was moving with the speed of wind and seeing it even lightning feels ashamed of itself. On hearing its words even the thunder of clouds on all four sides become doubtful and fly off, being enchanted by it. It was invincible on both land and sea and was not afraid of anyone, so it should be considered a mighty warrior. Such a wonderful warrior was called 'Patience', which was known very powerful in the world. (232)

Then there was a religious and very considerate warrior, who was fearless and was very stubborn in nature. It was like the (mythological) Kalap tree (which fulfils all our desires), which was capable of tearing asunder all evil deeds with a sword and a great praiseworthy mighty warrior. It glamour was too well known which could set the battlefield on fire. It did not believe in Brahm weapon or Shiva's protective cover but was only keen on inflicting wounds (to the enemy). This was a brilliant and glamorous Kashatriya king called 'Pledge' (barat). When it fires its weapons in the battlefield, then O King ! Then no other warrior except 'Abirt and Sabirt' Thoughtless and Thoughtfulness could oppose it. (233)

The warrior, whose body was indivisible, with an indestructible glitter and an invincible brilliance like the force of fire. Its was known all over the world, at both land and sea with the speed of wind of its chariot. It was a warrior called 'discipline with beautiful arms, which all the men and women had known. When it would thunder in the battlefield, armed with its arrows, in the form of a 'Virtuous nature', O king ! Then none except (Abirt and Sabirt') thoughtful or thoughtless could oppose it. (234)

The warrior, whose brilliance was wonderful and restive horses were yoked to the chariot, while a flute with a bewitching note was producing the music. That warrior was called (Nem) 'Systematic' and was dreadful looking but had taken the form of love. It possessed a good form, with a great glamour that was always winning the battle while destroying the enemy. Such was this invincible warrior in war who was indestructible, having patience and was very powerful. It was fearless, indivisible, with a perfect form and flawless and was supposed to be invincible. (235)

He had a glorious personality, with a great strength and was fearless as well as imperishable and an indivisible warrior. His chariot was shining like lightning, while its luster was everlasting. The enemy gets shocked on seeing its brilliance, gets frightened, and then flees from the battlefield. Even the greatest warriors become impatient in its presernce, no one could shoot such accurate arrows as he, being a stubborn warrior. Such a warrior was called 'Science' (Technology) and it was considered very powerful. In the land of science, everyone feared it. (Everyone was afraid of it in the land of science). (236)

A flame of fire was coming out of its mouth, while a small dreadful drum was producing a din in the battlefield and the sound produced from its mouth was like the thunder of the cloud, which was astonishing. It holds the spear strongly by picking up courage and attacks the enemy from the front. On seeing all this the gods, demons and Brahma were saluting him. Its name was 'Bath' (ishnan) which was very proud. O King ! When it would launch an attack by taking its bow in the battlefield, then apart from Dirty (Filthy) none else could oppose it in the battle. (237)

There was another warrior called (Nivirti) 'Resolve' and the second one was intensive 'Emotion', which was also a mighty warrior. Both these warriors were very powerful, indestructible beyond comprehension, indivisible and unbreakable. When both of them armed with weapons, would thunder (roar) in the battlefield, then the cowards would run away from there on seeing them. They would shiver out of fear like the leaves and countless warriors would not confront them with patience. O King ! When the warrior with patience would arm itself with weapons and fight in battle, then all the warriors, leaving their weapons behind, would run away from the battlefield and no warrior would be left in the battlefield. (238)

Sangeet Chhapai Chhand :

When the large drums were being sounded, then the warriors get engrossed in battle. Many corpses get scattered in the battlefield, while the protective covers get broken. The ghosts and Bhairon (deity) along with known sidhas watch the battle scene. At all places demigods and evil spirits are seen saluting them, the indestructible great warrior called 'Discipline' (sanjam), getting furious would then attack with thunder, then apart from (Durmat) 'evil-minded', a warrior none else could oppose it by confronting it. (239)

The yoga while saluting, would become furious with rage, while looting and killing the enemy and would unsheathe its sword with a bang. One day when it would arm itself with weapons and protective cover, the enemy would take to its heels and would not wait for a while even. Their faces would become pale and white and they would run away from the battlefield, when the dreadful warrior would look at them. (240)

One was "adoration" and another called "worship" were two warriors ; when these two warriors would get enraged and will establish themselves with great strength then the enemy would get terrified with fear and run away from the battlefield, leaving behind their weapons. They would be uprooted just as a strong gust of wind makes the leaves fly off. All the warriors would flee trotting their horses. Those who have deserted from Kashatriya principles, will find themselves in the lowest levels of society. (241)

This warrior was looking glorious by having a beautiful flywhisk being blown overhead from all the four sides. It was having white robes and white horses while its weapons were looking, glamorous. The warrior called ('abikar') 'flawless', was indivisible and a great fighter. It had great glamour, which was indestructible, and a mighty warrior, without any deceit in the battlefield. O great king ! By arming itself with weapons and protective cover, it would challenge the enemy and none could stand against it. Who else could oppose it in battle ? (242)

There was a warrior called (science) "Education" and the second was known as 'Modesty' ; both these warriors were indestructible with great glamour. They were horrible looking like the black bee, mighty and could not be burnt. They were indivisible, imagitated and mighty and would remain firm in the battle. They were great fighters and powerful like the bull with broad shoulders and long arms stretching up to knees. Both were looking glorious and when they will beat their drums in the battlefield, then all will run away without any shame and none will come forward to oppose them. (243)

Naraj Chhand :

There was another indivisble warrior by the name of 'Chance' or opportunity, which was known throughout the world (in each house). It was called indivisible, indestructible and beyond punishment. If one were to ponder about it then there was none equal to it in power. (244)

There was another warrior, with an indivisible kingdom, who was very powerful. He was called by the name 'Virtuous', who was invincible. When he attacked with full preparation of arms and weapons with full modesty, then he would get glorified like the sun, which is beyond destruction. (245)

Especially the warrior holding arrows, spear and a sword when that warrior with the name of 'Detachment' would roar in the battlefield, then the second warrior called 'Greedless' also thunders. Then all charioteers, those having elephants, masters of horses and huge army, run away from the battlefield. (246)

All the warriors, who were great worshippers, stubborn followers of penance and truth seekers were known among the invincible warriors. Whosoever was invincible in the world were considered among pious (pure) people with pure bodies. The warrior called (Akam) 'Passionless" (sexless) was considered very beautiful. (247)

When the warrior, with the name of (Akrodh) 'Wrathless' will go to the battlefield with fury, then many warriors, being forgetful of their moral duty, would run away from the battlefield. However, the warrior called (Laj) 'modesty' with an indivisible form and most beautiful appearance was known as its adviser or minister. (248)

From the warriors called prime element and including (Nirhankar) 'Ego less' warriors would roar in the battlefield and along with huge army of mighty warriors, they would obstruct many warriors. Many warriors with spears in hand, being furious with rage, would get engrossed in battle. Thus, many strong bows and coats of mail of many warriors would be broken. (249)

Naraj Chhand :

One saintly warrior (reciting True Name) with great earestness, getting furious with rage, launches an attack and becomes glamorous like countless suns and the warriors get engrossed in battle to destroy the enemy. That times the girths (saddle straps) of the warriors called Falsehood and Cruel get broken with a thud (sound). (250)

Those warriors getting ready and moving forward then (use) throw spears and daggers. Bearing many wounds on the body, they push away many foes backwards. The warriors wield their swords with the flash of lightning and thus throw away the broken limbs not capable of being cut. (251)

The warriors were moving their spears with great strength like the lion and crush the troops of many mighty army commanders. Many powerful warriors fight with each other getting locked in a close combat. The gods, demons, demigods and kinars (mythological horse with human face) appreciate the valour (praise) of these warriors. (252)

This warrior was moving the spear (forward) and makes his horse run faster by moving with airs and the invincible kings were seen fleeing away. O King ! The warriors called "love" (devotion) was known for its charming personality. Its praises were sung in all the three worlds. (253)

The brilliant appearance of this warrior was like the sun, which was considered to be without (consisting of) (five) elements. That warrior was called (sanjog) opportunity (chance), which was known for killing its enemy. There was another warrior by the name "Peaceful", whose glory was known throughout the world. (254)

The warrior, whose beauty was known to be like the mighty indivisible king and when it becomes furious with rage, then it almost looks like the lion. Its name was (path) "religious study" (reading), which was known to be without any glamour. It never runs away from the battlefield and both the sun and moon were witness to it. (255)

One warrior was called "kindness (benevolence) or action and the otther 'accomplishment' (sichh) and they were known to be indivisible and invincible kings. These warriors were known to be with the fury of the lion and involved in battle like the clouds. Many musical instruments were played then and many weapons were brought into display. (256)

One warrior was called (Jag) and 'awakened and the other one was known as 'enlightened' (wise) while the third one was called "almsgiving" (charity), which was indivisible ; regularity (systematic), which was also indivisible, which had conquered the whole world ? The whole world and the sun are its witnesses. (257)

One warrior was called 'Truth' and the other as (santokh) "contentment', while the third one was called 'penance' whose praises were being sung throughout the world (all the four corners). Another was called 'Jaap' (chanting of scriptures or God's name), which was renowned these days throughout, which had won over many battles and was always free from hopes or desires. (258)

Chhapai Chhand :

A mighty warrior was called 'Regularity' while the second warrior was called "love or devotion" , which was inimical to the warriors and powerful in battle. Another powerful warrior was called "Restart" (brevity), while the fourth one consisted of 'patience'. The fifth one was exercising control (pranayam) and the sixth one was "concentration." While the seventh mighty warrior was known as "religion" (moral duty) by all the gods, demons, snakes, Shiva's musicians, etc. (259)

There were two other warriors, called 'inactivity' and 'enlightenment', which get enraged on seeing the battlefield. Thus with these troops both the sides started beating drums. (266)

Couplet :

With these preparations, both the troops, with beating of drums, attacked each other. Now the details of the various battles are given. (267)

Sri Bhagwati Chhand :

The warriors had risen from both the sides (and the fighting ensued) while the mighty warriors got engrossed in fighting. The drums were beating loudly and the trumpets were blowing. (268)

The laces of the spears were looking like the flames of fire, while the warriors were approaching near each other and were shouting war cries. (Ha Hai). (269)

The saffron elephants were trumpeting and bettledrums were beating and the warriors got locked up with each other and the coats of iron (protective covers) were cracking (with onslaughts). (270)

The black bees were producing their din, the horses were trotting around, and the warriors were falling down in the battlefield, completely soaked in blood. (271)

The warriors, under the patronage of the goddess 'Chamundi' were performing their duty and were joining the fray in the battlefield fully armed. (272)

The mighty warriors were fully armed and the drums were beating and the flames of fire were produced with their fury, which was causing one to wonder (one got wonder struck with the fury). (273)

The warriors were taking the battlefield like the fish in water. They display the use of arms and weapons for tasting victory. (274)

The warriors were being glorified, as if a lion was fully enraged. They were using arms and weapons and were crushing the enemy forces badly. (275)

The black bees were buzzing and the goddess of death was moving merrily. The evil spirits were busy and with skelétons (skulls) in hand they were engrossed (in collecting blood). (276)

The goddess was looking brilliant while the death (goddess) was making fun. The Bhairon was challenging while the small drums were beating slowly. (277)

Many weapons were being hurled like a shower, while the main weapons arrows (and bows) were being stretched. The devastating weapons were in use while the mild weapons were exhausted. (278)

The warriors had armed themselves with weapons of stones. The weapons of air (wind) were being used and the megh (rainy) weapons were in use, while the fire weapons were being pulled. (279)

The 'swan' weapons were being utilized, while the 'crow' weapons were being broken, the 'rain' weapons were being shot, and the "Fire weapons" were being stretched. (280)

'Kaam Astars' were being fired the (Kanod astar) 'wrathful weapons' were getting broken, the hostility weapons were in use and "bimoh astar" were being tightenerd (positioned). (289)

Then ('Charitar astar') 'character weapons' were in use, while "Moh astar" (the attachment weapons) were engaged in battle, "tras astars" (pruning weapons) were fired like a shower and the karod astar (wrathful weapon) were being straightened (positioned). (290)

Choupaiee Chhand :

Thus various types of arms and weapons were deployed and the warriors of the king 'discretion' had been annihilated. Then the king (reasoning) himself came forward and various types of trumpets were blown then. (291)

From both the sides, the drums were beating, which produced a great noise and din and a stream of arrows were showered covering the sky and the evil spirits and ghosts were locked in the fight (became busy). (292)

From the skies, the arrows of steel were showered (shot) like a drizzle and many mighty warriors tasted the efficacy of their arrows (on themselves). Many categories of warriors collected there and a terrible holocaust followed (dreadful battle ensued). (293)

The king 'discretion' was filled with great fury and gave orders to the whole army to advance and they attacked like one (group) force and the poet has given their names. (294)

They were having helmets on their heads and the horses were also covered with saddle gears and the warriors had worn belts around the waist, with iron gloves and protective coats of mail (covering) and the warriors moved forward for the battle. Due to fright the rivers had also frozen. (295)

Couplet :

From both sides, the songs of Maru (Rag) were raised and the drums were beating loudly. The warriors with weapons to be used with both hands and an urge to engage in battle, advanced in great strength. (296)

Bhujang prayat Chhand :

The true warriors were thundering in the battlefield with great eagerness (ambition). The weaver's instruments, flutes and conch shells were being played (blown) there. There was a great din produced in the battlefield by the warriors causing great confusion. The arms and weapons were being used and the ghosts along with evil spirits were dancing around. (297)

The infantrymen had carried their shields and special types of double-edged swords. They were riding horses of a fast moving pedigree looking like ghosts. In the battlefield the songs of death (Maru Rag) were being sung and the warriors were roaring loudly. The warriors were dancing on (to) the sounds of the bugle and they were moving helter shelter (haphazard). (298)

The horses were neighing, the elephants were trumpeting. The mighty warriors were moving sprightly, leaving aside their fast steeds (of sirazi type). The arms and weapons were producing a great and loud noise (thud), while the warriors were dancing around in the battlefield and flashes of light were coming out of the striking weapons. (299)

The dreadful Kali and evil-spirits were making merry, while the strong (betal) demon was making noise, spitting fire from its mouth. The evil spirits were also shrieking while sixty-four fairies were moving with zeal. These evil spirits were spitting fire and partaking the blood from the battlefield (of wounded soldiers). (300)

Those making the battle glorious were using their daggers with great speed and strength, while the fast steeds were trotting and the warriors were getting excited. Countless horses of various colours including reddish coloured, and belonging to kalia breed and horses of light blue colour and brownish colour were being washed away in the flowing stream of blood. (301)

The Arabic and Turkistain horses along with horses from Kutch area, or Arabic horses, were jumping around. It seemed as if they were like the mountains with wings. Lot of dust was rising upwards, which percolated on all sides rising to the sky. It had caused total darkness as if night had fallen. (302)

From this side Dutt had launched an attack while from the opposite side (enemy of Dutt) Anudutt had advanced so that the dust had covered the whole sky, while mutilated bodies were lying all around. The warrior called "anarchy" had floored the warrior called the 'greatest pledge'. He was riding a dirty looking horse with zeal while the Tatar horse was trotting around (jumping around). (303)

The hooves of the horses produced such a cloud of dust that it had covered (enveloped) the chariot of the sun (sun disc)., so that neither any direction, land or the sky were not visible. With the striking of arms and weapons, a terrible situation had arisen. The arrows were being shot, while the swords, daggers and knives were seen in action. (304)

Dutt had killed Andutt by holding his arrow and his whole army (force) had fled away, without looking back at all. By defeating one warrior, many others had run away from the field. (it appeared as if) the old leaves of Butea frondosa (tree) had been destroyed by the wind. (305)

The warrior 'Lobh' (greed) getting furious with rage was making his horse trot (jump) around. The warrior, who had run away, could only be safe, but whosoever had resisted, was killed. On seeing the warrior 'greed' in the battlefield, the enemy of greed (Analobh) had attacked it. The arrows shot by them had covered the whole sky. (306)

Ten arrows were shot at the warrior, called 'Patience' while sighting the warrior called "Restraint" had shot sixty arrows, nine arrows had wounded the body of the warrior 'Regularity', and twenty arrows had been shot at the warrior 'science' wounding it badly. (307)

Twenty-five arrows had been fired at purity (holiness) while eighty arrows had been shot at the body of worship (adoration) and eighty-five arrows had wounded the 'homage' (devotion) badly and with a huge club, the head of 'modesty' had been hit and torn apart. (308)

Eighty-two arrows had been shot at 'learning' (education) and thirty-three arrows had been directed at 'penance' (directly) . While warriors like 'greedless ness' had been wounded badly. (309)

The warrior "Egolessness", had been wounded by eighty arrows, and the waist of the warrior 'Prime-Soul' had been badly hit. Many arrows had been shot at 'compassion's' body and about hundred arrows had been shot at the body of 'Education' (learning). (310)

Couplet :

Then suddenly taking the arrow of 'knowledge', the warrior called 'charity' arrived on the scene, which was killed with the magical spell (mantra) of 'meditation'. (311)

Bhujang prayat Chhand :

In the battlefield, the warrior called 'charity' (alms giving) was jumping around, who was a great exponent of all the weapons and a treasure of the science of protective covering (coats of mail). With the help of ten arrows, the waist of 'greed' had been torn open while the body of 'Karodh' (wrathfulness) had been struck with seven arrows. (312)

The warrior 'Ignorance' had been wounded with nine arrows and the patient looking warrior called 'pledge' was torn apart with three arrows only. 'Sat sung' (holy congregation) warrior had killed the warrior called 'Anger' (wrath), which got wounded. With the punishment given by the warrior 'Lord's knowledge', the warrior called 'Dharma' (moral duty) became tolerant. (313)

Many arrows were directed by sighting the warrior :Destroyer of clan" and many arrows were shot at the warrior 'enmity'. Many wounds had been inflicted on the body of warrior 'lethargy'. The warriors starting from 'hell' (narak) had all fled away. (314)

With one arrow, the body of the warrior called 'Non-gentleness' had been cut into two while with the second arrow the charioteer of the :Untruthfulness" had been wounded badly. With the third arrow, four horses of 'pride' had been killed, while with the fourth arrow the youthful warriors of misfortune (injustice) had been destroyed. (315)

The warriors like thirst, hunger and laziness had fled away from the battlefield and considering Dutt Dev as a stubborn fighter, the ruthless 'greed' also ran away. The warrior called 'Regularity' got furious and destroyed the warrior called 'irregularity'. The warriors called 'greedless' and 'dejection' then adopted the path of Yoga. (316)

He then killed the warriors by the name, of 'deceit', 'destruction' and 'keenness'. Thewarriors, 'wrath', Attachement and dreadful 'lustful' were also killed. Then with great fury an arrow was shot at the warrior called 'Anger' (wrath), while 'egoism' had given the slip, while the rest of the warriors had been killed. (317)

Ruaal Chhand :

Shooting a thousand arrows had killed the warriors 'Malice' and 'Ego'. 'Lethargy', 'Doubt' and 'Attachment' were not considered at heart as worthwhile, enemies. Then 'thoughtlessness' and 'ill advice' were killed with (shooting of) many arrows, while 'slander' had been wounded with about thousand arrows without any hesitation. (318)

'Ungratefulness', 'Trustless ness' and 'Unfriendlines' had been killed. Similarly, the enemies of Royality and Divinity were thrashed with many weapons. Indifference, destruction and conquest had been destroyed with the (shooting) arrows. The warrior 'wrangle' had not been recognized as a great warrior due to its infighting. (319)

The troops with chariots, horses, elephants and even infantrymen had run away out of fear. The charioteers and even the greatest charioteer had fled away forgetting their moral duty. This impossible battle actually was beyond description. Even if we were to describe them with thousands of tongues, even then it was impossible to detail them. (320)

Defamation, fallacy and thanklessness etc. had been killed. Even 'wragles' and 'adversity' etc. had not been killed and indifference (dejection) and 'wrangling' had been thrown out of the battle. (321)

Remonstration, wrathfulness and prestige had been killed with many arrows. 'Capability' had dislodged 'Incapability' with thousand arrows. The 'character' had killed ;Ill-fame' with thousand arrows. The 'Malpractice' and evil-designs had been forced to run away out of fright. (322)

Chhapai Chhand :

The warrior 'Penance' had shot seventy arrows on sighting the warrior called 'Non-penance' and 'gentleness' had shot ninety arrows at non-gentleness while the meditation had killed non-recitation with thousand arrows. "Bad advice" and 'Bad action' had been pierced with twenty and thirty arrows respectively. Lethargy with ten arrows and 'lustfulness' with many arrows had been pierced. While 'entity' had been killed with many arrows and 'knowledge' with many more arrows pointed at it in the battle. Thus, with a sword in hand and getting, furious weith rage, the warrior 'Restraint' had raised certain slogans. (323)

Listen. Even then the warrior called the 'Knowledge' of 'brevity' would not be deterred from the battle. (324)

I, as a dumb person, with your strength and support, am saying all this, Through Thy Grace and Through Thy Support. (O Lord !)

Bhujang prayat Chhand :

The mighty warrior "Restraint" was furious with rage, which was very proud and free from any vices. He had killed the warrior called 'Misfortune' with many weapons and had wounded badly the body of 'disrespect'. (325)

"Now I am saying this with Thy strength". (O Lord !)

A great battle was fought. how far could I attempt to give details ? Even if I were to detail it with a thousand tongues, even then it would not be possible. The battle continued for millions of years (Yugas) and countless years in the battlefield. Well, who could describe details of this battle ? (326)

I am describing with Thy Grace (O Lord !)

It was a dreadful battle and there was lot of confusion all around. Sixty-four fairies and evil-spirits came to the battlefield and danced merrily. Dreadful 'Kalika' and 'Kamakhya' also danced there. The evil-spirits were making noise and were helping to make this battle more fearful. (327)

'Through Thy Grace'

A horrible battle was raging and none tried to avert it. Both were great kings with canopies (overhead) and a great warrior. Both seen and unseen people were involved in it with great losses, but these fighting warriors never got destroyed in the battlefield. (328)

With Thy Grace

Couplet :

In no time the indivisible warriors had been cut into pieces and the indestructible warriors had been destroyed. Neither the warriors were deterred nor they left the field. Neither the war fever got lessened nor the battle pitch was swayed away from this confused state. (329)

"Through Thy Grace" (O Lord !)

Choupaiee :

Both the parties were fighting this battle for two millions of Yugas and twenty thousand years, but none of them got destroyed. Then Raja (Paras Nath) was completely non-plussed and came to Machhindra with contemptuous outlook (with mostril stretched). (330)

Then he said, "O Great Muni ! Pray tell me with due consideration ! Both these warriors were great fighters and their enmity had not come to an end and in trying to disengage them, the whole world had been destroyed." (331)

"Everyone had been killed in trying to disengage them from fighting. But no one knew when his or her end would come. Basically, both these warriors were very stubborn and powerful, great charioteer and dreadful fighters. (332)

However, Machhindra, on hearing Raja's words kept mum (quiet). Then Raja (Paras Nath) told everyone there. Then Machhindra, getting surprised at heart, looked at Paras Nath suddenly and from that day Charpat Nath appeared (on the scene).(333)

Now the Yogi called Charpat Nath appeared.

Choupaiee :

O Rajan ! Now listen, I am telling you something about the divine knowledge (intelligence). In fact, do not consider these two (Warriors) as different entities ; both were the same (one only). These were both free from vicious thoughts and great incarnations. They were both great archers and great fighters. (334)

When the prime-soul (Lord-sublime) arranged him squarely, then he visualized his self within himself. He then uttered the word 'Onkar' once only and the whole Earth and sky came into existence (the universe was created). (335)

From His Right Side, 'Truth' was created, while from the left side 'Falsehood' (Untruth) was created. As soon as these warriors were created (were born), they started fighting. Since the very beginning, both these warriors in the world had been seen fighting (with each other). (336)

If someone were to live for thousand years (by increasing his age) and a thousand tongues were bestowed to him forever and were to contemplate for thousand Yugas, even then, "O Lord ! Your limits cannot be known, as you are limitless." (337)

"With Thy Grace, this dumb person says" (O Lord !)

Many Rishis like Byas and Prashar had been born (in this world) ; even Sringi and Bakdalabh Rishis had sung your praises. Brahma with a thousand tongues (mouths) had also been created, but none of them had known your limits (being limitless). (338)

Couplet :

(O Lord !) There had been great many oceans, warriors, army commanders, all the Munis (ascetics), Shiva's musicians and (Mahants) religious leaders and millions of periods or ages and the end of various eras, but none has been able to ascertain your limits (as you are Infinite). (339)

"I am saying with your strength" (O Lord !)

Bhujang Prayat Chhand :

"O Lion-like king ! Listen to me ! (O Paras Nath) I am telling you something about the greatest knowledge (sciece). Listen to me with full attention and do not protest. The Lord is ever existent, from the beginning and without any beginning (itself), the prime-soul is invincible, fearless, blemish-less (not subject to be burnt) and formless (having no specific form). (340)

'He was devoid of any Name, place (abode), beyond any count and without having any beginning. He was invincible, free from any vices and wrangles. He was infinite, Praiseworthy (of greatest prestige) the Master (Lord) of the Universe and the oldest (ancient). Or those in search of divine path, or those remain aloof from others, or abiding on mountains, or kings with authority (canopies overhead.) (342)

Through Thy Strength (O Lord !)

Whatever magical spells or sorcery and jugglery are there, should be considered as falsehood, all the religions are worthless, and the magic spells are only fallacies. Except having hope (faith) in one sublime being, rest all is without any basis (hopeless). Except the True Name, nothing else will be of any avail. (343)

Incase some could attain some occult powers with such sorcery or jugglery, then no one would be coming for alms seeking from door to door. Accept the authority of one Lord in mind and consider all others without any foundation. All others are without any hope. Apart from the job of reciting True Name, no other function should be considered fruitful. (344)

The king of all treasures (Paras Nath) listened to the talk of Yogi Machhindra and his mind was perturbed with fear, just as the water jumps up (is tossed up) in the ocean. He left all hopes and became devoid of any hopes or desires. Then he spoke some words based on moral (accepted routines) values (as normally practiced). (345)

Paras Nath then thought to himself like this. To make it known (heard by) to the assembled people there, he openly said these words :I am a great king and very powerful indeed and I have gained victory over the whole world." (350)

Whosoever had told me such a thing had in fact, it appeared, as if he deceived me. Both these warriors were very powerful. In fact, by gaining victory over these two warriors, It means one had won over the whole world. (351)

But now it was not possible for me to gain victory over these two. The Muni had related their story to me. Now see, I will get the funeral pyre made and be seated myself in the flame of fire. (352)

First he got the funeral pyre made and then took a bath and then dipped all the clothes and the body in the sesame oil. All the people tried to stop him, by all means, and (held his feet also immediately) requested him (not to do this). (353)

He gave diamonds and clothes as offerings (gifts) in alms as per normal practice and then made his abode in the holy place of Katas Raj. Many efforts were made to light the fire, but the fire cold not be lit (became ineffective). (354)

Tomar Chhand :

Paras Nath, becoming furious with rage, tried to light the fire with his own hands and burn the funeral pyre. But the fire got extinguished which was very dreadful like the form of death. (355)

Then Paras Nath created proper fire and lit the pyre, which raged very furiously. Then he immolated his body in it. The whole town was watching him (Paras Nath) being burnt. (356)

Then the fire was raging in a special type, wherein lot of wood, ghee and leaves had been added. In that fire, Raja Paras Nath got himself burnt. His huge body was reduced to ashes. (357)

O my mind ! Better, follow the ascetics of this type. Consider all the places (houses) as a part of jungle (forest) and remain solemn (morose) at heart (always). (Pause-1)

Your tuft of matted hair should be celibacy, Yoga is your bath and regularity is your extended nails. By assuming knowledge as your Guru (guide) try to understand yourself (give this guidance to mind) at heart and make True Name (recitation) as the swearing of ashes on your body. (1)

Eat less food, with a short span of sleep (at night) and develop love of kindness and forgiveness (for others). Try to be always gentle, with contentment at heart and remain free from the three pronged worldly falsehood (Maya) with lust, greed and partly peaceful as its constituents. (2)

Never bring sexual desires, anger, egoism, greed, stubbornness and attachment (worldly) to your mind (never think of these). Then only will you be able to realize the prime soul and attain unison with the Lord-Sublime. (3-1)

Ramkali Patshahi-10 (By The Tenth Master)

O my mind ! Try to follow Yoga of this type. Carry the (stag horn) trumpet of Truth, make necklace of freedom from fraud (non-deceitful) and make meditation (of Lord) the ashes to smear the body.
(Make Truthfulness, non-fraudulence and meditation as the main qualities of an ascetic. (Pause-1)

"Try to hold the trumpet of controlling the mind, in your hand and forgetting the alms of True Name (as offering) make your words as means of achieving this. Attaining the Lord-Sublime will be the song produced from this trumpet, by producing the enchanting tune of love from this trumpet." (1)

"The wave of love should be produced as the Raja, (tune) from the trumpet and knowledge should be theme of this song. (Tune). Seeing this entire scene the gods, demons and Munis would all get surprised and get honoured by seating themselves in their chariots. (2)

"The controlling of mind (soul) is the precept (teaching), let restraint be the robes (dress) one wears and continuous recitation of True Name is our meditation. With this type of Yoga, the body remains pure like gold and there will be no (fear) of the god of death. (3-2)

Ramkali Patshahi-10

"O Man ! Always remain at the lotus feet of the Lord-Sublime (by seeking His support). Why are you lying (asleep) negligent in the (sleep of) wasteful effort of worldly attachement ? Why do you not wake up by being alert at sometime or other?"

(Pause-1)

"O Fool ! Why are you trying to teach (preach to) others ? You are not trying to follow the same teachings yourself ? Why are you trying to nourish the vicious thoughts and actions and give up all the love of vicious (sinful) action at some stage ?" (1)

It is not worthwhile doing actions only, it would be a fallacy and develop love of righteous actions only. Try to gather up (the virtue of) reciting True Name and getting rid of sinful actions, always try to remain watchful against them. (2)

(Attempt such actions) so that, afflictions and sins do not come your way and you may recognize the snare of the god of death (The spiritual death). If you want to enjoy peace and tranquillity of mind alweays, then you should develop love and devotion for the True Lord and remain immersed in it. (3-3)

Please convey the (message of) state of affairs of the devotees (disciples) of the beloved Lord. Without the (love and devotion of the) Lord, the pleasure of riches (like covering onself with quilts) was like undergoing sufferings and the palatial abodes were like living among the snakes (full of dangers). O Lord ! Without your presence (remembrance), the flag on (flask of wine) was like piercing spikes (thorn), the bow (tankard of wine) was like (facing) the dagger and your separation was like the strikes of the butcher's sharp knife. "Narrated by the holy (Guru Gobing Singh) Tenth Master"

Swaiyya :

Let us remember (meditate) on the (Lord Almighty), enlightened prime soul (omni present Lord) day and night and not think of anyone else except the one Lord-Sublime. Let us pledge ourselves with (perfect) implicit love and faith into the Lord and nor to (visit) take the support of either tombs, graves, or hermitages (monastery) even by mistake. Let us recognize or pin our faith only on one Lord supreme, which could constitute our baths at holy places, offerings, compassion, penance and restraint (discipline) etc. and not to worship anyone else. The person who gets enlightened within himself (through recitation of True Name) should be considered as purified and perfectly sanctified and worthy of being called Khalsa, the pure (genuine) one, as distinct from the impure. The Lord, who is Truth personified and True (virtuous) from the very beginning, had pledged Himself (for the whole Universe, without any beginning (origin), beyond our comprehension and invincible. He was an embodiment of benefaction (charity), kindness, with control over senses (Trans sensual), restraint, regularity, fasting, gentleness, with a pure heart (virtuous), having a peerless (unparalleled) form (entity). He was the origin (source) of all, countless, without beginning, unstrung music, without malice, uncommitted (to any faith) and fearless. Being free from any form, sign or symbol and destroyer of old age, kindly to the poor/helpless and was always benevolent. (2)

The Lord-sublime was without any origin (beginning), malice, commitment (to any faith (and was Truth personified) and His light (brilliance) was percolating everywhere (an embodiment of enlightenment everywhere) and He had anamoured the hearts of all persons and had destroyed the formation of elements and nature of all beings completely. O Lord ! You are prevalent throughout the ages including the beginning of time, during the various Yugas and all periods (to come) (past, present and future times) and are percolating inside (within) all the beings. O benevolent Lord ! Helper of the helpless, kindly towards all, you are the origin (source), free from the cycle of transmigration, invincible and indestructable. (3)

"O Lord ! You are always the origin (source), uncommitted (to any faith) and indivisible. The Vedas and Kateebs have not realized (known) your secrets. O benevolent Lord, benefactor and treasure of kindness and always an embodiment of Truth and were percolating (present) in all the beings (being omni-present). All the gods including Indra, Ganesh, Shiva and Sheshnag (cobra with thousand fang's) and the Vedas have been trying to know your secrets but none had been able to probe your depth so far. O foolish mind ! Tell me why had you forgotten such an incomprehensive Lord?(4)

The Lord, who was infallible, countless and (like an unstrung music) infinte and who was always described as Truth personified ; who was ab initio, from the beginning, free from the cycle of Rebirths, and without ant specific abode and free from old age, sanctified (pure) and beyond comprehension, who was renowned on His own and in the whole Universe ; who was described in myriad ways or a single abode. O poor mind ! Why have you not realized such a Lord, who was blemish-less (flawless)?(5)

"O Lord ! You are devoid of any deceit (fraud), ab initio, too deep for probe, infinite and Truth personified. You were the sustainer of all the beings on the land or in the oceans. The Vedas, Puranas and Koran (or believer in both) viz. Hindus and Musalmaans both together had contemplated on you (in their own ways) O Wondrous Lord ! You were the only Master (Lord) of this universe in the final analysis." (6)

(O Lord !) You were known as ab initio (from the beginning) fathomless, fraud-less, impregnable (indiscriminate) indescribable, invincible, free from birth and infinite. You were present (throughout the ages) in the present, past and future times (ages) and at all places (being omni present) and this realization had been accepted by my mind (conscience). All the gods, demons, sheshnag, Narad, Saraswati (goddess of learning) had all realized you as Truth personified. (Ever existent). O Benevolent Lord, Kindly and Treasure of benefaction ! Either Puranas or Koran had not known your secrets. (Neither Purana nor Koran had known your infinite secrets or details. (7)

O Truth personified Lord, with a Truthful instinct (embodiment of Truth) ! In fact, you only had created the Vedas and Katebs (semitic books). You were the Master (Lord) of the gods and demons, creator of this Universe (Earth) and were known throughout the three ages (present, past and future). You were called ab initio, (from the beginning) existing throughout the ages (Yugas) fathomless and infinite, No one had seen you (in physical form) either in this world or the next world (here or hereafter). O foolish mind ! Has anyone given you the secrets (details) of such an infinite Lord Sublime (who was beyond comprehension) ? (8)

O Lord ! The various gods, demons, the creator of Universe, Sheshnag (with thousand fangs), Sidhas and scholarly persons, had performed great penance to attain (realize) you. The Vedas, Puranas Koran (and various religious texts) had (tired themselves) been singing your praises since long (without knowing your secrets) but had failed to realize you (your secrets). The Lord Sublime knows the mind of all beings on the earth, sky, nether-lands, directions or corners (Universe). His praiseworthiness (virtues) had percolated throughout the Universe and this had influenced my mind to contemplate on Him (had prompted me to contemplate on Him). (9)

The Vedas and Katebs had not known the secrets of the Lord, even all the sidhas had through their meditation (contemplation) failed to realize Him. The various religious books (granths) including smritis, shastras, Vedas and Puranas had tried to describe the Lord in various ways. It had not been possible to know the depths of the Lord-Sublime being the abinitio and without any beginning, even by anyone so far, who had bestowed salvation to saints like Dhruv and Prahlad or sinners like Ajamal. The Lord's True Name which helped the prostitute (Ganka) even to recite and attain salvation and this True Name was the only source of our lives. (Our sustenance was also based on True Name of the Lord alone). (10)

The Lord was a personification of Truth being without beginning from the abinitio stage and beyond our comprehension and was omni-scient (having knowledge of all). All knew Him to be all pervasive, including Shiva's musicians, demigods, mountains, Sheshnag, apart from the Earth, Sky, being in all the four directions. The gods and demons had known Him to be present in this world and the world hereafter, in all lands and directions. O foolish mind ! Know the self-effulgent Lord, on whose behest had you forgotten Him ? (11)

Some people have taken the Thakur (Lord) (very lightly and tied him around their neck, while some others have taken Shiva for God Almighty ; some say His abode was in the temple while some believe him to be abiding in the mosque. Some people call him by the name 'Ram' while some others call him Krishna and some others have considered Him to be in various Incarnations. However, disregarding all the claims of various religions as meaningless, I consider the Lord Almighty as the only creator. (12)

If you were to consider Ram as free from the cycle of Rebirths and invincible, then why did he take birth from the womb of Kaushaliya ? If you were to call Kanha as the god of death (Lord), then why was he subjected to the clutches of death ? (or why did he die ?) If he were to be called a personification of Truth and was with enmity to none, then why did he make the chariot of Arjun flee away from the battlefield ? O my mind ! Let us accept the Lord only one, whose secrets were neither known to anyone so far, nor will anyone know in future. (13)

Why do you call Krishna as the benevolent Lord Almighty, when the hunter with an arrow shot him at ? When he could not save his clan (of Yadvas) from extinction, then how could you call him as the saviour ? If he was calling himself free from the cycle of Rebirths, then how could he be born from Devki's womb ? I the Lord was supposed to have no father or mother, then how could Vasudev be his father? (14)

Why do you call Shiva as the Lord Almighty and why do you describe Brahma as the Lord Sublime ? Even Rama, Krishna and Vishnu could not be termed as the Lord-Almighty whom you have considered as the Master of the Universe (Vishwanath) ? In fact, apart from One Lord Sublime, calling anyone else as the Lord Almighty would be an effort at proving Sukdev, Prashar and Byas as wrong or false. All the religions were based on false pretexts or forms, while we are describing the one Lord Sublime only in many ways or forms. (15)

Someone calls Brahma as the Lord, while someone else considers Shiva as God Almighty, someone else calls Vishnu as the Lord (Master) of the Universe, by meditating on whom all our sins could be washed away. O Fool ! Even if you were to ponder a thousand times, they will all desert you in the end. Let us meditate (and worship) the Lord sublime only, who was ever existent during present, past and future times as well. (16)

There were millions of Indras, created by Him and who had created countless gods, demons, Sheshnags, mountains, birds and animals whose count is unknown to us (not possible). Till today Shiva and Brahma had been engaged in penance (and meditation), but had not been able to find out His secrets (His limits). The Lord, whose secrets had not been known to Vedas or Katebs (Semitic books) even, was the only and True Lord, which had been affirmed by my Guru (guide) as well. (I have realized the Lord only as all in all, as guided by my Guru). (17)

(O Yogis !) You had befooled (deceived) the whole world by having tufts of matted hair, by extending your nails of hands, and by meditating like a crane ; you are moving around by smearing your face with ashes, and had led astray all the gods and demons even. You had forgotten all the aspects of True Yoga and were begging for alms from house to house, though fully engrossed in greed. You had not gained anything worthwhile even though you had given up all your prestige or basic norms of Yogic exercises, and the Lord Could not be attained without developing true love and devotion. (18)

O Foolish mind ! Why are you engaged in my hypocrisy, as by these hypocratic means you had only destroyed (lost) your own prestige or fame ? Why are you deceiving others ? You had already wasted your life in this world by deceiving others, then why are you spoiling your chances in the world hereafter (next world) ? You will not be given any recognition by the Lord at His abode, where the benevolent Lord, helper of the poor, was abiding (you will not be received by Him with honour, in the heavens). O greatest fool and ignorant man ! Even now, you could meditate on the Lorsd, as one could not attain the infinite Lord by deceiving oneself (with guise or hypocrisy).(19)

" Why are you worshipping stones ? There was no God abiding within these stones. Try to meditate (worship) on the Lord alone, which alone could wash away all your sins. Worries and afflictions (illness) etc and any other likely worldly (bondage could be destroyed (eliminated) other by reciting His True Name. Always try to meditate on Him, as not all fruitless religious actions could give you any peace or satisfaction. (20)

(O Man !) You had wasted millions of yours in meditating on (worshipping) these stones and all those formal actions had proved (been) worthless (fruitless). What occult powers had you gained by worshipping these idols ? In fact, by so doing you had lost your power and means without gaining the nine worldly treasures. The time had been lost in much dilly-dallying without gaining any thing worthwhile or feeling ashamed of oneself. O fool ! You had not worshipped the Lord and wasted this life fully. (21)

Even if you were to undergo penance for ages, you will not get any joy out of these stones. O fool ! These statues shall not offer you anything worthwhile by raising their hands. Tell me, how could one depend on these stones, when in case of distress, they will not be able to protect you. O ignorant and obstinate man ! Try to realize the truth that by observing such fruitless religious practices, you are completely lost, (and wasted this life). (22)

The snare of death had caught the whole world and even Ram or Rasool (Mohammad) had not escaped from its clutches. The demons and gods, sheshnag and mountains had been created in the past (times gone by) and will be destroyed in the future (times to come). Those, who call themselves incarnations of the Lord in the world, finally repent (on their action) and fade away from this world (face death). O unfortunate mind ! Why do you not immediately rush and fall at the lotus feet (embrace) of the Lord, the Prime-Truth. (23)

Through the Grace of the Lord (Timeless) Brahma had come into existence, which had been roaming around the world with a staff and mendicant's pot in hand. Even Shiva, with the Lord's Will (ordains) had been roaming in various lands (local or foreign), which we have known. In fact the Universe had come into existence through the Lord's Will (ordains) and had become extinct many a time. Thus we have known (realized) all His forms. By getting rid of all doubts stated in Vedas and Katebs, we have recognized the Lord as the ultimate authority or the benevolent Prime-Truth. (Lord-Sublime). (24)

O fool ! The whole age has passed in such actions and the benevolent Lord-Sublime had not been meditated upon (in the mind) with concentration. O fool ! You had become shameless, losing all your prestige (honour) and leaving aside virtuous deeds you are engaged in vicious actions, thus trying to function successfully. It is almost the same story that someone casting aside beautiful steeds and a royal elephant was trying (thinking) to ride a donkey. O fool ! You have not worshipped the Lord-Sublime and had spoiled the whole life in the pursuit of worldly honour (modesty). (25)

You had studied Vedas and Katebs for many days, but had not realized the secrets (the Truth value) of these texts. You had been bowing your head (paying obeisance) to stones or tombs without achieving worthwhile. O foolish mind ! Leaving aside the love of True Lord, you were emgrossed in your own foolish thoughts. (26)

If someone were to visit the abode of Yogis, then he was made to worship Gorakh (to meditate on Gorakh Nath) ; if someone were to visit the place of ascetics, then he was told to worship Dutt alone, being an embodiment of Truth and this incantation (mantra) was compressed upon him. If someone were to visit the place of Musalmans (Turks) then he was forced to convert to the teachings (faith) of Hazrat Mohammad. Everyone thought of the presernce of the Lord within one's (religion) faith only, though no one had known the secrets of the Lord-Creator. (27)

If someone talked of attaining the Prime soul in the assembly of Yogis, then he would be told to hand over all the wealth to them (Yogis). If he wants to rush over there to visit the ascetics, then he would be asked to give everything in offerings in the name of Dutt. If someone were to go to Masands then they would prefer everything to be handed over to them (all the wealth) and they make you to meet the Lord. All were keen to collect everything from us, but npne would tell us the mode of unison with the Lord (to attain unison with Lord). (28)

If someone were to serve the Masands, then they would ask him to bring all the food materials from the kitchen for their consumption, along with all the wealth he had in his possession, should be handed over to them immediately. Furthermore, he should only worship them and meditate on them without thinking of anyone else by day or night (all the time). For giving anything in return, they could run away during the night and would not be pleased (contented) without accepting something from him. (29)

They would pour some oil in their eyes and then show to the people their tears to them (their concern for them) and finding some follower rather wealthy, he would be served with sumptuous food. However some poor man were to be seen, he was not given anything and anyone found begging, would not be entertained. They were fleecing the foolish people and were never (seen) singing praises of the Lord. (30)

By closed eyes, they were seen to be in meditation like a crane and for deceiving people ; they would show them some magical spell. They were moving around with their heads bowed like a hunter and were seen in worship, on the sight of which even a he-cat would feel ashamed. They would be in touch with those (followers) only, who were supposed to be rich. They had not only wasted their life in this world, but had lost everything in the world hereafter. O fool ! You had never worshipped the Lord, but were always engaged in household chores. (31)

(O fool !) Why are you making people learn fruitless formal rituals only, as these acts would be of no avail to these people ? " O Man ! Why are you always running after collecting money, as you will never be able to escape from the clutches of the god of death ? (Yamas's clutches) None of your dear ones like the son, wife, all friends and followers (attendants) would be of any support or help in the next world. O great ignorant fool ! Always remember that in the end (of life) you would be proceeding alone (to the next world) after death. (32)

O fool ! On your death, (soul leaving your body) even your spouse would shun you, taking you for a ghost (calling your dead body a ghost). The relatives like son, wife and other friends would be interested in taking away the dead body as soon as possible (for cremation). All your material wealth invluding property, wealth, land or fort will be known to belong to someone else on your soul leaving the body (on your death). O most ignorant fool ! (Like an animal) ! Try to understand and remember that at the end of life, you would be leaving this world all alone (none will be of any help).(33)

Ik Onkar Vahe Guru Ji Ke Fateh
Swaiyya Patshahi-10 (By the Tenth Master)

Whatever fate had been ordained by the Lord for anyone would be gained by him. O Brahmin ! Try to forget about your (fondness) gloom. There was no fault of mine in this thing, as I had forgotten, so do not stare at me with (wrathfulness) disdain. I would be presenting you today itself a nice robe along with a quilt. Keep this fully truthful in mind (for sure) as all the Kashatriyas were attendants to the Brahmins (subservient to them) so look at them with kindness. (1)

Swaiyya :

" I had won all the battles with the support of these (Sikhs) followers and had made offerings through their benevolence only ; all the sins had vanished at their behest and all the material wealth had been attained through their benefaction. I had attained knowledge (education) with their support and the enemies had been vanquished. I have gained honour and glory through them only else there were millions of (poor) helpless people like me in the world, who were unknown and there was none to support them." (2)

Swaiyya :

" I fully appreciate the service rendered by these people (followers) and I do not like anyone else's service. To give offerings to them alone was worthwhile and I do not like to give alms to anyone else. Whatever was given to them would be fruitful in future and in this world. It would bring honour for me whereas anything given to others would be futile. At my place everything, including my body, wealth and my mind (soul) and my life was at their (Sikh's) disposal. " (3)

Couplet :

On hearing these words, the Brahmin became furious and was completely confounded ; in fact, he got heartburns (was disheartened) and started crying as he was in search of some bread and butter (livelihood) for himself, as he was not given any alms in offering. (4)

'Sri Bhagouti Ji Sahai'

(With the support of the sword-Arm of the Lord)

Now the episode of "Shastar Naam Mala"

Couplet :

The weapons like saang, sirohi (sword manufactured in Sirohi town) saif (double-edged sword) (a curved sword), arrows, gun and the sword etc. were the various arms which were meant for the destruction of the enemy and piercing through the coats of mail (protective covering) and these are my protectors. (1)

The sword, kirpan, (dharadhri) a sharpened sword, double-edged sword, spear, jamdar'h (a dagger resembling the demon's teeth) bayonet, arrow, dharbadh (a killer sword) etc. were the weapons to pierce, through (cut across) the protective coats of iron and destroy the enemy. (2)

The weapons like, sword, kirpan, double-edged sword, kharag (sword), gun, javelin, arrow, saif (straight sword) sirohi etc. were by masters or gurus (guides). (3)

O Prime-soul ! You are an embodiment of an arrow, spear or sword and bayonet. Whosoever worships your True Name attains Salvation (crosses this worldly ocean successfully). (4)

(O Lord !) You are Kaal Kali, (goddess) and sword and spear as well. You were the symbol of victory and in today's world ; you were the mightiest warrior (or leading warrior). (5)

("O Lord !) You were the killer of the enemy, the sword killer of the foe, double-edged sword and the sword, the wielder of sword and Meghnath, (the enemy of Indra) turned saint (your devotee)." (23)

" You were the various weapons called Jamdhar, Jamdar'h, jabar, jodhatak (various names of sword) and the person going to the battle without these weapons was killed and looted immediately in the battlefield." (24)

All the various forms of weapons like Baak, Bajar, bichhua (scorpion) or other types of arrows were all the forms of the Lord. Whosoever was blessed with your benevolence, became the king in the world. (25)

The king of weapons (sastarser) the sword (bringing/causing end of battle), siprar (the enemy of shield). Those persons, who had wielded the sword once had escaped the onslaughts of the god of death. (26)

The weapons, called by the names of Saif, Sirohi, Satar, Sarangkar (the enemy of arrow) and the sword of victory may always remain in my mind and may function as my support. (27)

Here the first chapter dealing with the praises of Sri Bhagouti (The Sword Lord) from Sri Nam Mala Puran is completed. All is well so far. (1)

Now the episode of various names of Sri Chakar begins.

First of all the word 'Kavach' (Protective Cover) is to be mentioned and keep at the end the word 'enemy'. All these names will describe the 'Sword'. O clever men ! Keep this in mind fully (understood). (28)

First call the word 'Enemy' and then say the word 'despotic' at the end. All these names will describe the Lord (sword) and keep this in mind always. (29)

First utter the work ' Prithi' (Earth) and then utter the word 'sustainer'. All these words shall then describe the 'Sristesh' (Sri Sahib-The Sword). keep these strictly in mind. (30)

First utter the word Sist (sristi), the world and then utter the word Master (math). All these names describe the sword (kharag). Keep these always in mind. (31)

At first call the word 'Singh' and then the word bahan ; these will describe the word 'Jagmat' (sword). O Poets ! Keep them engrained in mind. (32)

Let us recite the name of the 'weapon', which would destroy the enemy, which had created the world and would crush the fools by reducing them into pieces in the world and the afflictions would disappear on hearing this True Name. (33)

First, let us utter the names of all weapons and then say the word, pati in the end, and all these names would be referring to the sword only. Then keep these words in your mind. (34)

The weapon, hanging from the (limbs) waists of the Kashatriyas, sword (kharag), khag, double-edged sword, the enemy of the Kashatriyas and bringing the end of the game of battle, the destroyer of the enemy, (khalkemri should) be considered as the names of the sword. (35)

The sword, the destroyer of the beings, Bhagwati, the destroyer of the world, Sri Bhawani, the destroyer of fear (fright), all these were the names of the sword and all these would bestow kindness or benevolence to all the beings. (36)

Aril :

First repeat the word 'Ghost' and then utter the word 'Ari'. Keepthese words in mind and all these (words) names refer to "As Ju" or sword and keep them in mind. After saying the word 'deer', then let us call it the destroyer (dhansur), then all these names would refer to double-edged sword and accept it as a perfect Truth. (37)

Couplet :

At First repeat the name of Yama (angel of death) and then add the word condemnation (rejection) and these names will then refer to jamdar'h (weapon like sword). The poets should bear all this in mind. (38)

First recite the word 'udar' (womb) and then add (utter) the word 'Ari.' All these referto the jamdar'h (seord). The poets should think over it. (39)

First 'Mrig', (deer), then 'neck' and add the word 'Ari' with the head, add the word 'Asu'. All these names would refer to the sword. Keep this in mind by thinking over it. (40)

'Kari Karantak' (the destroyer of the trunk of an elephant) and 'Kasht ripu' (the torment or the enemy) " Kala yudh" (the weapon of causing death), 'Karwar and Karachol' etc should be linked with the sword (name of sword). (41)

First utter the word 'hastikar' or 'karikar' and then repeat the word enemy (ari); all these names would add up to represent the sword (sastar raj), which always supports (helps) me. (42)

Sri, Srohi, Samsher were all referring (names of) to the sword and there was nono else equal to it. So, you should also meditate on the sword (Tegh), which would give you support (succour). (43)

First, utter any of these words, such as Khag (bird), Mrig (deer), Jachh (demi-god) or Bhujang and then repeat the word Ari, then it should be considered as the name of the Sword. (44)

There were these words referring to the sword (kharag) such as halab, junbi, magarbi, misri, una, saif, or sirohi etc. Therefore, with the help of this (sword) the lands of Rome and Syria were won over. (45)

Yamani, Kati, and Hidvi Kati (sword) were the names given to the Master of all weapons (sword). In fact, the Incarnation "Nehkalanki' himself would come forward carrying this sword (Bhagouti) in his hand. (46)

First say the word Shakti (power) and then add the word 'Sakat Bisekh'. Similarly, many names of spear (sehbi) would appear like this. (47)

First, utter the word 'subhat', then add 'Ari' (enemy) to it. All these names refer to the spear (sehbi). The wise men should remember this at heart. (48)

First, say the word ' Sanah' (coats of mail) then add the word 'Ari' (enemy), then all these would refer to (sehbi) spear. O clever men ! Remember this at heart. (49)

At first repeat the word Kumbh (elephant) and then add the word 'Ari' (enemy) to it. Similarly, all these names refer to a spear (sehbi). The wise men may know this in their mind. (50)

First utter the word 'Tan Tran' (coats of mail) and then add the word 'Ari'. Thus, these names refer to sehbi (spear). The wise and smart persons may remember this. (51)

At first, pronounce the word 'girdhar' (Krishna-who could ascend the mountain goverdhan) and then speak the letter 'Audh (saster)', so many names of Sudarshan wheel will be formed. (68)

At first use the word 'Kali nathia' (Krishna who could subdue the cobra kali) and then in the end use the word sastar, which will result in great many names of the Sudarshan Chakar ; (wheel). (69)

First pronounce the word 'Kans Kesiha' (the killer of kans and kaisi-Krishna) and then add the word 'satar' ; as such these would refer to Sudarshan Chakar (wheel) only. The poets may kindly bear this in mind. (70)

At first, speak the word Baki (a female demon) and then Bakasur (a demon) ; then add the word 'satar' (enemy) to it ; so, many different names of 'Sudarshan Chakar' (Wheel) will appear. (71)

At first pronounce the word 'Agh Sasan' (the destroyer of demon Agh) and "Agh ha" and then add to it the word sastar ; so these would mean 'Sudarshan Chakar' (wheel). (72)

At first pronounce the name of 'Sri Upaidar' (the vaman Incarnation) and then say the word 'Saster'. This would refer to 'Sudarshan Chakar' (wheel) as is known to all wise people. (73)

The poet has said

Couplet :

"O all the warriors and great poets ! Please try to understand in your mind that there was no distinction between the names of Vishnu and Sudarshan. (74)

Here the second chapter of Sri Naam Mala Puran dealing with 'Chakar' Naam is completed. All is well so far.

The Essence of Sri Guru Granth Sahib

This work involved me completely in the translation of Sri Guru Granth Sahib in English Prose and took me, to complete it, 10 years from 1990 to 2000. Infact this is the best part of my life, as the whole day was spent in studying and understanding each hymn and then writing its meaning first in Punjabi and then translating that Punjabi version into English Prose. The hymns of each page took two days to complete the job in English version, giving not the literal meanings, but the essence of each hymn, as understood by me. Of course, even a life time is not enough to deal with this subject, as Gurbani is too deap in its philosophy for any individual to really understand and then express it in a foreign language.

In fact, the Guru has clarified it by giving the final verdict by saying, as such human being has his limitations, but the effort is always rewarded.

II. a) Philosophy of Sikh Gurus

i) This deals with the banis of Nitname, namely Jap Ji, Jaap Sahib, Sukhmani Sahib and Swaiyyais etc.

ii) This book is in two parts, the first part dealing with the meaning of the Gurbani and the second one giving its philosophy under ten headings.

b) The Four Pillars of Sikhism

There are four main pillars of Sikhism, namely Guru, Lord's will (Hukam) Sadh Sangat and Naam.

True Name is to be attained through the help and benevolence of the Guru. The Guru helps us to understand the meaning and purpose of human life, and then understanding Gurbani with its simple version and guidance through four main-supports.

c) The Eternal Bliss - It deals with the philoshphy of Anand Sahib by Guru Amar Das Ji. It helps us to understand the purpose and meaning of human life and understanding Sikh Philosophy with simple version of Gurbani and its guidance.

All the hymns of Guru Granth Sahib, with Rehaou (ਰਹਾਉ) are listed and explained fully in Punjabi language.

e) The Universal Message of Guru Granth Sahib. It deals with a simple explanation of the the philosophy of Sikhism and explained briefly with its meaning and objectives . All the hymns are listed. It is meant for those, who feel they have no time to read the full version or scope of the philosophy of Guru Granth Sahib. So in simple language, in few words it deals with the central idea of each hymn. in four volumes.

f) Zafarnama - Letter of Victory written by Guru Gobind Singh Ji to Aurangzeh at the end of hostilities. It froms of part of the present work (5th volume).

g) I am proud to be a Sikh - briefly explains the beauty of Sikh tenets and Sikh philosophy

Acknowledgement

The job of translating Dasam Granth Sahib in English .ose, with the original in Gurmukhi (Punjabi) alongwith the roman script for non-punjabi readers is not appreciated in some circles for certain reasons. But this job was entrusted to me by Baba Virsa Singh Ji of Gobind Sadan in 2002, and completed by me in 2005. Some how the work remained unpublished due to the sudden death of Baba Virsa Singh Ji. So I am totally indebted to Gobind Sadan for the work.

2. Since the work was lying incomplete for almost ten years, I thought of publishing this work based on an English version of the Punjabi version by Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi & Mrs. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi with their blessings. Of course the Roman Script of the original was not in the original concept, which has been added now for obvious reasons.

3 Some people have reservations about the portions of the Granth dealing with "Pakhiyan Charitar", but Baba Vira Singh Ji always believed that this portion is completely dealt with by Guru Gobind Singh Ji and I am equally convinced with it. Different views have been expressed by different people. So I owe my gratitude to Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi & Mrs. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi for this publication.

4. I am also indebted to Major Karnail Singh of Sector 34, Chandigarh who has been of great help to me and had always given me moral support in my efforts, as President of Gurdwara Sri Guru Tegh Bahadur, Sector 34, Chandigarh.

Introduction

The original granth, called Vidya Sagar, weighing about nine maunds, including the poetry of Guru Gobind Singh Ji and other learned poets, seems to have been destroyed in the devastating currents of Sarsa Reviulet while the Guru abandoned the Fort of Anandpur Sahib in 1704 and headed for Chamkaur Sahib alongwith 40 Sikhs only.

Then the first attempt to collect and combine the various remnants of different poetic versions of the Guru remaining safe with certain Sikh followers was made by Bhai Mani Singh, the first Sikh Granthi of Darbar Sahib, Amritsar in the form of a Pothi. About 50 years later on Bhai Deep Singh, Bhai Sukha Singh and some others made similar attempts to publish a version of Dasam Granth. Out of all these versions the most important are Bhai Mani Singh Beer, Topkhana Patiala Wali Beer (Moti Bagh Gurdwara) and Sri Patna Sahib Wali Beer. All these versions differ briefy in their contents due to various reasons. In 1897 Gurmat Pracharak Sabha Amritsar collected about 32 versions of this Granth. The various Banis (Poetic versions) constitute the Dasam Granth as follows :-

i) Jaap, ii) Akal Ustat, iii) Bachittar Natak, iv) Chandi Charitar-I, v) Chandi Charitar-II, vi) Vaar Sri Bhagouti Ji Ki (Vaar Durga), vii) Gyan Prabodh, viii) Choubis Avtar, ix) Other Avtars (Brahma, Rudar), x) Shabad Hazarai, xi) Swaiyyas, xii) Khalsa Mehma, xiii) Shastra Naam Mala, xiv) Charitar Pakhiyan and xv) Zafar Nama & (Haqaitan). In this report Giani Sardul Singh had clarified all the doubts about its authenticity. Then in 1902 Bhai Bishan Singh (of Sangrur) confirmed its author as Guru Gobind Singh based on certain facts and reasoning. Then in 1950 Dr. Trilochan Singh also confirmed 'Dasam Granth' as authored by the Guru himself.

Now in 1999 on the inauguration of 300th Birth Anniversary of Khalsa, Dr. Rattan Singh Jaggi and Dr. Gursharan Kaur Jaggi, under the patronage of Baba Virsa Singh Ji (Gobind Sadan) have published a Punjabi version of the Granth in five volumes.

The present publication of 'Dasam Granth' including the roman version of the Original Text' is an attempt to present it in English for the beneft of English Readers. This version is based on an English version of the text given by Dr. R.S. Jaggi (with his blessings and goodwill).

No individual is capable of commenting on the greatness and life of Guru Gobind Singh Ji, (Sahib-e-Kamal) and personally I feel, this effort and attempt to publish a part of his literacy poetic writings in the form of Dasam Granth in English prose is to understand his greatness and mission in life. I have no ability or capacity to mention even about his various facets of life, like war-fare, creation of Khalsa, challenging the mighty Emperor Aurangzeb and fighting against Mughal oppression, sacrifce of the whole family (father, four sons and mother), what to talk of his literary achievements.

I could only give my opinion that the style of poetic versions in Dasam Granth in the form of various Chhands in 'Brij' alongwith Arabic and Persian vocabulary proves the point that the author of this Granth could be none other than Guru Gobind Singh himself.

Though Sri Guru Granth Sahib was annointed (appointed) as the living Guru of the Sikhs by Guru Gobind Singh Ji, after him, Dasam Granth deserves the same respect as a literary achievement of the great Guru.

Foreword

Bhai Gurbachan Singh is a well known scholar who has written an exegesis of the entire Sri Guru Granth Sahib in Scholastic English with great dedication and devotion. He spent ten long years to accomplish this remarkable task. Besides, he has written a book in Punjabi. 'Amrit Boond Suhaavani' which contains meanings and explanation of all the 'Pause Verses' in the Sikh scripture (Rahao Cantos).

Three years ago, another idea came into his mind that he should prepare an English annotation of the 'Banis' of Sri Guru Gobind Singh Ji, which is not available in the market. In this series, the first volume prepared by him is in your hands. It contains the original text in Panjabi and Roman transliteration (on the left) page followed by their translation into English (on the right). It will prove to be very useful to the English knowing readers.

A Gursikh reads or recites five "Nitnem Banis' in the morning and two in the evening without fail. These include three 'Banis' (compositions) of the Tenth Guru Sahib: 1. Jaap Sahib, 2. Swaiyyas Patshahi Dasvin 3. Kabio Vach Benati Choupaiee (Patshahi Dasvin). In the present time, some misguided and mistaken scholars create misconceptions about these 'Banis' (compositions). While administering 'amrit', a sikh is instructed to read/recite these 'Banis' (compositions) regularly. The command of the 'Panj Piaras' (Five Beloved ones) is the Guru's command, which we must obey humbly; controversy about them is uncalled for. The entire 'Jaap Sahib' composition is uttersd in praise of the Timeless Lord. In the very first stanza Guru Sahib says:

That Lord is immovable or eternal Being. He has neither any mark nor sign, not form, nor complexion, nor caste, nor clan. He is self illumined and this glory is very intense and powerful. His name is indescribable.

Therefore, I am describing his attributive names.

'who can describe all thy Names? Only men of good sense mention Thy attributive Names.'

In 'Jaap Sahib', we find words exactly parallel and synonomous to those in the 'mool mantra' (fundamental chant) from 'Ek Onkar' to 'Gurprasaad' recorded at the beginning of Sri Guru Granth Sahib:

Similarity between Jap JI and Jaap Sahib is given below:-

Jap Ji	Jaap Sahib
Ek Onkar	ek hai anek hai
Satnaam	Sadavang saroopai
Karta Purkh	Kariang, Sarbung karta, Samstul, Nivarai
Nir Bhou	Nirbhai Abheet
Akal Moorat	Namastang akalai Nirbhoot, Rooprung
Ajooni	Ajai, Ajanmai
Saibhung	Sarab bisar rachio Garan Bhanjanhar
Gur Prasad	Tav Prasad

It is therefore, clear that the tenth Guru's composition 'Jaap Sahib' conforms to the 'bani' (Guru's utterance) enshrined in Sri Guru Granth Sahib.

The 'Chaupai Patshahee Daswin' contains the following stanza : (Takoe kar pahan unmanat)

Rank fools contemplate the Lord by making His idol holy,

For they cannot fathom this mystery,

Shiva as Eternal Lord they call,
But recognize not his secret at all (16)

Guru Sahib openly rejects idol worship and the worshippers of Lord Shiva. People have no knowledge and understanding of the Transcendent Lord God. They worship stone idols. They worship Lord Shiva as if he were transcendent God Himself. Who else but the Tenth Guru could administer such a warning?

In the 'swaiyyas Patshahi Daswin' have been sung the laudations of the timeless one God. We have been cautioned about the so-called dera-heads, holy men and braham-gyanis. The hollowness of the various methods of practicing Divine Name (meditation) have been exposed. We have been for-bidden to do idol worship. Only the method of practicing God's loving devotion has been prescribed for meeting and attaining God.

In the light of the facts stated above, it is absolutely clear that any controversy about these 'Bani's (compositions) is uncalled for. By annotating these compositions in English, Bhai Sahib Gurbachan Singh Ji has made a commenable effort. English-knowing readers, who do not know Panjabi, will be immensely benefitted. Inspite of indifferent health and old age, with the Guru's grace, he is continuing to serve Gurmat literature even today. I pray to the Satguru to grant him good health and greater spiritual strength so that he may continue to render maximum service to Gurmat literature through his writings.

(O goddess !) O Great Power You are the razor edge of the Sword, and you are the killer Sword. You alone are the arrow, sword, scissor, bayonet, hasbi, Janbi, magarbi (etc the armour of the area). Wherever I look around I find you standing there always. (1)

You alone are the hood winking power, the goddess of education, with a strong beautiful body, and You are goddess Bhawani. You alone are an embodiment of Shiva, Vishnu, and Brahma (gods) prevailing around. You alone are established as the worldly mother, in the form of a protector. (2)

You have created the gods, demons, demi gods, Turks, and Hindus in the world. You alone have appeared in the various worldly religious (various paths) forms in the creation. You have also created those engaged in the squables and discussions of various approaches to (God) the supreme power. (3)

You are appearing in a deadly horrible looking goddess as well as with the most beautiful looking features. You alone are depicted in the form of a child or with ruthless tongue. You alone have delivered from the mouth the four Veda s and You have killed the terrible demons namely Shumbh and Nishumbh. (4)

You alone present the horrible scenes of war, where great warriors and kings take part. You kill the armies of warriors by shooting arrows or unsheathing the Sword. You had killed Harnakush in the form of Narsingh (half lion and half human body). You had lifted the total load (weight) of Earth with Your teeth in the incarnation of Varah. (5)

You had killed the obstinate Ravana in the (incarnation) form of Ram, and destroyed (the villains) kans and kansi in the form of Krishna. You are remembered with the names of goddess Kalika or Jalpa. You alone are known as the central figure (Capital) of the fourteen regions-Continents. (worlds of creation). (6)

You alone appear as the god of death, and You alone are responsible for the creation and then the destruction of the world (creation). You are depicted as the power of the kings, being the queen (empress) of all the fourteen regions. (7)

People refer to You alone as the angry power or Ugra. Then You are also referred to as Parbati and Vyas-Bani (words of Bias). You have made Yourself as the Resting place of Sheshnag, and You are known to be riding the lion as well (for your transportation). (8)

In your hands, you are holding the killer armour (Iron) for destruction, and had killed the demons Chund and Mund, and had waged a war against the enemy Rakat-beej. You had saved the honour of gods with your protective hand on their shoulders. (9)

You had killed the demon Mehkhasur by getting enraged extensively and had burnt the Dharmuachh and javalachh. You had uttered with your mouth baktrapano (the saviour words) and had destroyed Bidalachh & chichurachhas. (10)

You have played the drrum with the noise of deh, deh and have waged a war laughingly by uttering keh, keh ; and have carried eight armours (arms) in eight hands, and have won over the unconquerable warriors, and have smashed them by holding the enemy with their hair. (11)

You alone are the goddess Jayanti, mangla, kali, kapali, bhadarkali and the enchanting beauty. You are Durga, Chhima and the personification of Shiva as well. You are Dhatri and Swaha as well. My Salutations to You. (12)

You alone are Usha and Sandhia, the wearer of red armour. (arms). Then we meditate on You, where You are wearing whole apparels. (clothes). Then You are also wearing Yellow garbs in the form of Trikal, and the power to eliminate/eradicate the great worldly love (affection) of the Sadhus (saints). (13)

You call yourself the one with red teeth, and the eliminator of various fears of brahmins. You alone took birth in the house of Nand as Krishna Incarnation, with overflowing power and Strength, thus giving strength to others as well. (14)

You had appeared as Incarnation of Bandh, as well as the incarnation of Machh. You had churned the Ocean in the Incarnation of Kachh. You had appeared in the form of a Brahman as Paras Ram and finished the Kashatriyas from the face of the Earth twenty-one times. (15)

You will appear as Nehkalanki Incarnation and finish all the malechhas (villains). O Mother ! Pray, bless me your benediction by considering me as your slave. (Sewak) and grant me the favour which I am longing for, in my heart. (16)

Swaiyya

The (goddess) had worn a necklace of skulls, various robes of all the directions (meaning naked), with a heavy sword (hanging) on her left side. Both her dreadful eyes were shining brilliantly, which were looking glamorous like sharpened arrows on her forehead. Her dreadful looking tresses of hair were loosely flowing (dishevelled) while the cluster of white teeth was shining brightly. The snakes in her hands were spitting fire. (O goddess !) The Lord (Timeless god of death) was always forever your sustainer (looking after your upbringing). (17)

The demons, with the magnificent luster like that of the 'Sun' were having (huge) bulky bodies like the mountains. They were filled with great haughtiness (pride) in their minds, so that they could not keep themselves balanced on the ground (full of egoistic tendencies, brooking none else equal in strength to themselves). They were (roaring) gurgling loudly like the bears and were moving around in the battlefield fearlessly with the beating of drums or kettledrums. Such great warriors were seen reeling and falling on the ground with the striking of arrows shot by the goddess Bhavani. (18)

Those warrriors, who had not sought any body's help even after being struck by millions of powerful arms (warrriors) and had killed many (enemy) warriors in the battlefield, whose stout bodies were looking glorious like great forts and had not been defeated by (god) Indra even, who were furious with rage and never turned their backs from the battle front, even though their (wounded) limbs were being taken away by the vultures into the skies, such great warriors had been struck down by the sword of (goddess) Kali and were lying helpless fallen on the ground. The stout warrrior like bodies of such proud men with their horrible armour portending above, were now covered with smoke-like dust. Such gallant warriors, full of confidence and pride had advanced from all the four sides, being desperate. Such invincible warriors had landed from all the ten directions like a dust storm while they were dashed onto the ground (by Kali). The goddess with lotus-like beautiful eyes with a tumult rising in the battlefield was looking glamorous in her wrathfulness (astride) a lion. (20)

Even being wounded badly, some warriors did not take the support of anyone, without resorting to any relaxation, whereas the indivisible and arrogant warriors were thrown on the ground without any loss of time. The warriors, who could not be driven away from the battlefield by anyone were dashed to the ground in no time. With lot of tumultuous noise rising from the battle front the goddess with lotus-like eyes was looking glorious along with an infuriated lion in the battlefield. (21)

Many demons, with bodies laden with smoke like dust, who could cut into pieces even iron (frames) then launched an attack. Some warriors with bodies like mountains (black) with tufts of hair and protected with coats of mail were fully intoxicated. The poet Siam has stated that these demons were making overtures to wage a war against the master of the Universe even, being furious with rage. Then the (Lord) goddess had dashed them all with a jerk (onto the ground) in the battlefield. With the hue and cry being raised in the battlefield, the lion was looking glamorous. (22)

In those dreadful times on seeing the various arrogant and invincible demons the drums started beating and the arrows started pouring (being shot) from the bows, but they remained unnerved. Then the mother goddess, being annoyed, destrroyed them in no time, throwing them down on the ground. On the rising of a tumultuous noise in the battlefield, the lotus-eyed goddess was roaming around gloriously along with the infuriated lion. (23)

On the start of the battle in the battlefield, the goddess had (cut) smitten into two pieces millions of the demons, with many heads and trunks being scattered around, while honouring their Shiva with beautiful garlands. Whichever side Durga was seen heading, the warriors were seen fleeing under some pretext (excuse). Thus with the raising of lot of hue and cry in the battlefield, the lotus eyed goddess was seen glamorous along with the furious lion in the battlefield. (24)

Then the demons like Shumbh and Nishumbh, becoming furious with rage, launched an attack. They were armed with swords and protective covering along with stretched bows with arrows fixed therein while they were having swords and double edged swords in their hands. They had earlier gained victories in all the nine regions of the world (the Universe) and had not been defeated by Indra (god) even. But Kali (goddess) had cut them into pieces with her sword, getting furious with rage and thrown them all around. (25)

Totak Chhand

It was rather impossible for me to describe the beauty of her glamour in the battlefield when the goddess appeared with an unsheathed sword in hand. On seeing her glamour and charm many warriors had run away from the battlefield just as stars hide themselves (shy away) with the rise of the sun. (26)

The goddess Kali with sword in hand had landed herself amidst the forces of demons, saying that she would kill all the warriors in no time, without leaving a single warrior alive. (27)

Swaiyya

The warriors launched an attack by challenging (the enemy) along with the musical tunes of drums, weaver's instruments, mirdang and muchang. They were full of pride and established themselves firmly in strength (together) and would not retrace their steps, ridding themselves of their egoism. Even if the Yama (god of death) were to take away their lives, they would not desist from their position and would continue resisting. They were fighting fearlessely and by winning acclaim of others, got killed in action, thus they had crossed this ocean of life successfully. (28)

Those brave warriors, who were not subdued by anyone, could not be pushed back by gods like Indra even. When they l ad roared in the battlefield even, then apart from the goddess, all others ran away from the battlefront. Then Kali got furious with rage and cut them into pieces, just as the coal field is spread out on the ground, being cut into pieces. Their clothes were draped in red with the blood stains as if they were playing games like gidha (Panjabi folk dance) during the festival season of holi. (29)

Couplet

The (goddess) Chandi then appeared on the scene and launched an attack. Her eyes were burning like copper. Being intoxicated with wine, she was uttering some incoherent words (language). (30)

Swaiyya

The goddess, getting furious with rage, said these words, "I will kill all the enemies in no time. She thrust herself into the battlefield by supporting her sword with a great powerful effort and making her lion move faster. The weapons in the hands of the goddess were shining brilliantly midst the flock of demons and it seemed as if there were flashes of light coming out of the forest of ocean." (31)

The goddess Chandi unsheathed her sword being infuriated with rage. On seeing the glamour of her sword, both the armies of the gods and demons became pleased and she struck the head (with her sword) of the demon Chichhar in such a manner that it is not possible for me to depict that scene. The sword, after striking the enemy (and killing him) and tearing apart the mountain like enemy body, got pierced (thrust) into the netherlands. (32)

Many types of musical instruments like kettle drums, weaver's instrument, pranav, gomukh, mirdang, conch shell, flute, clarionet, muraj and muchang etc. were being played (in the battlefield). (35)

Many musical notes of various types including nafiri, kanra and dudambh etc. were being played. Even the cowards got prompted to fight in the battlefield with the sounding of martial music and none of them managed to flee from there. (36)

The warriors, with arrogant faces, were facing each other while engaged in fighting, and were falling on the ground, jumping up and down and were being killed. (proceeding to heavens). (37)

In the battle field the jackals were groaning, while the ghosts were eating flesh. The vultures were flying off with pieces of flesh, and the warriors were not fleeing from the battlefield. (38)

"First I will try to propitiate you and then I will try to relate as per my strength and wisdom. O Poets ! If there are some flaws in my poetry, please do not make fun of me." (45)

"First chapter was related to Bhagwati (goddess) and now the witch-craft of woman is described. "O goddess ! You may function within my budy as a stream so that the words may spring up as waves (therein). (46)

Swaiyya

" O Lord ! You have made me like a mountain from a simple strraw and there was none so benevolent and bountiful as yourself. May you forgive my flaws as there was no other so forgetful as myself. All those, who care to serve you are enriched with loads of wealth in a moment. During this age of Kalyug, one had the support of the sword of Kali (goddess) and her strong arms only." (47)

The (goddess) Chandi had killed the invincible warriors and thrown their cut-off heads in the battlefield. You had punished the most invincible warriors by inflicting heavy punishment thus divesting the arrogant people of their pride (egoistic tendencies). Thus you had established the kingdom of Indra in the heavens and the song of his victory was heard throughout the Universe. There was no other equal to you in prowess being armed with a very powerful bow. (48)

Couplet

There was a Raja by the name of Chitar Singh in the town of Chitravati, who was possessing great wealth along with many chariots, elephants and horses. (1)

The Lord-Creator had bestowed upon him a charming personality ; whose charm had enamoured the spouse of gods, demons or kinars (mythological horse with human head) along with other women of the town. (2)

One fairy, with all embellishments was proceeding to meet Indra but on seeing this Raja she stopped there, just as the black-bee on seeing the lotus-flower gets diverted. (3)

Aril

On seeing the beauty of the Raja, this fairy got enamoured by his charm. So she sent her messenger with deceit in order to meet him and had sent a message through this emissary that she would consume poison in case the beloved Raja refused to meet her, or she would kill herself with a dagger and would not like to live any longer (even for a moment). (4)

Couplet

The emissary gave details of her message to the Raja (giving out her secret). The Raja then arranged to wed her and with the beating of drums and musical notes felt extremely happy and satisfied. (5)

That celestial beauty gave birth to a son, who was a fountain (source) of charm and extreme beauty. Even Shiva was getting (furious) jealous on seeing him as a replica of Kamdev (god of love). (6)

For many years, that Raja enjoyed sensual pleasure with that fairy and then that fairy went to Indra-Puri (after sometime). (7)

In her absence the Raja got much perturbed and sent for his ministers. Then he got a painting made of his fairy by a painter and sent these paintings immediately to various lands including foreign countries. (8)

Finally he managed to locate a young girl in the kingdom of Orissa, who was as charming as the fairy and was also possessing many other qualities. (9)

Chopaiee

On hearing the news of this young belle, the Raja called his army and distributed much wealth of various types. The soldiers wore their coats of mail and armed thtemselves with various weapons and marched towards Orissa. (10)

The (king) Raja of Orissa, getting the (secret) hint of this onslaught, collected his armed forces and addressed his soldiers in many ways (thus coaxing them for a battle). He ordered the Kashatriyas to fight it out, while making up his mind for a battle (against the invading forces). (11)

Couplet

Many types of martial bands were playing and the warriors positioned themselves in battle array in the battlefield. The arrows were being shot in countless abundance like a shower. In fact, the wind (air) got involved in confusion (seeing all this). (12)

Bhujang Chhand

The great and powerful warrriors were being killed with the swords, as all the warriors fully armed withh weapons were fighting without any reservation. Those stubborn warrriors were waging a war facing one another in the battlefield and those arrogant fighters could not be dissuaded from fighting against each other. (13)

Harwant Singh, with a huge force was made to march ahead while Chitar Singh with a spear in hand was following him. (14)

Swaiyya

Thousands of stubborn warrriors with Himalaya like powerful bodies were advancing forward by challenging (the enemy). Then the enemy forces by picking up courage and taking weapons like salchel even in hand came near them while shouting at them. The Sumer mountain even got shaken up by watching the turmoil all around while the residents of Shiva's and Vishnu's land got frightened. The enemy trroops had fallen accepting their defeat while the others were standing aghast without defeat, whereas Harwant had only shown his (hands) action in more fun. (15)

Wherever the great youthful leaders, getting furious with rage and holding their swords or weapons were standing, the enemy attacked them while the fairies were joining together watching these leaders. They continued fighting bravely till they succumbed to the onslaughts of steel (swords). The enemy force was like a rivulet wherein the Kashatriya warriors were taking a swim in that stream with joy (and enjoyment). (16)

Couplet

Thus having defeated the Raja of Orissa, his daughter was won over. Then the Raja got married to that beauty as per shastra's rites and enjoyed the bliss of life (in mind).(17)

The darling daughter of the Raja of Orissa, named Chitarmati, was in great love with Raja Harwant Singh (was always thinking of him all the twenty four hours).(18)

The Raja had sent Harwant Singh to a Brahmin's house for studies (for learning). For almost a month the Brahmin (as per instructions of the queen) did not converse with the prince. (19)

Chopaiee

Then the Raja called his son, so the Brahmin brought him along with himself. Then the Raja asked his son to relate all the virtues which he had acquired, but the son kept mum (on hearing Raja's words). (20)

Couplet

Then the Raja brought him (his son) back to his palace. There along with other ladies, a beautiful fairy was also standing. (21)

The Raja then told all those present that the son was not speaking at all (was speech-less). Then Chitarmati took him to her palace. (22)

Aril

The queen then said, " O friend ! If some clever thief (beloved) were to steal away (win over) the heart of someone, then what should be done ? (Then she replied herself to this querry). She was residing in the town of Kalpi and was engaged in all types of sensuous pleasures. This deer-like eyed woman lived there and even the moon would feel its charm as feeble (nothing) before her. (4)

Couplet

Her fat lover was old while the lean (thin) lover was young and both were engaged in enjoying sensuous pleasures with her day and night. (5)

The woman was under the spell of the youth, while the old man was under the spell of the woman. This is the normal way of life in the world and everyone is aware of it. (6)

That woman used to enjoy sensuous pleasure with the youth, while she would not go anywhere near the fat one. If at all she had any sexual relationship with him, she would repent later. (7)

Once she was enjoying sensual pleasure with the young (thin) man, when suddenly the fat man also arrived there. He made a thud (noise) with his feet at the woman's doorstep. (8)

In this situation, the woman told her young lover to run away by jumping over the wall, as some sinner had come, who might get both in bondage. (9)

She managed to show herself unnerved, having enjoyed sensuous pleasure with the young lover. Seeing the fat lover, she stood up in a confused state. (10)

Herhusband (Mahanand) was blind of one eye and he was old while the woman was very young. So she was not attached to him, whereas the old man's wife was fully engrossed in her lover. (4)

Mahanand went to his house for some work and saw his wife engaged in sexual pleasure with some young person. (5)

When she learnt about Mahanand's approaching, she embraced him and greatly pleased with him, she showed great excitement by talking lovingly to him. (6)

By pressing both his ears with her hands she kissed his (one) eye. Thus she made this foolish person completely incapacitated of his eyes and ears.. Thus with this deciteful action she managed for the departure of her lover (withhout any fear). (7)

He heard some noise with his ears but could not see with one eye. Thus this ignorant person was always lying at his place without realizing any truth about the whole affair. (8)

The wife told the husband that she was enamoured by seeing his charming face and had developed great love for him, as such she had kissed his eye out of great attraction. (9)

Mahanand, on hearing this became over-joyed and showered his love on her in abundance, but that man did not realize the actual secret of her behaviour. (10)(1)

Thus the (woman) girl got fully enamoured with the behaviour of the prince, and from that day onwards the girl completely forgot about the Yogi. (14)

Aril

One should never run after a useless thing, having gained a valuable thing. Having attained a wise person one should not bother about a fool. Thus having gained the company of a wealthy, clever and young man, why would a woman accept the company of an old, clumsy, penniless and foolish person ? (15)

Couplet

"So the merchant's daughter told the prince to take her along with himself. I would forget about the Yogi and enjoy sensuous pleasure with you alone and would love you only in future." (16)

The woman then said, " If I am faithful (to my spouse) and truth had prevailed in me, then a man (noble) would appear and escape by keeping his foot on my husband's head." (12)

On hearing these words, the Raja got up and escaped by keeping his foot on the fool's head. That foolish person got pleased by thinking that this woman was truly faithful to him. (13)(1)

Couplet

There used to live a woman, the wife of a musalman (Turk) in the town of Shahjahanabad. She played a great magical spell (deceitful act) which I am going to decribe by editing it. (1)

There were many men who used to enjoy sensuous pleasure with her during day and night. Even the dogs (bitches) would feel ashamed of themselves on seeing them, as there was a continuous chain of men coming and going from there. (2)

Chopaice

There used to live there another Mughal's wife, by the name of Jainabadi. She used to have sexual relationships with many men and was very obstinate and was not feeling ashamed of herself. (3)

Couplet

There was one man by the name of Jahad Khan with her when another man named Yusuf Beg also came to her (house) so she got up being perplexed and showed him as a physician (vaid). (4)

Aril

She advanced towards him and said to him, " I had already called a physician (vaid) for your sake. So get yourself treated quickly by him and go back to yourr house only after being treated and cured fully." (5)

Couplet

The woman then told him,"By moving with speed, you become breathless and while sleeping (lying down) you always breathe faster (than normal). Your knees get painful by standing for long, since you are sufferring from a triple type of disease." (6)

Aril

The man posing as a Valid, then said, "I would now treat you and it should not be taken as a joke only. I would treat you as per your malady and You need not feel offended. If we were to hide our ills from a Vaid, or a female physician, Guru or friend, then whom else shall we disclose our afflictions ?" (7)

Kabit

That Vaid (posing as physician) then asked him to munch an ear (of maize) along with a radish and by beating him with shoes asked him to take out goats for grazing. Then he poured some ash in his hair (head) and his both moustaches were shaved off. So he behaved with him so badly, that it is beyond description. Then by asking him to wear a beggar's apparel he made him to beg for alms. Thus a deceitful act was enacted and he was turned out of the house. The woman thus showed him such a deceitful action that her paramou went away by making a fool of Jahad Khan. (8)

When that fool came back home after his begging mission, he did not find that Vaid (physician) there. So he said, "Where was the person, who had treated him of his ailment. That fool did not realize the secret of his deceiful action." (9)

Then that woman spoke like this, "O dear ! Listen to me ! The person, who is blessed with a medicine, which had been found so effectiv, then that person does not show his face again after treating the ailing one." (10)

Couplet

"In case, the person with a magic spell and the person manufacturing a particular medicine get together by great good fortune, then they run away after giving the medicine and are not to be seen again." (11)

Chopaiee

He took the words of that woman as perfect truth and the fool did not differentiate between the fact and the secret behind it. In fact, he developed greater love with that woman as she had got him cured of his disease. (12(1)

Here the seventh episode of the "Minister & King's dialogue" depiciting the woman's characterization in the Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well (so far).

She also got enchanted by the king and would invite him daily to her house. She used to send her maid named Chitar Kala to his house. (4)

That Chitar Kala, on seeing the charming beauty of the Raja, got so much impressed with him that she fell down unconscious on the ground, as she had been hit by the arrows of the god of love (Kamdev) (as she was enamoured by his love). (5)

Chopaiee

On gaining consciousness, she told the Raja, "O dear Raja ! Today you enjoy sensuous pleasure with me, as on seeing you I have been overwhelmed by my sexual desires and I have lost all my senses (I am completely under the control of the god of love). (6)

Couplet

On hearing her words, the Raja did not have any sexual relationship with her. So she got annoyed but brought him to the house of Jagjotmati and at the same time informed the merchant (Shah) also. (7)

Aril

On hearing the maid's words, the merchant came home immediately and he got much perturbed on learning the woman's secret. That woman now felt to herself that her husband (Shah) would kill the Raja and then later on he would kill her also. (8)

The Raja, completely intoxicated in your love was watching you standing here. You should move quickly to the place, where the fire of your love was in full bloom (where your lover was waiting impatiently). (5)

On hearing these words, the shah's wife went to that place and the maid immediately went to the Raja to inform him that her beloved was sleeping there, so you should go there to coax-her (from wrathfulness) into a favourable mood, by holding her with both the feet. (6)

The maid had already informed the sayyad before hand by going to him, that he should remain alert (awake) by holding his sword, lest someone should catch him here. (7)

Where the thieves were waiting having lit the fire, there the shah's wife had reached by now. The thieves then looted all her wealth and buried her in a deep pit (after killing her). (8)

Aril

The Raja, under the spell of the god of death, came there to touch the feet of the woman, as he had accepted the words of the maid-servant (Chitar Kala) as true. The Sayyad got up, without having a second thought, he wielded his sword and wounded the Raja Sughar Singh, who died immediately. (9)

Couplet

The Shah's wife was killed by the thieves, while the Sayyad had killed the Raja and took that maid-servant to his house with great joy. (10)

One should never give out one's secret to the woman, rather one should take out all her secrets. These women thus pierce the hearts of many men (win over their love). (11)

Chopaiee

Then the minister explained the secret (of woman's mind) to the King and then related his tenth episode in the presence of the assembled men. (1)

There used to live in Peshawar a business man (bania) who had a characterless wife. She had killed him and then immolated herself along with him (in the pyre). I would relate this with little editing (improvement). (2)

The shopkeeper had gone out on business, but the woman in his absence, could not control herself. She called a man into her house and kept him (there) in the house. (3)

She used to enjoy sensuous pleasure with him day and night. When her son felt hungry, then he would cry out loudly on seeing her lover. (4)

When the son, being hungry, would shout for the mother, then her paramour would say, "O women ! Make him quiet thus dispelling my mind's suffering." (5)

She fed him with her breast but after breast-feeding even the child was not keeping quiet. So she killed him with her own hands and then made her lover happy (with her presence). (6)

When the child was quiet, the paramour said,"Now why does your child not cry any more ? Then the woman replied to him, " I have killed my son for the sake of your and mine comfort. (7)

Couplet

The paramour, on hearing these words, got scared and felt frightened. So he spoke ill about the woman's behaviour towards her son. (8)

When the paramour looking at the woman, said like this, she thrust a dreadful dagger into his chest and killed him. (9)

She then took both the son and the paramour on one side (corner) and digging a pit, long enough, buried both of them there. (10)

There was one Sadhu (mendicant) also living in that house, who saw all this happening. The shopkeeper was his friend, so he related the whole story to him. (11)

When the shopkeeper told the wife like his, she got enraged and taking out a sword, killed him also. After beheading him she said, "The thieves had looted the household valuables and had killed him also." (13)

Couplet

(She said,) "The thieves had killed my husband and the son and had plundered the money also (weath). I will also burn myself along with him with the beat of drum (mirdang) (or become Sati with him). (14)

With the dawn of the day, she proceeded to the pyre spot so as to immolate herself (along with her husband). People also started moving towards the spot, along with wood, to watch the whole fun. (15)

With the noise and humdrum of the people and the beating of drum (mirdang) that mendicant also proceeded to the spot, as he had seen the whole happening. (16)

Radha was sitting among her friends with such beauty aids (emballishments) that Kahna had shown his glimpse once. "O my mother ! That very moment Kahna had stolen my heart (I had developed love for him since then). He had given me such a jolt for his love that I have become his slave since then. (I had developed keen love for him like a devotee) what should I do now ? Where should I go now (to locate him) ? Or else I should consume poison and give up my life even. Surely it seems some scorpion had bitten me (since then). With his very glance, he had stolen my heart (developed keen love for him) and he had enamoured me into his love (by wrapping my mind with his headgear) so that I am feeling his separation badly." Radhika then called her friend, Main prabha and sent her to Krishna, after explaining to her the whole thing (matter). (10)

She sent a letter through her saying, "that she should go to Krishna and inform him about Radha's state (being completely enamoured by him) in his separation and he should come immediately to meet her." (11)

"In His separation Brij-bala (Radha) had been reduced to a broken-hearted woman. By telling him some story, you should explain my state of (desperate) mind." (12)

When Radha had told Main prabha like this, then she went to the place where Krishna was resting. (13)

Chopaiee

When Sri Krishna read that letter, then he realized the importance of her true love for him (at heart). It appeared as if pearls and jewels were studded therein. (14)

Swaiyaa

"O Sri Krishna ! Your eyes are filled with extreme love, are full of passionate desires (longing) and are completely imbued with perfect charm and are soothing to the eye. Your beautiful eyes are powerful enough to make the chakor (partridge), lotus flower, crane, fish, and deer as its worshippers. Your eyes are very fortunate, lovable, full of wedded bliss, which have enamoured my heart, that are full of the pride and the (source) fountain of all worldly pleasures." (15)

They are beautiful enough to win over the beauty of crane, moon, wine, pointed arrows, lotus flowers or deer even (wagtail) khanjan, kamdev (god of love) and fish etc.feel ashamed of themselves on seeing their beauty. The eyes of Sri Krishna were really so charming as if the creator had created them like the pointed arrow. (16)

Apart from Chintamani (Krishna) all glamorous articles were like a slap, the fly-whisk was like a whip and the moonlight appeared like an evil-spirit (without Krishna). (17)

For attending to Krishna's job, the girlfriend started immediately to meet Radha, just as with the blowing of a strong wind, her body would not be visible (seen). (20)

The friend, called Tarita Kirat, came soon, who was supposed to be very clever and shrewed. She was sent to meet Radha by Sri Krishna, sfter explaining to her the whole secret affair. (21)

Swaiyya

By embellishing herself with flowers, scent and sandal wood, and having had her food, Radha was relaxing there. The girl-friend came there and told her, "O proud lady ! Sri Krishna, with large eyes, was calling you, so without and delay you should accompany me and meet the man (beloved) with a dark (black tanned) body like the cloud, just as lightning strikes from (within) the clouds. O friend ! You are not listening and agreeing to me, do you know that it is becoming very late in the night." (22)

"You used to say that, "will Sri Krishna ever visit these bye-lanes, in the form of a milk-vendor and with the wings of a pea-cock will he ever visit the milk-maids to (eat) taste our milk-made articles ? The flute is being played on the banks of Jamna since long and I had been sent by him to call you. O darling ! Please listen to my words and let us proceed towards Krishna, as Krishna will not send for you again." (23)

"O dear friend ! He is always praising you and was always narrating your virtues. He beautifies himself for your sake only and plays on his flute also for your sake. He rubs on the body a mixture of both sandal wood and camphor. The daughter of Brikhbhan (Radha) had endeared herself to the heart of Sri Krishna. No one else had known about this secret." (24)

The sweet frame bedecked with the glamour of a pea-cock's wings was glorified on the banks of Jamna. "O Childish girl ! Try to understand the seriousness of the matter, Krishna was madly in love with you and let us go back to the place, where the darling (Krishna) was waiting. On hearing the story of Madhav (Krishna) she got up unhesitatingly. Thus she started hearing such words on leaving her house and being under the spell of (god of love) Kamdev, she forgot about her pride (prestige)." (25)

The beauty of Radha, having the body like pearls and with ornaments of a nose-ring of pearls, she was looking glamorous and her four-fold necklace was looking grand, along with the brightness of the bangles of pearls. With a lotus-flower in hand, Radha was standing on the banks of Jamna and it seemed as if by churning the Cheer ocean, the moon-like body was produced by tearing apart its depth. (26)

Chopaiee

On one side Krishna was standing with great joy and affection for taking bath while on the other side the milk maid were standing, who were singing and clapping. (27)

Swaiyya

In the deep waters where Krishna was enjoying his love on one side was the woman (Radha) while on the other side with the group of milkmaids Siam was sitting. Then with a deep plunge, both Sri Krishna and Radha enjoyed sensuous pleasure. So both were engaged in their love with great excitement and were at a great distance, but no one could follow this secret. (28)

Radha, while enjoying great love with Sri Krishna, could not lay open her heart. During her youthful age, had appeared strongly and in her heart, only the picture of her beloved was deep rooted. By feeling shy of the other girl friends, she was enjoying loving postures with Sri Krishna in the river waters only. Due to their strong love and affection (for each other) both were enjoying sensuous pleasure to their full satisfaction. (29)

Then the woman said immediately "Has Ram Das come to your place ? My saintly husband had gone somewhere, could anybody tell me about his whereabouts ? (5)

Couplet

After saying these words, she went back towards the village and the other people also left that place. Then she came back and had sensuous pleasure with him (Padua) and got fully pleased within her heart. (6)

After having sexual relationship with Padua, she came to the place, where her own house was fully established with decorations. (7)

Even if someone were very clever and intelligent, no one would know the secrets of a clever woman. (8)

If a man gives out the secrets of his heart to the woman, then old age over comes his youth even and finally the Yama overtakes his life (death overtakes him). (9)

Sortha

All the smritis, Vedas and Kok-Shastra etc all tell this fact that one should never give out one's secrets to the woman, rather her secrets should be known (found out) always. (10)

Then the woman told her paramour, "The gardener of this garden has come to you, so please give him lot of money, so that he does not go back disappointed." (7)

On hearing the words of the woman, that lover gave lot of money in the hands of this man (gardener). Thus the woman saved his friend from this awkward situation by this deceitdul action. (8)

"O king of Roop Nagar ! Pohapmati had thus, through this deceitful act, sent away her friend safely and saved him by posing him (making him) as a gardener. (9)

Couplet

The prime (main) minister thus related the fourteenth episode to the king. On hearing which the Raja got pleased immensely and gave him lot of offerings (in alms). (1)

The step mother of a person, named Bhan used to live in Ramdaspur, who used to enjoy sensuous pleasure with many men, without any distinction of high or low castes (position). (2)

When her husband died, she had become pregnant. Considering the issue of social honour (prestige) she felt greatly upset and frightened. (3)

She became fully enamoured by the Raja, when she saw him, but the Raja would not come under her spell. So she thought to herself, how to arrange a meeting with him. (3)

He was not at all allured by her, so what should be done (by her) Neither he would come to her place, nor he was interested in calling her to his place (she thought). (4)

So she thought of some means to arrange to meet him. Then she thought to herself and she arranged to cast some magic spell or use some witchcraft so that he would be under her spell (control). (5)

She got tired of using all sorts of witchcraft and magic spell, but the Raja did not come to meet her. Then she thought of a deceitful action to bring him under her spell. (6)

People soon gathered there on hearing her shouts of 'Thief'. So the woman explained to them that she had suddenly got up from her slumber and started mumbling something (without purpose). On their moving away, the woman caaught hold of the Raja's hand and said, "Either I will get you caught in chains or you give me company in my sensuous pleasure." (32)

Couplet

Then the Raja thought to himself that the best magic spell would be to behave with this woman like a deceitful person and get away from there. (33)

"If I try to run away, then my honour would be at stake, while by enjoying any sexual affair with her, my moral duty (morality) would be (lost) at stake. By any means the situation was very delicate so may the Lord help me in this situation !" (34)

The Raja thought to himself, if a son was born through her, he would be a buffoon and a daughter would become a prostitute. By having any love affair with her would lead to the loss of my morality (religious duty) while by running away, he would be caught in chains. (35)

Chopaiee

The Raja said, "O darling ! Listen to me. I was just testing the extent of your love only. If someone were to meet such a beautiful woman and then waste such a chance (let go) he would surely be a great fool." (36)

Couplet

If someone were to get a chance to meet such a charming beauty and then allows such a chance to fritter away, then his taking birth even would be a cause of shame for him." (37)

Chopaiee

That foolish woman got puffed up on hearing these words. She could not gauge the secret of all this action. So, being overjoyed she got all those items of drugs as suggested by the Raja. (40)

Couplet

That woman arranged to bring poppy husk, hemp and opium and got the hemp pounded ground nicely and the wine distilled seven times. (41)

Aril

Then the Raja thought to himself, that he will not have any sexual affair with this woman, that was the real magic spell." The Raja poured some wine in a tumbler with his own hands and made her drink and then with this deceitful action made her drunk and put her to sleep. (45)

Aril

The Raja made her drink many pegs of wine by pouring wine in them posing (showing) great love for the woman. Once she got drunk and went to sleep, then the Raja paid sixty gold coins to her and himself escaped from there. (46)

If some woman were to show her love towards you, then you do not reciprocate such a love. If she gets involved in love with you, then you should not get carried away by her love or loving gestures. You should not give out your hearts secrets to a woman, whose secrets you are not able to grasp. (47)

Since that day, the pledge is kept by me in my heart and since then I have not met any other woman (except my wife). (50)

Aril

The Raja then sent away his son to the prison. On the dawn of day, he again sent for him and the minister related another episode. On listening to it clearly the Raja became more doubtful. (He got his doubts about the woman's character clarified). His doubts about woman's character became more consolidated (confirmed). (1)

On one side she took the Mughal to the garden and on the other side, she sent for the second paramour (the Raja's son) to .neet her there. To eat the fruits, she climbed the tree. (17)

On climbing the tree, she started saying "What are you doing ? In my very presence, you are having a love affair with another woman. Are you not feeling ashamed of yourself ?" (18)

On climbing down from the tree, she said, "Where has that woman gone, with whom you were enjoying sensuous pleasure with great joy and fun ?" (19)

The mughal then replied, "Ihave not had any love affair with any other woman, what is the meaning of all this secret.? There must be some supernatural power of this tree. Saying this, he kept quiet." (20)

Thinking about it, the mughal then climbed the tree. Then the woman called the Raja's son near her and had a sexual relationship with him. (21)

On seeing the Raja's son, the mughal made lot of noise and came down the tree. As soon as he came down, the woman made the Raja's son run away and on coming down (the tree) the mughal did not see anything (happening there). (22)

On hearing this, the Kazi stood up and left for the place along with his wife. After clearing away all other companions, he came towards this tree. (24)

Chopaiee

That woman gave out the secret of all this happening to the wife of the Kazi, and then showed her the tree. That woman also called her paramour and as the Kazi (her spouse) climbed the tree, she also enjoyed sensuous pleasure with her paramour. (25)

Aril

Then the Kazi thought to himself, that whatever the Mughal had said appears to be quite true. So from that day, the Kazi accepted the mughal as his friend. So from that day, the Kazi became a follower of the mughal and said to himself that whatever he (mughal) had told him, had proved true. (26)

Couplet

One should never engage in a love affair with a woman, specially when the elders (wise men) undergo any amount of suffering due to sexual desires etc. (27)(1)

If someone gets a gold coin, then why should one accept a smaller coin (two/ sence) If one gets the job done without paying any money, they why should one spend any money ? Barring a rich person why should one visit a poor man's house ? So why should one have love affair with a poor man having forsaken the Raja.? (7)

Couplet

After having enjoyed sensuous pleasure with great love she sent away the Raja ; so due to the myrtle being applied to her hand, she went to her hand, she went to her husband for getting the trouser string tied. (8)

On hearing the words of the wise, the foolish husband got up and could not realize the secret behind this move, and with greater love and devotion at heart, he tied her trouser string. (9)

Bhujang Chhand :

The Raja sent away his son to the prison and called him again the next morning. Then the minister told the Raja like this and saved the life of Chitar Singh's son. (1)

There used to live a woman in the town of Cheen Macheen and was very deer to her spouse. Whatever she would say, was agreed by him, and he would not take any action without her approval. (2)

He would always be devoted to her and would not gaze at the fairies of Indra even (except her attachment). The husband was existing (living his life) by looking at her charming beauty and without her permission, he would not drink water even.(3)

The woman had a beautiful name of Lal mati, and her charm was so glamorous that it would appear like a necklace of music. (Rag mala) such a charming beauty was neither heard of (with the ears) nor seen with the eyes. Such a beautiful woman had never existed before not there would be any (such beauty) in future as well. (4)

It seems Brahma had moulded her figure with his own hands ; either she was like a goddess or was created by the god of love. Neither such a beauty had existed before nor was living at present or would be born again (in future). She looked like a demi-goddess, a female snake or a mythological mare with a human head. (5)

She developed love for the Raja of the land and considered him to be very clever and intelligent. He was very handsome, on comparing with his charm, even the pride of god of love (Kamdev) would be shattered (would feel belittled). (6)

Couplet :

She had developed great love and admiration for him considering him to be very shrewed. She was so much struck by his separation that she had lost all sense of shame or self-respect (was completely enamoured by him). (7)

Totak Chhand :

She was overjoyed with the charm of her paramour (beloved) at his beauty which was beyond description. That woman sent for the Raja one day and enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him to her heart's satisfaction. (8)

She had sexual relationship with the Raja throughout the night and in the meantime her husband came there. On seeing him coming, she got frightened, so she thought of some deceitful action in her mind. (9)

Couplet :

She made the Raja in the form of a pillow and kept him there (huddled up) and with great love and affection she approached her spouse by advancing towards him. (10)

The Raja Thought in his mind that he had been caught due to the woman's love. So he also was afraid (of the husband's presence) and could not even breathe loudly. (freely). (11)

That woman, after having a sexual affair with her husband, kept herself in his embrace and they continued to sleep in joy by using the Raja as a pillow. (12)

People will talk ill of you only when they will come to know about this secret. Even if some one came to know about it, then he will keep quiet out of fear. O dear friend ! You must enjoy sexual affair with me to-day or else you may slip away from underneath my legs. (28)

The Raja replied, "One, who does not know the art of love-affair, should slip away from underneath the leg (accepting defeat) as he could not carry on the sexual affair throughout the night without any hesitation. I am bound by my moral duties, as such I am not having any sexual relationship with you, as I am afraid of the worldly disrepute." (29)

Swaiyya :

The woman then said, "I will take my beloved in my embrace and then lie down on my bed and shall not share my heart's secret with anyone. The night passes by in enjoying sensuous pleasure and one does not feel then as without charm (useless). O dear friend ! On waking up, all the women feel ashamed of themselves. So O friend ! I am feeling that instead of waking up, it is better to continue sleeping (This is my feeling at heart)." (45)

Couplet :

Then the woman replied to the Raja so that he could hear. "I will have sexual relationship with you to-day or else I will end my life by taking poison." (46)

"The Lord had made your eyes like arrows, but I had been given the protective cover of self-restriant (shyness) and (those arrows) are not piercing me." (47)

"Your eyes are very beautiful and on their very sight, all the reasoning (knowledge) goes awry, but like throat-choking fruit (ber) there was no attraction in them for having your companionship." (48)

"But that 'ber tree' is more praiseworthy as compared to us, which forces the passers by, on its very sight, to taste its fruit aand then allows them to proceed home." (49)

By such vague talk she wanted to have the sexual company (love) of the beloved. That woman was under the spell of the god of love (Kaamdev) and due to his separation, her body was completely upset (senseless). (50)

The Raja then said, "Since I have gained some knowledge (realization of self-control) my Guru (teacher) had taught me this sermon. "O son ! You should vow (promise) that so long life pulsates in your veins, you should develop greatest love for your spouse, whereas you should not visit the bed of another woman even in your dreams." (51)

"In fact, due to the sexual companionship of another woman, even Indra (the god) had developed a thousand vaginas on his body, the moon got desecrated due to the companionship of another woman ; even Ravana had to lose his (ten) heads for the sake of another woman (Sita) and the Kauravas army got killed (destroyed) on account of another woman (Daropadi)." (52)

"The love shown to another woman, should be considered like a sharp knife and a loving companionship of another woman should be considered like death perpetrated on one's body and one having sexual relationship with another woman, should be considered as the greatest cheat and such a person finally faces the death of a dog at the hands of a demon." (53)

"O young girl ! Many women from far and near lands visit us and accepting me as their Guru they pay their obeisance to me and get all their cherished desires fulfilled from me. I consider my shishas (followers) as my sons and their spouses as my daughters in my mind. O young belle ! How could I have sexual relationships with them ?" (54)

Then the minister related another episode. "O Rajan ! Listen to me. I will tell you about a woman's deceitful action and you will be pleased to hear it." (2)

In the North there lived a mighty Raja. He was known all over as Suraj bans clan (the family tree of the sun). His queen consort was called by the name of Chander Mate. It appeared if she had been taken out after churning the chheer ocean. (3)

She gave birth to a girl child, as if the sun had personally blessed her with this child. Her beauty was known all over the place, as if she was taken out by churning the artistic beauty of the moon. (4)

She was named Sumer Koer, as there was no other girl so beautiful as she. She was the most charming in all the three v orlds, as if she was the poetic beauty of moon. (5)

Her charm was truly glamorous, as if the goldsmith like Kamdev (god of love) had moulded her in the mould. Her beauty is beyond description and she was the flower of Malti. (6)

Couplet :

Her youthful charm waas overflowing her white complexioned body (limbs) and it seemed as if the milky waves were shining in the ocean of chheer. (7)

Chopaiee :

She was later married to a king from the South and was equipped with various comforts of life. She gave birth to two sons and one daughter. It seems the girl was a fountain (source) of beauty and charm. (8)

After sometime that king died and the God Almighty passed on the control of his kingdom to his son and no one could ignore his orders and he would function as he desired. (9)

Lot of time had gone by and the spring season was ushered in and everyone was aware of it. She could not have peace of mind without the presence of her beloved. She was burning in the separation from her beloved (the arrows of separation had pierced her heart. (10)

Couplet :

How could she rest in peace with the arrows of separation piercing her heart ? She would talk very loose and meaningless things and in her heart she was pining to meet her lover. (11)

She was pierced by the arrows of love (Kamdev) which had appeared on the other side after piercing her heart. As a result she forgot all about the prestige of (honour of) the family or fear of public slander. (12)

There was a youthful man, whom she had called and then enjoyed with him sensuous pleasure with full joy. (13)

Chopaiee :

Then that woman was always busy in having sensuous pleasure with him, so that (though) being not his spouse, she was staying with him at his place, She would call him every night and used to have sexual relationship with him. (14)

All the men would stop him from going there and the guards would also check him as a thief. But on the attendant explaining to them, he was allowed to go, being her paramour. (15)

That woman used to have senuous plesure with him and would enjoy many postures of relationships. That woman was always lustful and would always be in his embrace for having senuous pleasure. (16)

Couplet :

When the lady attendant would explain to the guards then the person would get admission and the woman would come to meet the friend. (17)

Chopaiee :

Once during the night the woman had called the friend and he came in the guise of a woman. Then the woman shared all the moments of their companionship, saying that she had enjoyed with him sexual relations since long. (18)

"One day you should go to the jungle and have a bath in the well underneath ground level (baoli), and then say that you had met Sri Krishna and after saying this keep quiet." (20)

"Then tell to all those people the same thing, who would come to visit you. Then those people will talk about it in the village and on hearing this, I will feel surprised." (21)

"I will come there in a planquin and will bow to you as ny Guru and then bring you to my house and then enjoy sexual relationship with you in many ways." (22)

The lover then did accordingly as directed by the woman. In the morning he went to the forest and had a bath in the baoli (underground well). (23)

Couplet :

After the bath in the baoli he went into meditation and started saying that SriKrishna had visited him and gave him his darshan (his glimpse). (24)

Chopaiee :

On hearing these words, all the people started moving towards him and brought for him goat, sugar and colocasia arum (kachalu). They bought milk and rice prepared for him and started bowing to him in various ways. (25)

"The charming Kahna was also having beautiful milkmaids and young milk vendors. They were all wearing beautiful coloured clothes." (38)

The woman then said, "There is no doubt or difference in it as these were the main features of Lord-Krishna. This is exactly what our shastras have said and is equally proclaimed by the Vedas as well." (39)

Even the Pandits (Brahmins) have detailed these features and the common masses also believeJn these features. So it was quite evident that you have been blessed with a glimpse of Sri Krishna. (40)

Chopaiee

All the woman then bowed to that man and made various types of requests (longings) to him, saying "O Lord ! Pray visit our homes and sing praises of Sri Krishna by worshipping Him. (41)

Couplet :

"I shall talk to him and saying this made her attendant (woman) leave the place. And then bringing that friend to her place, she started, enjoying in his company." (45)

Chopaiee :

She took him to her place and enjoyed his sexual company as per her desires. All were saying that she had been visited (met) by Sri Krishna, but no one knew the actual secret. (46)

Chopaiee :

She, accompanied by about fifty (women) friends along with her paramour, moved to her place. He would visit her daily for discourses and without any hesitation she would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him. (47)

Couplet :

She would address him, as if she were his wedded wife. The people would bow to him addressing him (the lover) as a Guru and no one could gauge the secret. (48)

Thus no one has been able to gauge the deceitful actions of clever women. Even the moon, sun, gods, demons, Brahma, Vishnu and Indra etc. have not been able to decipher the woman's mind (secrets). (49)(1)

Couplet :

Between Ganga and Jamna, there was a land called Kailkhar. The people living there were leading a life like animals (with problems in their normal life). (1)

Chopaiee :

The minister then said these words, " O beloved Raja ! Listen. I am going to relate a story of a woman and with that I would try to lessen your heart's suffering." (2)

Couplet :

The Raja of Kailikhar had a beautiful wife. To save the kingdom from destruction she had thought to herself (of a plan). (3)

Chopaiee :

He had a queen by the name of Prem Kunwari. She got worried on finding that the Raja had grown old. She did not have a son and this was her worry all the time. (4)

Couplet

She did not beget a son and the Raja had grown old. He was not capable of having any sexual relationship with her, so he could not produce a son. (5)

Couplet :

There was a pregnant lady, whom the queen called to her place and it was circulated throughout that the queen had become pregnant. That woman was given lot of wealth and the son was bought over and it was circulated that the Raja had got a son. Thus a celebration was held oy announcing his birth. (7)

The bards and bhatts were distributed lot of money and then after consultations he was named Sher Singh. (8)

Chopaiee :

After sometime the Raja died and Sher Singh was made the king and he was called 'Raja' by everyone, but no one knew about his secret. (9)

Couplet :

Due to good fortune, he became a Raja from a poor and penniless person. Due to the woman's deceptive action he became a king from an ordinary person. (10)

Dohra

Due to the reward of this actions (i.e. based on his destiny) he became a king from a panper. The woman had, though her deceitful behaviour (charitar) made him a Raja (king) from an ordinary person. (11)(1)

Couplet :

O mighty Raja ! Listen. I am going to relate the story of a trader. His wife went in the jungle and scratched a bird's picture on his rectum. (1)

Chopaiee :

When the trader would come back from a trading expedition (trip of business), he would say that he had killed twenty thieves during this trip. Then next morning he would say that he had killed thirty thieves that day (to-day). (2)

Thus he would always repeat these words and his wife would remain silent on hearing these words. She would not say anything at his face, but would keep it in her mind. (3)

Then what Niratmati did that she brought a horse from the stable. She wore a turban on head and holding a sword in hand, she disguised herself as a man. (4)

In her right hand there was a dagger and the policeman was nobody (nothing) before her. She disguised herself as a manly glorious warrior, as if she was the commander of the Maharaja's army. (5)

Chopaiee :

On seeing the trader alone, this woman thought of winning him over through some tricks. She suddenly appeared before him doing some attacking exercises and with unsheathed sword in hand stood near him. (8)

Couplet :

"O fool ! Where are you going ? (she shouted). Come and fight with me without having any fear. You remove your turban and other apparel and hand them over to me, else I shall kill you." (9)

Chopaiee :

On hearing these words the trader removing his clothes handed them over and trembling for life, he started repeating the name of God 'Ram Ram' and said, "O Thief ! Please leave me alone to-day and let me go alive, as I will be your slave throughout." (10)

Then as per poet Ram, the woman got down from the horse and scratched the sign of a bird on his rectum. (13)(1)

Chopaiee :

There was a Brahmin known by the name Kanak. He would study (read) many Puranas and Shastras. He had a beautiful personality with a charming face. Even the sun's glory was nothing before him. (The sun would borrow its glamour from him). (1)

That Brahmin was looking glamorous and would enamour the hearts of all including gods, men, snakes and demons and his curly hair were looking glorious. His eyes were piercing like the dagger. (2)

There was a charming queen by the name of Biom Kala, who was pining for a son, but could not beget one, due to the Raja being old. She wanted to have a sexual relationship with the Brahmin Kanak and asking for camphor (as excuse) she caught hold of the Brahmin one day. (3)

Chopaiee :

That woman was coming there for milking the buffalos there and the Raja, while taking a proper chance at the right time would also visit that place. At the time of milking the buffalo the offspring would create a nuisance then the milkman would call the woman to hold the offspring buffalo. (5)

Couplet :

When the milkman would bend down with his head facing downwards, then the Raja would enjoy sensuous pleasure with the woman. (6)

The Raja would have sexual relationships in different ways to his joy and satisfaction. That woman also would embrace him clinging to him very closely and enjoy his (sexual) companionship. (7)

When the buffalo would get hurt the buffalo would (shift) move slightly, then the milk would get spilt on the ground, and the milkman would shout at his wife with great rage. (8)

Aril :

"O milkmaid ! Listen to me. What are you doing ? The milk is being allowed by you to be spilt on the ground (Earth). Are you not afraid of me ?" She replied to the husband, " O dear ! You please listen to me. This offspring is always disturbing the buffalo. Give some milk to this offspring also to drink. (9)

Couplet :

The Raja and milkmaid were both young and were enjoying sensuous pleasure. The Raja would be embracing her keenly while the woman was equally embracing the Raja with passion. (10)

When the buffalo continued shifting around then the milkman said, "O milkmaid ! What are you doing ? Why are you wasting milk unnecessarily ?" (11)

Then the woman said, " O milkman ! What should I do, the off-spring of the buffalo is troubling me too much ? So let him suckle the milk, as it is mainly meant for them only. (12)

The Raja, after enjoying her company and the milkman without any doubt or hesitation, went back to their places. Thus the minister related the episode to the king of kings, thus completing his story. (13)

Sometimes the Raja would swim acros to meet her while at other times, the woman would swim across to this side of the river. She had developed great love for the Raja and used to have sexual relationships with the Raja in many ways. (5)

She was in the know of Kok-Shastra and would enjoy sensuous pleasure with him in good measure and would then come back after swimming across the river, having enjoyed in his embrace fully. (6)

Thus both of them used to enjoy each other's sexual company, thus alleviating all their hearts afflictions. They would enjoy their company in many ways and would come back home after swimming across the river. (7)

Couplet :

One day the woman in her joyful mood was coming by swimming across, when a sudden tidal wave (like the oceanic wave) of the river approached her. (8)

She tried her best but could not reach the other side as the river's stormy waves took her to some other side. (9)

Couplet :

The wife of this rich trader was called by the name Man Manjri and she developed great love for one man, called Bidhiamiani. (3)

Chopaiee :

Then the woman said to him, "O deaf, To-day come and give me sexual companionship but he did not have any relationship with her and he managed to meditate on Lord's Name (Ram Naam). (4)

Couplet :

Then that man was about to leave while repeating the Lord's Name and that woman saw him going. So she started shouting 'Thief Thief', being greatly enraged at heart. (5)

On hearing the words 'Thief, many people gathered there and he was immediately sent to the prison. (6)

Then that woman went to the Kotwal (Police Inspector) and cried for help and with money power (bribery) she arranged to get him killed. (7)

There was a king in the northern area and he was known .throughout the world) for his charming personality. The Raja was called by the name of Chhatar Ket and his wife was never satisfied by seeing his glance (she was very fond of him). (1)

She was called Chhatar Manjri and she was equally beautiful and known all over. The wife of Raja Chhatar Ket was famous for her beauty in all the fourteen regions (in the world). (2)

He was very fond of Chhatar Manjri. In fact, her features were even better than the Raja (she was more charming). She was trying her best to make the kingdom more prosperous (it should progress) (3)

The daughters, born to her, would die soon nor any son was bom to them. She was always afflicted by this thought in her mind. So she thought of a deceitful action in her mind. (4)

That woman was thinking to herself that without a son, how could Lord give them Salvation ? Even the Brahmins would not take offerings from her and the family members will also curse her. (5)

So she thought of having a son through some evil deed and then pronounce the child as that of the Raja. Once a son was bom to them, then who would bother to verify it ? (6)

The Raja called for a second queen, as her rival wife and announced marrying her. On hearing this the woman got into a panic and started wasting her wealth (squandering). (7)

Couplet :

Due to the fear of the co-wife, the queen started distributing (wasting) lot of money among the attendants. But the foolish woman did not realize that they were all fond of (liked) the rival wife only. (8)

Chopaiee :

People also liked the co-wife and they would praise her in the presence of the Raja. They would suggest that the Raja should marry her and get the first wife killed, so that they could continue enjoying good offerings (good life). (9)

One lady attendant was making her frightened of the co-wife and was looting her wealth on that pretext. She would not allow her to even see the money but would loot it before even reaching her. (10)

Then that attendant would meet the rival wife and would praise her saying that the Raja would marry her and she will enjoy lot of glory. (11)

Thus she would loot (grab) some money from her and then would take some money from the queen even. Thus she was terrifying both of them and was plundering lot of wealth from both. (12)

Couplet :

So she was making both afraid of the Raja and she was looting both of these fools (without any realization). (13)

Chopaiee :

She was throwing away lot of money being worried about the rival wife and for the sake of begetting a son, she was busy in evil deeds. She was showing lot of love for these (loving) fellows, but the foolish woman did not see through the secret. (14)

Couplet:

While doing love with these lovers, she would tell others that to set this bitch on right path she needed a son. So "O God! Pray excuse me for these sins!" (15)

Chopaiee :

The Raja was realizing the whole game in his mind but that foolish woman did not understand all this. The Raja would call many other women and would enjoy sexual relations with them in many ways. (16)

Chopaiee :

The person who enjoys sexual pleasure is truly great and thus wastes his wealth. So long one does not win over the whole world thus making it one's own, one should not love one's own spouse. (20)

Couplet :

"O Raja ! You are like the black-bee and consider the women like flowers only. Leaving aside the companionship of one's wife, why should not one enjoy the love of others?" (21)

She was talking to the Raja, like this and then would convey something else, thus leading the queens astray. If the Raja could escape from our bondage (of love) then only he would have companionship of others. (23)

Couplet :

The attendants of the Raja were thinking (day and night) all the time that the Raja was not giving them anything while the queen was wasting and dishing out money. (24)

Chopaiee :

One day the Raja called the queen and got some food and wine and he consumed lot of wine and the queen also took some wine. (25)

The Raja, after consuming wine, became unconscious and went to sleep in that unconscious state. On seeing the Raja (unconscious) asleep, the queen did not realize the secret of all this. (26)

Couplet :

The woman, thinking that the Raja was asleep, went to her paramour (considering the Raja asleep) though actually he was awake, the queen with a dubious character did not realize the secret of all this. (27)

Then the Raja thought to himself and due to some doubt did not shoot the arrow. He thought to himself and did not kill the wife along with her paramour. (30)

Couplet :

"If I kill them now, then the Whole news will spread throughout the town that the Raja had killed her for having sexual relations with another man." (31)

Chopaiee :

So the Raja did not shoot the arrow and came back home. Then he had sexual companionship with Hindaimati and lied down as if he were asleep. (32)

The woman, also came back frightened after having sexual relations with her lover. She went to sleep, being wrapped up in her bed and was pleased to see the Raja still asleep. (33)

She was filled with joy having found the Raja asleep, but the foolish woman did not realize the secret. She found the awakened husband as still asleep and felt that the Raja had not known her secret. (34)

Chopaiee :

The minister then said, "O Raja ! Listen to my words. I am going to relate a Charitar (deceitful action) of a man. There was a Raja in the southern lands. He was renowned in the world as of a very charming personality." (1)

Aril :

Many women would come to glance at his beautiful features and all of them were feeling overjoyed at seeing his beauty and were all sacrifice to him. They would address him with the words as darling or dear and were always showing great love for the Raja. (2)

Couplet :

There were two women staying with the Raja, who were a fountain of beauty. The Raja would enjoy sensuous pleasure with one of them, showing his greater love and attraction for her. (3)

One day both the wives called the Raja for playing the game of "hide and seek" and showed great love for him while playing. (4)

By closing the eyes of one woman he called the second woman and then enjoying sexual companionship with her, he made her get up saying, " I am enjoying sensuous pleasure with you with great love and do not have any companionship with her (the other woman) though I am greatly upset by the god of love (kamdev), thus bearing the agony on my body alone. (5)

Thus the Raja Rukam Ket, showing this deceitful action and having sexual relations with Asman Kala, made her get up. The second foolish queen did not realize the secret of this move and thought it to be a game of hide and seek only. (6)

After the sexual enjoyment they went to sleep and became unaware of their bodies. When the husband saw the herdsman sleeping, he killed him with his sword. (5)

Couplet :

After beheading the herdsman, the husband hid himself and sat there. When the warm blood touched her, the woman got up in a shock. (6)

Chopaiee :

When she saw her paramour headless, she became furious with rage at heart. She took out her sword and started roaming around in all directions so as to kill anyone who was sighted there. (7)

The dogar was hiding, so he was not caught by her. She was trying to locate the killer but could not lay her hands on him. She came back as usual by swimming across and then threw the friend's body to be washed away." (8)

She came back home and lied down in such a state if she had been bitten by a snake. Later on the dogar also came back after swimming across the river but the foolish woman did not grasp the secret. (9)

"O woman ! Do something for me and bring some butter for me from home." The woman replied, "I would not go as I am scared of darkness at this time." (11)

The dogar said, "In your negative reply, I feel very sad. The dogar said, "O lady ! Have you forgotten the day when you had gone swimming across the river and after throwing your paramour's body to be washed away, you had come home." (12)

When the dogar said these words, the woman got furious, finding that he had known her secret, so she decided to kill him right now and will tell the people that thieves had killed him. (13)

Couplet :

So she went into a dark room and took out a sword. She attacked the husband about fifty times. (14)

The dogar, seeing the sword's brightness hid himself underneath a buffalo and was not hurt at all thus he managed to save himself with this deceitful action. (15)

The woman swam across the river and washed away the body of her paramour and then wounded the husband on return without feeling ashamed a bit even. (16)(1)

Here the thirty-sixth episode of Minister & King's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (36-695)(Contd)

He had tied the rope strongly around the hut and then started shouting so as to be heard by all. (3)

Chopaiee :

He called all the people at home and showed them his wounds. Then he showed them his wife and he cried out. (4)

When the woman saw my wounds she felt greatly pained. She made me forget by taking me aside and later she tied a rope around her neck and killed herself by this no ose. (5)

Here the thirty-seventh episode of minister & king's dialogue regarding a woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (37-703)(Contd)

Chopaiee :

The minister then related another episode. There was a very young woman and she married a thief and another trickster (cheat) and kept both of them happy and satisfied. (1)

In the night the thief would go on his stealing spree while during daytime, the cheat would go for making money. Both the men would enjoy sensuous pleasure with the woman, but they did not know the secret behind it. (2)

The cheat would consider her as his wife while the thief thought her to be his wife. Both the fellows took her to be their wife but the fools did not know the secret. (3)

Chopaiee :

They started fighting (with fists) with each other and the cheat snatched away the kerchief from his hands The thief said that the handkerchief was designed by his wife and on hearing this the cheat became furious with rage. (6)

Both of them started abusing each other and caught hold of each other's hair, while gnawing their teeth. They were fighting with fists and even legs as if someone was striking at the gong. (7)

While fighting each other, both of them came to the woman and said with great fury. The cheat and thief were both saying, "Are you his wife or mine ?" (8)

Chopaiee :

"O woman ! I have heard your words. Now you watch my strength. Whosoever is found stronger than the other, may be considered your spouse." (11)

The cheat after saying this went away to the town and sat in one shop there. He saw all the gold coins in the shop (cash box) and told the merchant like this. (12)

Couplet :

He addressed the shopkeeper with great humility and said, "O Merchant, I want to strike a deal with you regarding these gold coins." (13)

Madan Rai, the cheat, thought to himself and said, "O Merchant ! I will give you money (in rupees) in exchange for all these gold coins." (14)

Chopaiee :

When the merchant heard these words, he took out all the gold coins to show his being wealthy. When the crook (cheat) glanced at these coins, he noted in his mind their year of manufacture. (15)

He put the coins in a bag and beat the shopkeeper mercilessly. The cheat then started shouting in the town, "I do not want to sell these gold coins." (16)

The cheat got ready straightaway on hearing these words and taking the shopkeeper went to the Kazi and said with great humility, "O Kazi ! Please do justice to us." (19)

Couplet

The trader also feeling great anguish by that time said and with tears in his eyes he told the Kazi to impart justice to them. (20)

The shopkeeper did not know the year (of manufacture) of coins, so he kept quiet and could not utter a word. He started crying aloud, weeping and complaining, "O God ! What have you done ?" (24)

Couplet :

The cheat said, "There were one hundred Akbari (age) coins and two hundred Jahangiri (age), while Shahjahani (age) there were four hundred gold coins. You may all check up thoroughly." (25)

Chopaiee :

When the gold coins were taken out and shown to the people they were exactly like that, as suggested by the cheat. So the Kazi snatched the bag from the merchant and gave them to the cheat. (26)

"The fame of Kazi spread around and the cheat told the whole town that the Kazi had imparted justice to us like Umar Khitab (Khalifa)." (27)

Chopaiee :

With the night fall, the thief started off (for his job) in the garb of a dog and went into the house of Shahjahan and saw a gossip monger there. (1)

The thief was called by the name of Adil shah and he came to the house of Shahjahan and came to the place of the woman Raj Mati, where the king of kings was asleep.(2)

Swaiyya :

The thief took out his sword and killed the gossip monger. Then he removed his turban along with the jewels and broke an egg on his trousers. The king then removed his trousers and took all the clothes in his hands. Then he picked up courage and had a talk with the woman. (3)

During the day the thief was having sexual relationship with the woman while the cheat would go out for making money through his tricks. During the night the thief would go out for stealing in various houses and the cheat would be in the company of the woman. (6)

Chopaiee :

They both got into a scuffle for the sake of a handkerchief. So the cheat brought seven hundred gold coins for the woman and now the turns of thief came. So now I would tell you his story. (7)

The thief had landed in the house of the majesty and he had killed the gossip monger. He managed to steal the turban with jewels and other clothes and was talking to the king. (8)

Couplet :

He had stolen jewels, other clothes along with turban and his trousers. He had saved the life of the king. "So now tell whom should that woman belong (as wife)." (9)

"I had reached there for stealing the jewels and clothes where no one else could reach. I had saved the life of the king, so whom should the woman belong ? (10)

She would always say no to whatever the husband would like to do and whatever was not to be done, she would do with obstinacy and would not care for her husband in the mind. (4)

The days of Saradh (of ancestral remembrance) approached, so he also heard about the phase of moon referring to his father's (death) and he said to his wife not to celebrate the Saradh and she said, "let us do it now." (5)

He made all the preparations for Saradh and the time to feed the Brahmins also had approached. The husband told the woman not to give any money in offering (alms). (6)

The wife said, "I will not delay any more and with the betel nuts I will give one rupee each to all the Brahmins. I shall not delay any more while giving offerings while in your mouth I will throw some excreta. (7)

Then she fed all the Brahmins with food and after giving them lot of money as offerings she sent them away. Then the Jat told his wife, "O dear ! Listen to the code of conduct by the shastras." (8)

The mother-in-law could not breathe freely out of fear, while the sister-in-law on hearing her shouts, went back and the neighbours had shifted to the jungle and all the people were completely upset and felt aggrieved. When the husband asked for water, she threw stones at him. "Was she a woman or a lioness in the house ?" (14)

Couplet :

When she reached in the mid-stream by holding the tail of the bull, then all the people cried out, "O fool ! Hold it tight." (15)

When she heard the cries (of people) with her ears, she let go the tail and she was washed away while abusing them and she reached the hell (she died). (16)

The husband was called Mirza khan while the wife was named Achhai Bibi and they were both living in Ghazipur. I would relate this story by improving upon it (by polishing it). (3)

Couplet :

"The slave then talked to the Pathan saying that this woman was supposed to be a witch, so why do you go near her ?" (4)

Aril :

The slave then said to the woman that "I have developed great love for you as such I am telling you this. When you see him (Pathan) lying down in comfort, then you watch his testacles." (5)

Chopaiee :

Then the slave told the master (Pathan), "O Master ! Listen to me. When this woman would see you asleep, then she will press your both the testacles." (6)

The Pathan kept this thing in mind but did not show it to the woman. When the husband slept along with the woman then he was reminded of the slave's word's. (7)

She enjoyed sensuous pleasure with the Raja Bir Ket and felt satisfied and overjoyed at heart. She embraced him closely to satisfy her passionate love and then had sexual relations in different styles. (4)

In the meantime, whil- having sexual relations with the Raja, her husband came there. She arranged to put the Raja in a big box and then talked to her husband saying, "O darling ! Listen to me." (5)

Couplet :

"My paramour and your thief is kept in this box. Open and see and then do as you like." (6)

Chopaiee :

"The Raja, on hearing this, became frightened and felt that the woman would get him killed. On opening the box he would catch hold of me and then kill me with a swo rd." (7)

The woman threw the key to the merchant (trader) and then requested him with folded hands, "Open the box and see for yourself my paramour so as to verify the truth of my statement." (8)

Chopaiee :

The woman after the sexual companionship returned home for buying the articles. She felt ashamed of herself (from the people) but she did not notice the ash at all. (5)

Couplet :

So she came back to her husband without buying anything when she opened the knot, then she saw the ash in it. (6)

Chopaiee :

She said, "You had given me one rupee for buying some articles. The rupee had fallen on the way and on seeing the people, I felt ashamed." (7)

Couplet :

Due to the shame I had filled up some ash in my cloth. You better search out the rupee from this ash and take it out. (8)

The foolish husband did not understand anything and started searching for the rupee in the ash. He did not find the rupee and kept quiet without knowing her secret. (9)

Couplet :

There lived a Kazi in Kashmir. He had a wife, who was expert in magic spells and witchcraft for controiling other people's actions. (1)

Chopaiee :

Her husband was called Adil Mohammad who was an expert in imparting justice and his wife was called Nooram Bibi, with whom many people had developed love affairs. (2)

She thought of having a sexual affair with one Jat (farmer) without caring for the Kazi even a bit When she was having a love affair with the Jat, the Kazi arrived there. She managed to tie the paramour in a bundle and placed it underneath the cot. (3)

Couplet :

After tying the Jat underneath the cot, she started reading Koran herself. With her bewitching eyes (by striking arrows of love) she enamoured the Kazi with her love. (4)

On hearing the news, Jahangir got ready for the hunting spree. He came to the jungle along with friends and female members. (3)

The women had worn red coloured clothes and were shining so brightly that they had enamoured the hearts of gods even, what to talk of men. (4)

With new clothes, with new youthfulness and charming beautiful women appearing like Rati, the beloved spouse of Kamdev (god of love) were moving around in the jungle. (5)

Some one was fair complexioned, while some others were dark coloured (black coloured). The women, clad in the form of Rati, kamdev's wife; were shouting there with their smiling faces and were all sacrifice to king Jahangir (enamoured by him). (6)

Chopaiee :

All the women got astride the elephants and all were having guns in their hands. They were talking and laughing around while bowing their heads to Jahangir. (7)

All the women had formed (pairs) groups of two and would not allow any deer to escape. Some women were riding on the chariots and some were riding on horses or elephants. (8)

Couplet :

Someone was holding a gun, someone was holding a sword, someone was having a dagger, while someone was having a stretched bow. (9)

Chopaiee :

At first the dogs were chasing the deer and then deer were caught by the leopards. Then they were hunted down by hawks or male hawks. The king Jahangir had immense love for the queen Noorjahan. (10)

Then Norjahan shot many blue bulls, deer and stags, with the gun and some were killed with striking arrows from the queen, thus the animals were killed. (11)

Couplet :

Many deer, on seeing the charm of the queen, had fallen down unconscious on ground without the strike of arrows even. (12)

Those struck by sharp swords, could be saved but those struck by the arrows of beautiful eyes, cannot be saved any how. (13)

Chopaiee

Some lady friends were racing the horses, thus reaching the deer and then wounding them; while some others had been struck by the arrows of love (eyes) and they would fall down lifeless. (14)

Thus the hunting spree went on, when suddenly a huge lion came up and his roar was heard by the king, with his ears and all the women got together and came there. (15)

At the sight of the tiger, the female elephant ran away and none including Noorjahan, could stay there. Then Jodhabai saw this situation and shot a gun at the tiger. (18)

Couplet :

With the striking of the bullet, the tiger was lying dead (killed) and the queen saluted Jahangir thrice. (19)

Chopaiee :

With this incident Jahangir was greatly pleased, as if she had saved his life that day. He thanked his wife by saluting her, saying that she had given him a second lease of life (saved his life). (20)

Aril :

When Jahangir heard these words with his ears, then he shook his head in great fury. It was better to avoid such a woman, else one may lose one's life even. (23)

Chopaiee :

On hearing such words of the woman, Jahangir got terrified in his mind and became dreadful of that woman. The person, who could kill a lion in no time, what is the value of man before her ?" (24)

Couplet :

The character of women is really strange, which none had understood so far. She does whatever she desires and whatever she likes, comes to pass. (25)

She saved her beloved and killed the lion with one strike of the gun. So she went away by deceiving him in no time and the situation changed immediately. (26)

Since then Jahangir became morose and gloomy and would avoid talking to that woman being afraid and gloomy. (27)(1)

She developed friendship with the trader's (Shah's) wife and made her as her foster sister. She would relate a new episode to her daily thus making her very happy and pleased. (6)

One day she said, "O trader's wife, "Listen ! I am going to tell you a story and lessen your pride just as your spouse is charming, consider my husband also equally beautiful. (7)

Couplet :

There was no difference in the beauty of (between) your spouse and mine. You better get up and see for yourself; whether he was your spouse or mine. (8)

Chopaiee :

I will bring my spouse in the evening and would make you glance at him. The money lender's wife could not see through the secret (of all this) and she was keen to see him. (9)

That woman advancing forward told the money lender, "O Shah ! Your wife is an ill-mannered one, I will show her true character to you and then make you my friend." (10)

You then come to my house, after you have seen your wife's true character. I will take you there and make you stand and watch and tell her that my friend had come. (11)

After making him stand there, then she went to the trader's wife and said, "My spouse had come and now you see and watch him without any hesitation or doubt in the mind." (13)

Chopaiee :

When the woman opened the window, then the woman kept her (friend's) words fully in the (ears) mind. The merchant saw all this and believed about his wife's turbid character. (14)

He said to himself, "That woman had told me rightly and then became quiet." So he stopped loving his wife and became friendly towards that woman. (15)

Couplet :

That woman had, through her deceitful action, completely won him over through her witchcraft (deceit) and deceived his wife also and made him her paramour by dissociating him from his wife (through deceit). (16)(1)

Someone was hit by her bayonet with full preparation and would not care for the strength of the warrior (would not consider any warrior worth while). All the gods astride their chariots were watching the battle and how the warriors were being beheaded in no time. (26)

The vultures were enjoying merrily, that they would be getting human flesh to eat that day. The evil-spirits with their blood-thirsty vessels were standing in readiness (for blood collection). (27)

From both sides, the marshal music was being played and the warriors from both sides were looking glamorous, with their weapons. In the sky the vultures and fairies were hovering around, while down below (on the ground) the warriors were engaged in severe battles. (28)

Swaiyya :

On the sight of the charming beauty of the princess, the princes were coming forward from all four sides with great eagerness. Many warriors on elephants, horses and chariots along with infantry men were advancing together. When the daughter of the Raja, Bachittar Devi took out her sword, then shedding all the formality of modesty (shyness) the Rajas were engrossed in the battlefield in such a manner, as if with the recitation of True Name (Ram Naam) the cluster of sins had, out of fear, fled away from the field. (29)

The warriors, from all four sides, furious with rage and with eagerness in mind, launched an attack. The powerful men had unsheathed their swords and with stretched bows were shooting arrows. The arrows were pouring from all the sides, like the rain drops and would pierce through the (protective cover) coats of mail, onto the other side, piercing through the warriors and the ground and the arrows shearing through water had reached the netherlands. (30)

Chopaiee :

In no time, the warriors were cut into pieces and many elephants had lost their ears even. The chariots were broken apart and the warriors were beaten badly. The ghosts and evil-spirits were dancing in frenzy. (31)

Somewhere Narad was playing on flute (lyre) while elsewhere Rudra was beating his small drum, while somewhere the evil spirits had bowls filled with blood and the ghosts or evil-spirits were making noises elsewhere (death scenes were to be seen all over). (32)

No one could really realize the secret of this wonderful battle, while Shiva was beating the small drum in his frenzy. Somewhere Kalika was making boisterous sounds elsewhere. It appeared as if the banner of the god of death was flying atop, (fluttering around). (33)

The huge-eyed Parbati was laughing merrily while ghosts, betals and goblins were dancing around. Somewhere Kali was uttering sounds of death-knell and one would feel frightened to hear these horrible sounds. (34)

Many headless warriors were roaming around, while many others were shouting, "Kill them, Kill them." (to kill the enemy). Many others, being furious with rage, were trotting their horses and many had died fighting (had gone to valley of death while fighting). (35)

Many mighty warriors, being cut into pieces, had fallen down on the ground. While many others had been vanquished by the furious princess with rage. Those, who could not lay their hands on the princess, had died by their own daggers, without being killed by her. (36)

By now many Rajas from Merta and Amer with spears in hands had arrived to gain the hand of the princess. (37)

The Raja of Merta was called by the name of Bikat Singh while the name of Amer's Raja was Amit Singh., They had gained victories in many battles and had never shown their backs in the battlefield, (never retreated). (38)

Chopaiee :

Both these kings, collecting huge armies, also started for the battlefield, with the playing of marshal music (with war songs). When the princess saw them with her own eyes then she killed them both along with their troops. (39)

When the princess had killed both these Rajas, many other mighty princes (Rajas) stood aghast. They thought to themselves (in their mind) that this princess was not going to retreat and they will all lose their lives (by fighting). (40)

The prince of the Boondi state Ranat Kat then advanced and the Raja Madutkat Singh also became furious with rage, who was called the Raja of Ujjain whom none could ill afford to gain victory against him (it was essential to defeat him for being victorious). (41)

When the princess saw them coming, then she took up the weapons in her hands. The princess then with great fury and with great strength, made full use of those weapons and in no time killed them both along with their armies. (42)

Then the hill chieftains of Ganga tract Yamna mountainous region and princes of Saraswati range gathered together with great stubbornness and started moving ahead. The princes of Satluj and Beas ranges then established their positions (in the battlefield) and all of them became furious with rage. (43)

Couplet :

Param Singh was a perfect man and Karam Singh was knowledgeable (wise) like the gods. Dharam Singh was very obstinate while Amit was the source of battle (battle monger). (44)

Amar Singh and Achal Singh became furious with rage in their hearts, so all these five hilly chiefs (Rajas) got together and faced the princess jointly. (45)

Five hilly chieftains (Rajas) then started for taking part in the battle and brought many goats along with them. They threw a continuous shower of stones at her with great wrathfulness and were shouting 'Kill her, Kill her' (to kill her). (46)

The beating of drums and kettle drums could be heard from both the sides and the warriors armed with weapons were roaring loudly. They fought with great fury and being cut into pieces, were wedding the fairies (were being killed). (47)

Five (Raja) princes were shooting arrows and were advancing forward moving in a circle. Then Bachittar Devi (the princess) made full use of her weapons and in no time, killed all of them. (48)

Bachittar Devi had killed all the five Rajas and killed many other warriors by pinpointing them (by picking them up). Then seven more princes (Rajas) moved forward, who were great fighters and were very powerful. (49)

The Rajas of Kashi and Mugadh also became furious with rage, while the Rajas of Ang and Bang (Bengal Rajas) also stuck to their postions. Apart from them, the Raja of Kalinga also moved forward, while the Raja of Trigat land also arrived there. (50)

The Raja of Kam Roop along with his army also arrived there. These warriors waged a bloody war on seeing which the sun and moon were shocked and Indra was also trembling. (51)

At places cut off limbs were lying and at places fingers were fluttering. These warriors were fighting with obstinacy while the jackals and vultures were taking away the flesh. (52)

The princess had killed the warriors with great fury. Whomsoever she wanted to kill, was killed by racing her chariot towards him. Lot of (countless) infantry men were killed. By wielding various weapons she killed many warriors on chariots or elephants. (53)

Chopaiee :

The princess then saw the seven Rajas advancing (towards her). She shot many arrows getting furious with rage. All the charioteers alongwith their chariots were destroyed (killed) and all were sent to the next world alongwith their armies. (54)

Immediately after that many Rajas started moving and forming a great strength (crowd like) faced the princess. Being furious with rage from all the ten directions, they advanced and started shouting 'Kill her' 'Kill her'. (55)

Couplet

Bir ket, the charioteer was a magestic (grand) warrior, and Chitar ket intelligent like the gods. Chhatar ket was a brave Kashatriya. while Biket ket was very strong. (mascular). (56)

The warriors, supporting carefully their weapons, started marching forward alongwith their army and came near the princess. Bachitar Daiee, taking up her weapons in hand killed innumerable warriors (of the enemy). (59)

The princess cut off the head of Birket, and cut off the trunk of Chitar ket. Than she killed Chhater ket kashatriya, and despatched Biked ket to the heavens. (60)

Couplet

Being greatly enraged she killed both Inder ket and Upinder Dhij and then dispatched. Geedh ket Darav to the heaven. (61)

The army of the seven rajas, getting furious with rage, launched a fierce attack. The princess then killed all of them and sent them to heavens. (62)

Sumat Ket was a mighty warrior and taking Amar Singh with him and Brahm Ket with a huge army launched an attack as if Ganga was in floods. (63)

Then Tal Ket and Khat-bakar Dhuj were also great warriors. They fell upon the princess like the god of death. (64)

Then Kak Dhuj, getting furious with rage and unsheathing his sword also came there. He had killed lion, shila, sardul, having a face like an arrow including Saal and Tamal and the black cobra as well. Many jackals demons, heads arms, chariots, snakes and huge mountains were being hurled while The enemy was making merry and advanced from all the four sides. (66)

Couplet :

The demon Mayavi with the use of might (prowess) said, "I will conquer you in this swamwar of war and then take you with me to my house (place)." (67)

Swaiyya :

The princess, taking up her weapons came face to face (with the enemy) at the same time. The poet Ram has said that the princess, (whomsoever she desired shot an arrow by stretching the bow and killed him. The arrows pierced through the body of demons and warriors in such a manner that it is beyond description. It appeared as if in the Ashoka garden of Indra, the flowers and fruit had grown. (68)

Many leaders of the millions of soldiers jumped into the fray, getting furious with rage. The princess had caught hold of many warriors with the help of a bamboo and then shook them up with great strength. Somewhere one could see fallen decorations and crowns of the Rajas or at places the elephants were desperately shaking off heads, having fallen down on the ground and at places charioteers were thrown off from the chariots with broken chariots while elsewhere horses were neighing without having the riders with them. The warriors who got killed having tried to flee, were not given any respect here nor received any honour in the next world, while those warriors who had fought valiantly facing squarely and with bravery were sent to heavens with beating of drums. (71)

Couplet :

The women who had given up their lives by immolating themselves (sati rites) had snatched away their spouses from the fairies by struggling against them. (72)

Chopaiee :

Thus the princess had killed many warriors along with Sumat Singh etc. Then the Raja Samar Sain was killed and Taalket was also sent to the valley of death. (73)

Then she killed Brahm Ket and Kartikya Dhuj was also slain. In the meantime Karoor Ket demon had arrived there and waged a fierce battle. (74)

Then the demon Kol Ket also came and Kaman Ket was very furious in his mind. Then Ulook Ket along with his army also started along with Katisit Ket in a great fury. (75)

The princess then killed Kalket along with Katisit Ket; then she killed Kachhap Ket with the mace and sent Lukket to the valley of death. (76)

Whosoever was struck by the princess with the mace, his head would be crushed with one strike only and many a warrior were sent to the valley of death with the shooting of arrows. (77)

Couplet :

In that battle one could not think of any warrior sticking to his guns. Whosoever ventured to face her was sent to the valley of death. (78)

Swaiyya :

Many enemies of the gods . (demons) with unsheathed swords attacked her and with many Weapons like petti, loh, hathi and parsai with enraged atmosphere (they came). But that princess challenged all these enemies of the gods and taking up her arms, she killed them all, whose number is not possible to indicate. They had fallen on the ground as if drunken people having played Basant (phag) had fallen there. (79)

Couplet :

She had killed many horses, elephants and horses attached to chariots along with many warriors. The princess having won the Swamwar (ceremony) was left alone in the battlefield and there was no Raja left alive. (80)

The horses were in a winning spree and many victory sounds were raised. Then many arrows were shot and not a single horse was left alive. (81)

Chopaiee :

When the demons had been also killed (sent to valley of death) then the turn of Subhat Singh came. Then the princess told him, "Either fight with me or accepting your defeat marry me." (82)

When Subhat Singh heard these words, then he got furious with rage in his mind. "Am I afraid of fighting against a woman and due to that fear complex should I marry her ?" (83)

Many warriors made the drunken elephants to trumpet or some others placing saddles on horses, made them neigh. At some places the warriors were getting armed with weapons or protective covers while somewhere the evil-spirits with blood filled bowls were laughing around." (84)

Swaiyya :

Then Subhat Singh with grand weapons and accompanied with a huge army attacked her. In his army were great warriors, obstinate with coats of mail, armed with swords or with axes, who could win against anyone. Someone would try to oppose her, while someone else would avoid the princess while some other would get wounded and fall down fighting. It appeared as if some carefree persons, having consumed hemp and with ash smeared on body were resting (sleeping) there. (85)

Chopaiee :

The battle was fierce that not even a single warrior could escape death. Ten thousand intoxicated elephants had been killed, along with twenty thousand beautiful horses as well. (86)

Three hundred thousand infantry troops along with twenty- three lakh (2-3 million) chariots had been killed or destroyed. Twelve lakh charioteers or countless great (expert) charioteers were also killed. (87)

Couplet :

Only Subhat Singh was left alive without a single companion. All the elephants, horses, chariots and horses yoked to chariots had fallen down being cut into pieces. (88)

That woman (princess) waged such a horrible war with her spouse that even the sun and moon had come to the battlefield to watch this battle. Brahma had also come riding a swan and the five-faceted Shiva also came there to watch. (89)

The woman had shot delicate arrows to her beloved as she did not want to take his life. She was afraid lest the spouse would get killed and she might have to immolate herself (burn herself in fire). (90)

She fought with her spouse for about twelve hours (four pehars) and both had showered lot of arrows on each other. By that time the sun had set and the moon was visible in the east. (91)

Couplet :

The battle was fought by challenging one another and not even a single warrior was left alive. Both of them got tired of fighting, so they lied down in the battlefield. (92)

Chopaiee :

They had been wounded badly and were tired of fighting for long. Both were lying unconscious in the battlefield, but no one would leave the grip of the sword from the hand. (93)

Couplet :

Chopaiee :

Both of them got up again and fought for eight pehars (full day). The protective covering was cut into pieces and (fallen down) scattered around, as both fought vigorously. Then the sun was set and night had fallen. (96)

The woman had killed the four horses with the arrows and both the wheels of the chariot were cut into pieces and the (banner) flag of the spouse was also cut and thrown on the ground, while the charioteer was killed. (97)

Then she shot an arrow at Subhat Singh which made him unconscious and he was lying down on the ground. When she saw him unconscious, she assumed the form of his wife. (98)

She got down from her chariot and brought water for him and coming nearer to his ears, she said, "O Lord ! Listen. I am your wife, who was dearer to you than even your life." (99)

Couplet :

By sprinkling water (on his face) he gained consciousness and his body was full of wounds (wounded badly). In fact, he had lost the distinction of good or bad or friend and foe. (100)

Chopaiee :

When he heard the words of the woman, then the wounded Subhat Singh said these words in a thankful mood (reeling around). He thanked her many times and praised her. He then asked her, "What for had you come here ?" (101)

When I saw you alive, then I thought (to myself) that the Lord Almighty had bestowed a new lease of life to you. So now do not have any doubts or hesitation and get me married (marry me). (104)

Whatever the woman said, the spouse agreed and the person in agony did not (realize) have any hesitations or doubts. A fire was lit there by rubbing two stones (strongly) and got married to her (the beloved) (by going around the fire four times). (105)

Then Bachittar Devi said, "O my Master! You listen to me. The god of love (Kamdev) had tormented me for long and without your company, it had caused me lot of agony." (106)

"O Lord ! You get up and start the love affair with me and pardon me for all my faults and misdeeds. Then the Raja had a sexual relationship with her and all the (pain) suffering of the princess was alleviated. (107)

She saw a charming man and the god of love (kamdev) struck its arrows on her heart (she developed passionate love for him) and seeing his beauty got involved with his love and sent for him through her maid (attendant). (2)

She enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him, embracing him in all forms (styles). After the passage of midnight they went to sleep, having forgotten all their sufferings (pining) of the mind. (3)

After getting up from sleep, they had another sexual affair. When one pehar (three hours) of night was yet left, she went and awakened her maid and sent her paramour along with her. (4)

She used to call her paramour daily and would send him back before the dawn. She was enjoying his company by embracing him passionately. No one else knew this secret. (5)

One day she called her paramour and after enjoying sensuous pleasure with him, she made him to get up, but the maid went to sleep and did not accompany him. (6)

The paramour went away without the maid and came to the place where there was a post of guards. His end (death) had approached near, but that fool did not realize it. (7)

The maid was not in company, who could have answered their queries, thus protecting him. The guards, taking him (shouting) for a thief, chased him and caught hold of him with the hand. (9)

Chopaiee :

The news of this incident reached the queen and the maid said, "O unfortunate woman (liable for death penalty) ! Why are you relaxing here, while your friend had been caught by the guards thinking him to be a thief and all have known your secret now ?" (10)

The queen felt desperate by clasping her hands and pulling out her knot of hair, felt helpless. The day one's lover is gone (separated) there could be no greater suffering than this separation in the world. (11)

Couplet :

Due to the loss of public honour (modesty) she could not save him. Forgetting the love of the friend, he was killed and thrown in the Satluj river. (12)

Chopaiee :

The queen spread the news that this man had come to kill (murder) the Raja. Ask him who had sent him for the purpose ? So by killing him instantly he was thrown in the river (Satluj). No one else could get to know this secret. (13)(1)

Here the fifty-third episode of Minister's & King's dialogue regarding the woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (53-1004)(Contd)

There was a Chamba Jat in our village, who was mentioned by all as belonging to the Jat caste. There was another person, named Kandhal staying with his wife, but the Jat would not say anything to (the wife) Bal Mati (about it). (3)

Couplet :

The ugly face of the Jat had only one eye and he would tell Bal Mati with a laugh, that he was her Master. (4)

Chopaiee :

By night fall Kandhal would come to that place and would have sexual affair with Bal Mati by holding her both legs. When her husband (Jat) would make any movement of feet, the woman would place her hand on the eye. (5)

By keeping her hand (on his eye) the fool would consider it night only and would continue sleeping without saying anything. One day he saw the wife's paramour going away, then the one-eyed Jat got furious with rage. (6)

Chopaiee :

There was a great Raja in the north, who was very famous among the Suraj dynasty. He had a charming wife, named Roop Mati, who was very beautiful as if she had been carved out of moon. (1)

That woman was involved with a low-caste man, as such she was disparaged (infamous) by the people (world) when the Raja heard about this detail, he got furious with rage and shook his head. (2)

The Raja tried to probe into it and he saw her talking to someone. From that day onwards the Raja stopped showing any love for her and developed love for other women. (3)

That king developed love for other women, thus forgetting any love or care for her. He would come to her house always, but would not indulge in any sexual relationship with her, with love or affection. (4)

Couplet :

Previously the Raja would spend (four pehars) the night with her enjoying sensuous pleasure thus having satisfaction. But once he got annoyed with her, he would not have any sexual affair with her. (5)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja would go for his prayers (pooja) then the paramour would drop in to meet her. Both of them would get together and talk to each other so intimately without caring for the Raja. (6)

The Raja's door was opposite to his house, so one day the Raja was closely leaning to the wall and listening to their talk. When the paramour learnt about it, he could not stay any longer and fled away. (7)

Couplet :

Seeing the Raja's wrathfulness that low-caste fellow ran away instantly. The woman tried to dissuade him from running away, but that shameless creature did not relent. (8)

Chopaiee :

That woman tried many ways to regain the love and affection of the Raja and gave him lot of money. Inspite of her efforts in many ways, she could not be successful and the spouse had discarded her from his heart. (9)

When the Raja would think of her base (mean) character in his mind, he would not have any sexual relations due to his doubts. This whole secret was known to the woman only but she would not mention it to her spouse due to her modesty. (10)

Some maid was offered gold coins and someone was requested as a friend and someone was shown love and affection and with someone he had even sexual relationship.(12)

Couplet

Someone was offered beautiful robes, while someone was given money. By such means all the maids were now under the control of the Raja. (13)

Chopaiee :

Thus the Raja had all the women (maids) under his influence (control). All the women were now in his loving care and the woman who could not divulge any secret, she was not allowed to come near the Raja. (14)

Couplet :

All the maids were now under the Raja's control and he developed love for all of them. Whatever the queen (Rani) would do was conveyed to the Raja (by these maids).(15)

Whatever was told by the Rani to these maids , they would agree to obey, but immediately would convey that information to the Raja. (16)

One day the Raja thought to hiı ıself and planned to play a deceptive action (witchcraft). He said that he should snatch away all her wealth (money) and then give her back to spend, as requested (by her). (17)

There was one maid who was called the Rani's special attendant, but would disclose all the secrets to the Raja. The queen always thought her to be faithful to her, but the foolish woman did not realize the secret. (18)

The Rani had allowed his son even to address this maid as a mother and would waste lot of money on her. Whatever the Rani would tell her, she would convey it to the Raja immediately (make him understand). (19)

Once the Raja told the maid that he will show his annoyance for her before the Rani (by saying some uncouth words) and would remain aloof from her. "By calling you as her agent, I will beat you and would totally forget about you (in my mind), but that woman (queen) would not understand it (its secret)." (20)

Couplet :

The Raja told the maid to behave as her own attendant only but whatever she would say, must be disclosed to him (Raja). (21)

Then this maid posed to be the queen's maid and would keep her happy and amused but whatever secret she would say was told by her to the king. (22)

On reading that letter, the foolish woman got puffed up in her heart and immediately took out some money and gave to her (maid), but the fool did not realize the secret behind it. (32)

Chopaiee :

That foolish woman took out some money and gave to her and did not make any effort to ascertain the true facts. The Raja grabbed the money to make use of his requirements. While the woman thought that her friend had received this money. (33)

Couplet :

The woman (Rani) thought that the money had reached her lover and the fool did not realize that the Raja had snatched away this money for his personal use only.(34)

Chopaiee :

Many years had passed like this and she had conquered many of her opponents (enemies). Then she saw a beautiful person and developed love for him. (3)

The queen got involved in his love so much, that the unfortunate love does not leave one (from its involvement). With the nightfall she called that man and then both had sexual companionship to their satisfaction. (4)

By the passage of time and having his friendship for sometime (the queen) Indra Mati became pregnant. She told this as some stomach disease and no one could gauge this secret. (5)

After the passage of nine months, she gave birth to a son and it appeared that he was kamdev (god of love) himself having been born. The child was kept with a woman and her house was loaded with wealth (she was given lot of money). (6)

She told her not to divulge this secret to anyone and she came back herself. No one knew what she had told her or what she had done. (7)

Couplet :

That woman did not have money, even a lamp was not burning there (she was very poor) and the son was entrusted to her through the Lord' s Grace. (8)

Chopaiee :

The queen had her court (of noblemen) one day and the woman was also invited along with others. When the queen saw that woman's child, then taking him from her, she brought him up as her own son. (9)

Couplet

In the city of Kashmir there was a Raja, called Biraj Sain and even Indra used to tremble before his prowess and might (he was very powerful). (1)

His wife was called Chitar Devi, who was average in beauty or brain. Her behaviour to others was very crude and by heart also she was uncouth (she was ugly in appearance and in intelligence). (2)

She called the kitchen in-charge (cook) and told him to (give) poison to the Raja. "I will give you lot of promotion and you take lot of money form me right now."

(3)

When the cook did not agree to her, she played a trick. She invited the king along with all the ministers. (4)

Chopaiee :

She invited the Raja along with his ministers and got cooked many nice dishes (preparations) she got poison mixed in these dishes, thus killed the Raja. (5)

Chopaiee :

There was a trader in the town of Nakodar. All people used to say he had two wives; one was called Ladam koer while the second one was called Suhagam dei. Many women used to take lessons from them. (1)

The trader went to a foreign land and both of them were suffering from the pangs of his separation. He spent lot of time in the foreign countries and then after making huge profits he returned home. (2)

The trader had come home after many days, so both the wives cooked for him special dishes. One of them thought that he would visit her while the second one thought that he would dine at her place. (3)

On the way, the trader stopped at a village and on the other side a thief had struck at both the wives. He saw one wife was fully awake, so he did not visit her house and went to the other woman's house. (4)

That woman thought that her husband had come and leaving aside her house he had gone to the second wife. Both of them started off so as to stop the spouse from going to the other's house and then divert him to her own house. (5)

Chopaiee :

After sometime had elapsed, Rang Rai was reminded of the Raja's words. She saw a person without beard or moustache and developed love for him. (5)

She made him dress like a woman and then said to the Raja, "My sister has come from my place, so let us both (you and me) go and praise her." (6)

Couplet :

"Let us go and meet her midway thus honouring her immensely Make her sit next to me and then give away lot of money in alms (offerings). " (7)

The Raja then advanced forward and welcomed her and made her sit next to his wife. He gave away (in offerings) lot of money, thus honouring her and there was a crowd of women gathered there. (8)

When the Raja sat there, both the women embraced him and with increased love started crying and weeping loudly. (9)

"This is my sister and you are my spouse. Who else could be dearer to me?" The woman had played a deceitful action during the daytime and while watching all this. Now it was appropriate to keep quiet on seeing all this. (11)

Chopaiee :

There was a trader in Gwalior, who possessed lot of money, but would not spend anything. A thief came to his house, then he told his wife. (1)

The trader told the wife, "The Lord had not given us a son. What will be the use of our money in abundance? Without a son my family tree is feeling ashamed." (2)

Couplet :

O my wife! Listen. The Lord had not given us a son. So even if God would send a thief in our house, we will treat him as our son and maintain him as such. (3)

Chopaiee :

Even if it were a thief, we will keep him as our son and would not say anything to him. When the trader would die along with his wife, then what will anyone do with our money ? (4)

When the thief heard these words, he became puffed up and could not maintain himself in his dress (self) and said, "Let me go and call myself as the son of the trader (merchant) and on his death I shall gain all his wealth. (5)

That woman was known to be very beautiful and there was none else to compare with her. The Raja used to keep her with great love and care and would not address her with uncouth language. (2)

They were known as 'Rajas of Bangas' and were enjoying all sorts of worldly pleasures. The queen saw another charming person and had passionate love for him. (3)

The queen developed love for him and gave him lot of money from herself. She told the paramour to behave in a particular manner and she enacted a deceitful action (witchcraft). (4)

Couplet :

(She told him), "You stand at the gate of the fort one morning as destitute without having any clothes on your person." (5)

Chopaiee :

When the Raja stepped into her house, she gave him poison and killed the Raja. Then the woman announced with great humility that the Raja had died, leaving her alone. (6)

Chopaiee :

There was a Rajput robber living in his palace and was known by the name of Mittar Singh. He would not allow anyone to pass through the southern route and would loot people and kill them (beat them up) (1)

If there were a coward he would loot him and if someone tried to oppose then he would kill him. Thus he would rob everyone and would give lot of money to his wife. (2)

One day he went for a robbery but he was faced with some powerful men. He fell down while racing his horse and he was caught by those warriors. (3)

Couplet :

Those warriors tied him up and brought to the town for killing him. His wife somehow came to know about it and she reached there. (4)

She picked up some cowdung cakes and placed them on the horse without caring for anyone. She moved very quickly lest her husband may be killed in the meanwhile, so she managed to reach near them with this pretext. (5)

Couplet :

She took hold of her husband's arm and with a jerk managed to put him on the horse back and taking his sword (of the robber) killed them. (6)

Chopaiee :

Whosoever approached them was killed by her with one arrow only. She was not afraid of anyone in her mind and came back to the town along with her husband.(7)

The king of the land of Sham (Syria) had a son. By virtue of his appearance and temper he was a replica of Indra (god) more or less. (3)

The same warrior, Sumat Sain then went on a hunting expedition. He reached a forest along with dogs and hawks. (4)

He had told his entourage (assembly) that if a deer came in front of anyone, then he alone would kill him (deer) and none else should try (to kill). (5)

Chopaiee :

Whosoever was confronted with a deer should chase him by racing his horse. Either he should kill the deer or he should kill himself by falling down on the ground but should not show his face by coming back home (without the kill). (6)

It so happened as per Lord's will that a deer came in front of the prince only. Then Sumat Singh raced his horse and started chasing the deer. (7)

Couplet :

While chasing the deer the prince came to the town of Roop Nagar. The minister's daughter saw him and got enamoured by his charm, (became unconscious). (8)

Chopaiee :

She was chewing a betel nut and after eating it, the woman made a small pack of the juice (betel nut) and threw it onto the prince. Sumat Sain turned back and saw her and by giving a glance made her comfortable (removed her restlessness or pain). (9)

The woman called the prince to a temple (house) and had a (sexual) love affair with him to her satisfaction. The prince told her that he had come there to kill the deer. Both then enjoyed sensuous pleasure. (10)

The four pehars (twelve hours) of the night were spent in their sensuous pleasure, which both of them enjoyed. They enjoyed their company and had sexual relations of all types. (11)

Couplet

As mentioned in Kok Shastra they had love affairs of various types and enjoyed their company. Numerous styles of sexual companionship were enjoyed by them which cannot be enumerated. (12)

At the dawn of day, the night had come to an end and the guards caught hold of them. They were going to take them for killing them as there was no other way to escape punishment. (13)

Chopaiee :

The king's son was tied by the guards and all the people of town came to see him. When they passed near the Raja's palace then the Raj a also climbed up and saw him. (14)

Roshan Rai then sent for her Turkish horse and assumed the form of a male (man). She wore ornaments worth one and a quarter lakh and wore a black coloured dress. (15)

Couplet :

On seeing the beauty of Roshan Rai, the Raja became unconscious. "Who is this man and which Raja's son's call him in ?" (he ordered). (16)

When she arrived near the Raja, he asked, "Which Raja's son arc you and why have you come to this land? Why are you riding a brown coloured horse and why are you wearing black robes ?" (18)

Chhapai Chhand :

She said, "Neither I am any Raja's son nor a Raja of any country. I am the daughter of your minister and have come to watch this fun (scene). I have always heard such parables from shastras and smritis with my ears. To find out the truth about such episodes my mind was keen to know. Once I see with my own eyes, then only I shall speak something. O Raja! Without seeing the facts with my own eyes, I cannot reveal any secret." (19)

Here the sixty-sixth episode of King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well. (66-1172)(Contd)

Chopaiee

The women of the Southern areas are very knowledgeable and even Yogis become householders by going there. There was a mighty Raja Chattar Singh, who was famous in Grander bans (moon's Dynasty). (1)

He had plenty of horses, elephants, chariots and infantry men and there was no other Raja on par with him. He had a charming wife named Roop Kala. It seemed as if she was the daughter of Rati's spouse kamdev (god of love). (2)

More or less the Raja was under her control and whatever she would say was repeated by him as well. Roop Mati was not afraid of him. She would do according to her own wish (as desired by her). (3)

Chopaiee :

The queen (Rani) kept this thing in mind, though she did not say anything that time (with her tongue). After the elapse of one or two months she said to the king (Raja). (5)

"O Raja ! Listen. I had gone to worship Shiva and there I heard a heavenly voice. One thing it said that whosoever will come and sit here, will find that everyone was busy in (one's sexual affair) carrying out sexual companionship." (6)

Couplet :

"O dear Raja ! Whatever Shiva had told me, I am telling you exactly like that, keep this thing to yourself and do not leak out this secret to anyone else. (7)

After telling the Raja like this, few days had passed and then she called all the paramours of various women from their houses. (8)

Then all of them including herself and her maids were in the process of having sexual relationship with their lovers and then sent a message to the Raja through a maid to come there. (9)

Chopaiee :

"She said to the Raja that whatever I had told you, I have seen myself in your house. Leaving your weapons come and watch yourself and do not have any wrathfulness in mind". (10)

Couplet :

On hearing these words, the Raja came there immediately where the Women were busy in their love-affairs. On being reminded of Shiva's words and seeing all this, he got bewildered and shocked. (11)

"Whatever heavenly (Shiva's) words, as told by my wife, was seen happening in my house itself. So Roop Mati had not told me any lies (undtruth). Now I have followed the truth of her words." (12)

Couplet:

All those women then sent away their paramours after having sensuous pleasure. The Rani also came to the Raja and sat down beside him and said. (13)

"O Raja! Whatever I had told you, You have seen yourself. Do not have any wrath in mind, as Shiva's words were correct." (14)

None out of the Kinar, demi-gods, snakes, Shiva's musicians, men, Munis, gods and demons have been able to decipher the mind of the woman so far or their secret of deceitful intentions. (15)(1)

A rich man of Gujrat had a son, who was doing his business with full cleverness and proved his father's worthy son. (1)

He had great love (friendship) with a barber's son. Both had similar appearance and no one could recognize them. (2)

Chopaiee :

The merchant's son went to his in-laws house and took the barber's son along with him. When they reached a thick forest then the barber's son shared some views with his friend. (3)

The barber's son said, "O merchant's son ! Listen to me. I aull accept you as my friend only if you agree to my suggestion right now. " (4)

The barber's son disguised himself as his friend and made the shah's son walk with the bundle. He was feeling happy at heart but the rich man's son did not know the secret. (7)

Couplet :

By walking they finally reached the in-laws town but he did not get down to make the rich man's son ride the horse. (8)

The Shah's son was requesting him but he did not let him ride the horse. All came to meet him, thinking him as the merchant"s son. (9)

Chopaiee :

The Shah's son was mistaken by all as the barber's son and the Barber's son as rich man's son. The shah's son was feeling ashamed of himself at heart, but he did not say anything to his friend. (10)

Couplet :

The barber's son was then received by the Shah's son's wife and told the shah's son to sit at the gate. (11)

Couplet :

The shah's son then took the goats out (for grazing) in the jungle and was suffering hardship there and due to shyness became very thin like a rebek. (13)

Chopaiee :

When he became very weak the barber's son said, "Now give him a cot and do according to what I say." (14)

Couplet :

The shah's son, taking the cot felt greatly pained in mind and going to the dense jungle started wailing. (15)

The great Shiva and Parbati then passed by the shah's son. On seeing him suffering, they felt pity on him. (16)

Couplet :

So he said, "Except me all others in this town get stuck." Then all the men and women, wherever they were got stuck to the Earth. (20)

All those asleep, awake, walking or sitting got stuck in no time. There was lot of hue and cry in the towii and no one was in his senses. (21)

The husband was caught while tying his dhoti (loin cloth) or the wife was caught while cooking. The newly married woman was caught while sleeping with her husband and no one was having any sense (became senseless). (22)

Then the Rani told him, "Q dear thief! Listen to my words. I will do whatever you ask me to do or else I will kill myself with a dagger." (6)

Then the thief said, " I have only one desire that at time of death, I should kiss you and then give up my life (by hanging)." (7)

When the Rani gave him a kiss, then his blood spurted up, then the thief s face got close to the Rani's face and he bit her nose (and sliced if off). (8)

Couplet :

When the thief kissed her, he gave up his life as well. The Rani's smitten nose was still in his mouth and Rani became desperate (did not know what to do). (9)

Chopaiee :

Having got her nose sliced off, the Rani came back home and told the Raja a story that she had offered her nose to Shiva for his food. She was not liked by Shiva. (10)

Then Shiva had told her that her nose was stuck up in the mouth of the thief and he should get it removed immediately and then get it fixed up on her face. (11)

Couplet :

Then the Raja, thinking it to be Shiva's order, did accordingly and getting the nose removed from the thief s mouth, got it fixed up on her face. (12)(1)

Chopaiee :

There was a goldsmith in Lahore and all used to call him a great thief. This news was heard by the queen as well. She called him at her place for moulding making her ornaments. (1)

Couplet :

Then Shah's wife was called by the name Chittar Prabha while the goldsmith was called Jaimal. He came to this woman's house for moulding her ornaments. (2)

Chopaiee :

Whenever the goldsmith wanted to steal away a part of the ornament, the woman would come to know of his clever move. So she did not allow him to try any of his tricks, for stealing her (wealth) gold. (3)

Couplet :

That mean fellow tried his best (to steal) but could not s ucceed. Then he started wailing, taking his son's name. (4)

Chopaiee:

I have lost my son, who was bom and then died, called Bandan. The Lord had taken away all my comforts and pleasures. Saying this he struck his head on the ground and then wailed for his various afflictions of mind in many ways. (5)

The Lord had taken away (killed) his only son. On being reminded of him, the woman also started crying. Then only the goldsmith got his chance. He stole some gold with the blow pipe. (6)

He threw the hot rod (of gold) on the ground and thus the gold got mixed with dust. He started saying that he had no son, who could take a handful of dust even after his death. (7)

When the woman heard the words of the goldsmith, then she picked up handfuls of dust and spread it. "O goldsmith ! Listen. This dust is already in your head and you had no son of your own." (8)

Couplet

The sons only carry on the lineage and the sons only fight in the battles. Thus under the pretext of throwing up the dust, the gold bar was hidden by him. (9)

Chopaiee :

Then the woman remarked like this that, "my spouse had gone to some foreign land, so I am drawing these lines to check up whether he will come back or not." (10)

Couplet :

Thus she drew some lines in such a manner that the gold bar was taken out and saying that there was no need to wail there, she took up the gold bar and kept it on her head. (11)

The thief (goldsmith) however, kept quiet and he could not utter a word. The woman however took away the gold bar lying there and the gold (which was less due to this bar) was also made good. (12)

Thus the gold bar stolen by the goldsmith was stolen back by the woman and an equal amount of gold was also made good (from the goldsmith). The goldsmith felt pained having given back the gold from the bundle, (of goldsmith). (13)

The deceitful woman always remains happy on this Earth. The woman cannot be deceived rather she deceives the kings, but she cannot be duped by anyone. (14)

Many of our followers (Sikhs) also reached there. We needed lot of offerings (of robes of honour) to give them. (4)

So we called and sent some of our people to the towns of Paonta and Boorian, but they could not get even a single turban there and they came back. (5)

We could not get even one turban on payment. Then we thought of a plan that if we see a person urinating here then we should take away (snatch) his turban. (6)

When the footmen (infantry men) heard of this they acted accordingly by getting together. Any self-willed person who came to the holy place was deprived of his turban. (7)

Couplet :

Thus we managed to remove about eight hundred turbans. They were given to me and I got them washed and cleaned. (8)

"O queen ! Listen. Send for him and enjoy sensuous pleasure with him. The son which you will beget from him, will have no parallel on Earth." (8)

When the queen heard these words, she called the shah at home. She had various types of sexual affairs with him and could not forget him from her heart. (11)

Couplet :

By that time the Raja also came back home. Being distressed, the queen arranged to send him on top of the loft. (12)

The shah sent for two flag posts about two hundred yards long (of bamboos). By tying long banners with them, he tied his arms with them. (13)

He got about 100 kilogram (1 maund) of cotton and wrapped his body with it and tying a bag of leather full of air and watching the wind direction, he jumped with great wrathfulness. (14)

Choupaaiee :

With the blowing of wind slowly he managed to scrape downwards. Both the flags then made the shah fly off and threw him in a deep river. (15)

That fellow with the help of cotton wrappings managed to swim across the river and with the help of bamboo flags was saved. Being wrapped up with cotton, he did not get hurt also. Thus the lucky fellow left by saving his life. (16)

The Raja on hearing the Rani's words, sent many men immediately, but none of the men could reach the melon, which was being washed away. (9)

Chopaiee :

Then the Rani said these words, "O Master ! We are very fortunate. If someone had drowned and died, while trying to catch hold the melon, then it would have been a great sin on myself and a Misfortune." (10)

Couplet :

The Rani had made one person drown himself for catching hold of that man. "She was thinking in case someone got drowned, then it would be great dishonour for me, which would be lasting and various people will say the same thing." (11)

Chopaiee :

She had herself thrown the watermelon to be flown in water and herself made the Raja furious and herself had sent men to chase it. No one had even known the secret of a woman's deceitful action (witchcraft). (12)(1)

Here the seventy seventh episode of the King's & Minister's dialogue regarding woman's characterization from Charitar Pakhyan is completed. All is well.

(77-1322)(Contd)

There was an ill-mannered (bad character) wife in a Carpenter's house in Ujjain. I will relate the story of her deceitful action which she enacted by slightly refining it. (The minister said) (1)

After saying this he went away to another land. But in actual fact he hid himself under the cot. Then the carpenter's wife called her paramour and enjoyed sensuous pleasure with him. (3)

That woman had a love-affair with that man and had recognized her husband hid underneath the cot. She was much distressed and all her body (limbs) was out of sorts (furious). (4)

Then the woman told her paramour, "O unfortunate Man ! What are you doing with me ? My true Master was not at home, under whose benign care I enjoy my life." (5)

Couplet :

"I am always having my eyes filled with tears and wear dirty clothes (in his separation). Due to my loving master's sojourn to foreign lands, I do not go even to the gate of my house." (6)

"Even the betel nut or cigarette (bidi) seems to me like an arrow and the food like poison. Since my loving husband had gone to foreign lands and in his absence life is worthless for me. (7)

That carpenter, on hearing these kind words became overjoyed. He lifted the cot of the wife, along with his paramour and started jumping around (dancing). (8)

Couplet :

There was a trader in Benaras called Bishan Dutt. He had lot of wealth and a wife named Bisan Mati. (1)

Chopaiee :

The trader went away on his business trip and in his absence the wife was pestered by her passionate desires. She could not resist her passions and called a man for having sexual relations. (2)

Due to this cohabitation, she became pregnant and with lot of effort, she could not get rid of pregnancy. After nine months, she gave birth to a son. That day the trader also came back home. (3)

The trader became furious and said, "O woman ! You have committed some dubious behaviour (in my absence) as the son cannot be born without having a sexual relationship. All the old and young people know about it." (4)

The woman replied, "O shah ! I will tell you something and thus dispose off your doubts." (5)

Swaiyya :

The youthful exuberance of Radha was glamorous and beyond description. She went to Krishna's house on some pretext with great glamour. Sri Krishna had many people from Brij along with some other relations, sitting with him. On seeing Radha approaching there, Sri Krishna said something making an excuse. He slapped his chest by raising his hands high while laughing loudly, while Radha felt abashed (shy) on seeing on all the four sides. Radha with a sign of her eyes said, "O Krishna ! "and Krishna with the sign of his eye brows said, "Please, go away from here." (6)

Couplet :

She talked to Krishna with the sign of her eyes and he also replied with the sign of his eyebrows. Without anybody knowing the secret of this move, Krishna had bid her farewell (had made her depart). (7)

Kabit :

'Somewhere He transforms Himself into a horse, an elephant, a bird's form, or takes the form of a flower or fruit. At places He is in the form of a fire and bums everything and somewhere He takes the form of wind and at times He is in the form of a leopard who catches hold of a deer and at places it flows in the form of water. Sometimes He moves around in the forest (like Ram) without any rich robes and then kills Ravana (causes death of Ravana) as is mentioned in the Vedas. Sometimes He is in the form of men and at times He takes the form of women, while the foolish people have not realized His secret, or even a bit of it. (18)

Chopaiee :

"Who kills anyone ? Who gets killed by someone else ? The people are led astray into such convictions which are baseless and without any truth or are totally false. O Raja ! Bear this in mind that neither He dies nor He kills anyone (causes death)."

(19)

Couplet :

"O Raja ! Without the recitation of True Name, neither any child nor any old person could exist. All the rich or poor people could not exist as such (without True Name)." (20)

Chopaiee :

If any person understands the real meaning of True Name (Sat Naam) in his heart, then death cannot come anyway near him (he does not face spiritual death) But all those bereft of Lord's True Name, all of them including forests, mountains, towns, palaces (buildings), will all face extinction (face dilapidation).(21)

Then the Rani did accordingly and called the Yogi at home. By digging out the Earth and throwing him inside the pit by adding some saltburied him therein. (29)

Chopaiee :

The Rani went and told the Raja that his Yogi had thrown some mud on his body. (That he had gone into meditation while being alive). At the time of death he had said these words, which I have understood fully and have made these words as my guide (have kept them in my mind). (30)

He had said, "Tell the Raja my words that he should continue to be a householder (he should remain at home) and he should not pester or give any suffering to the queens and should practice both kingship and Yoga both. (He should continue as a king along with being a Yogi)." (31)

Then he said another tiling to me, "In case the Raja does not follow what I say, then tell him that his penance would all go to waste (his penance will be defeated)." (32)

"What he had said further I will tell you later, thus alleviating all your doubts and hesitation. Now you listen to my words so that your kingdom could be saved." (33)

Couplet :

The Yogi's followers were very happy and satisfied. They were weak minded but now they had picked up courage. They were thinking that the Yogi-Guru will convert the Raja into a Yogi and he will accompany them for begging from door to door. (36)

Couplet :

They were thinking in their minds that their Guru-Yogi would bring the Raja in the guise of a Yogi (dressed as Yogi) at any time, but the fools did not realize (know) what had happened to him. (37)

The young sons, youthful wife and maids were all crying, saying "O Raja ! Why are you deserting us ? Do you not feel any mercy for them ?" (38)
